In the plate-glass windows of a handsome building opposite the bank, shining red apples and decorative sheaves of wheat speak more eloquently of one's native land than the sign "Canadian Government Emigration Offices." Col. Obed Smith, the superintendent of emigration, tells me that a great deal of interest is being shown in the new scheme for nominated free passages.

Who Can Vote at Coming Elections

The basis of the voters' lists is the municipal voters 'list. This used to have on it only those paying taxes, but the law now is, in view of the requirements of the election voters' list law for the Province and Dominion that a part III containing the names of all British subjects 21 years of age, whether they pay taxes or not, shall be issued by the municipality, and this has been done. It is not likely that there will be many names to put on.

MOTHERS' DAY IN PETERBORO

Fittingly Observed in the Majority of Churches—Beautiful Floral Decorations Featured Services

The anniversary of Mother's Day was observed in the majority of the city churches yesterday. Although some of the pastors and congregations made no special effort to join in the celebration of a Sunday which has been set apart in late years as a special commemoration of departed parents, most of the churches were decorated especially for the occasion, and church members attended divine service wearing a flower in memory of living or deceased parents. The sermons were especially framed, in some instances, to encourage reverence and respect for parents, and musical services included choir numbers and solos along the same line. "Home, Sweet Home" was heard in many of the city churches yesterday.

At St. John's.

At St. John's, the A.Y.P.A. attended in a body at the evening service, to hear a sermon by Rev. Dr. Blagrave on the duty of young people towards their parents. Flowers were given at this church in memory of Mrs. Agnes Hamilton, Mrs. Wesley and Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Green.

At St. Andrew's Church.

At St. Andrew's Church, at the morning service, children of the Sunday School, trained by Mrs. J. A. McKone, sang very pleasingly as a choir, giving a selection suitable to the occasion. Flowers in memory of the late Mrs. G. W. Green were among those decorating the pulpit and choir.

At Knox Church.

At Knox Church also, children took part in an embellishment with flowers of a large banner bearing the word "Mother." Rev. A. Thomson, of Monkton Church, near Stratford, a son of Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, preached on the "mother" theme.

At St. James' Church.

At St. James' Methodist Church, a unique interest was given to the evening sermon on the theme, "A Boy's Best Friend," by Rev. J. F. Chapman, by the inclusion at intervals during the address of brief readings by six children, who gave appropriate selections enlarging on the subject of the discourse.

At Mark Street Methodist Church, flowers in memory of Mrs. Crowe were sent from Paris, Ontario, by her daughter, Mrs. Champion, and at Trinity Church, an unaccompanied number by the choir, "Home, Sweet Home," was among the excellent music rendered. Flowers from Trinity were sent last evening to sick members of the congregation.

At Murray Street.

At Murray Street Baptist Church, both addresses by Rev. Dr. Rose were suitable to the day, and children's day was observed by the children in the Sunday School during the afternoon.

Record attendance in the Sunday School also marked the afternoon services at Park Street Baptist Church, where the morning sermon was addressed particularly to the mothers of the congregation, the evening address being devoted to the fathers.

ORATORY GIVES WAY TO MUSIC ARTISTS HEARD

AN UNUSUAL TREAT

The members of the Peterborough Rotary Club had a rare treat at their weekly luncheon at the Empress to-day when Miss Agnes Adie, Madame Florence Fenton-Box, Mr. Albert Downing and Mr. Frank Oldfield, the soloists who are to take part in the St. Paul's choir concert this evening, presented a most enjoyable musical programme which took the place of the usual address.

There was very little business to be transacted to-day and the whole time was given over to the visiting artists, whose numbers will long be remembered by the Rotarians.

Miss Adie, a soprano of limpid purity and great clearness of enunciation, was heard to most splendid advantage in the rippling number, "Il Boccio." In response to the applause she sang with much feeling the Florabella waltz song, "Give Me All."

Madame Fenton-Box's delightfully rounded contralto found an admirable vehicle in the pretty number, "Homing," which was sung with expression and delicate shading. Her encore, "The Answer," was equally enjoyable.

Mr. Albert Downing, one of Canada's best known tenors, contributed a most artistic rendition of the love song, "Sunrise and You," and as an encore electrified the gathering with his singing of that great number "Sound An Alarm," from "Judas Maccabeus," an offering that demonstrated Mr. Downing's ability as a vocalist."

The ever popular favourite, Mr. Frank Oldfield, displayed his sonorous baritone in the number, "Invictus," sung with dramatic power, that made every word and every note effective and as an encore sang that rollicking song of the broad highway, "The Ragged Vagabond," as only he can sing the number.

Mrs. Oldfield and Mr. Leslie Unitt, the accompanists, added much to the success of the programme by their masterly work at the piano.

Kiwanian Walter Stocker, who was a guest to-day, was called upon to express the thanks of the gathering to the artists and the vote of thanks was passed in the usual Rotarian manner, while Rotarian Bruce Marshall presented the ladies with a box of chocolates.

At next week's meeting of the Rotary Club Frank Littlefield, of Toronto, will give an address on "Business Relations."

RED ORGANIZATIONS IN LONDON OBJECT TO THE ULTIMATUM TO RUSSIA

Clergyman Led Procession and Several Speakers Denounced the British Government.

REPLY ON THE WAY.

LONDON, May 14.— (Canadian Press.)— Labor organizations yesterday held a meeting in Hyde Park to protest against the British ultimatum to Russia. The meeting was of a similar character to those which have become well known since the war.

Numerous groups, headed by bands marched from the East End escorted by police. Ribbons fluttered from their banners and a majority of the workers displayed red decorations on their coats. The Poplar delegation was headed by a bare-headed Church of England clergyman, who wore his clerical robes, with red rosette pinned on his breast and smoked a large pipe. The clergyman led in the singing of Socialist songs as the procession plodded along the Strand, which, in week days, is the busiest street in London.

The British Government was heartily denounced by speakers from several platforms in the park. Many women marched in the procession and joined in the cheering, while a few silk-hatted strollers from the fashionable section looked on from the outskirts of the crowds.

Meanwhile Leonid Krassin, Bolshevist Commissar of Foreign Trade and Commerce, was reported to be flying from Moscow to London, making a journey of three stages, with stops at Konigsberg and Berlin. The Russian note in reply to the British ultimatum, which is to be te legraphed to London, will consist, it is reported, of 8,000 words. In official circles, it was declared yesterday that this wordage evidently would mean argument, and that argument was what Lord Curzon ,the British Foreign Secretary, had declared the British Government would not indulge in.

It also stated that the Soviet Government could not send a better representative to London than Krassin if it desires to patch up the trouble existing between Great Britain and Russia. Notwithstanding the fact that Krassin recently has been in disfavour with the Soviet and reports of his resignation have been afloat, he is considered to have been a good agent for the Russians here, having stood well with officialdom and business men, largely due to the belief that he is not sympathetic with the political policies of the Soviet. The Russian Trade Delegation has a large staff in London with two handsome office buildings, and the members of the Mission are anxious to remain here.

Chinese Bandits Will Free Prisoners

SHANGHAI, May 14. — (Canadian Press.) — The release of all foreigners held by bandits in the Shantung hills is momentarily expected, according to a message received at 12:20 o'clock this morning by Max Friedman at Tsaochwang from his brother Leon Friedman, one of the captives .Friedman's message said that the relief expedition was only about ten miles from the place where the captives were being held.

STORMS IN FRANCE DO GREAT DAMAGE

One Boy Killed As Result of Flood — Many Trees Blown Down and Crops Ruined.

PARIS, May 14. — (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters.)—An old French saying which predicts wintry weather for mid-May, presided over by the Saints Servais, Mamert and Pancras, the "Icy Saints" as they are called, sustained its reputation during the last few days. Severe storms are reported from all over the country. Even Paris suffered. The Eiffel tower wireless station was out of action for twenty-four hours owing to one of the aerials being struck by lightning.

At Saint Denis, two boys, while cycling along a flooded street, received a violent electric shock and one fell senseless. Would-be rescuers were unable to reach him owing to the strength of the electric current. Finally firemen drew the boy from the water but he was already dead. The explanation is that the insulator of the post supporting the electric tramway wire was broken and the post, which stood in the water, carried the full force of the current to the unfortunate cyclist.

Normany and Brittany were devastated by a cyclone which made the country around Rennes and Domfront like part of the former battle-front. On one farm 150 apple trees were up-rooted, wheat was blown down and roofs were blown off. The damage caused at Domfront is estimated at more than a million francs. Fifty thousand trees were uprooted in the forest of Andaines. The hamlet of Longuenne no longer exists. Not a house remains standing. The inhabitants of the country side flocked into the towns like war refugees.

Stormy weather prevails along the coast and Honfleur, Havre, Dieppe and Cherbourg have suffered severe damage.

QUIZ CORNER

MONTCALM

Q.—Who was Montcalm.

A.—On May 11, 1756, the Marquis de Montcalm arrived at Quebec. He was the last, as Champlain was the first, of the great Frenchmen, nobles in nature as well as rank, who came to serve Canada. For three years he skillfully defended the French colony against the attacking English. Then he was defeated, not so much by Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, as by the misgovernment and profiteering of the other French officials in Canada. He was born Feb. 29, 1712, and died Sept. 13, 1769.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG May 14.— Mr. L. D. Benedict, who formerly conducted a dairying business and who resides near Cobourg, received good prices for his herd of pure bred and grade Holstein cattle at his recent sale. The average price for the 19 head was $90 each. One pure-bred heifer brought $190, and the second highest price paid was $155. Compared with prices realized at some previous sales the deduction is that it pays to breed the best. Ex-Mayor W. J. Maher was auctioneer and handled the sale very satisfactorily. There have been a large number of sales and considerable change in the ownership and tenancy of farms in Nothumberland county the past fall and spring.

A White Blanket.

Although there was more rain than snow in the immediate vicinity of Cobourg, the ground Friday morning was white with snow, and further back in the township there was considerably more of the beautiful. The mercury went to from four to six below freezing. Garden stuff and fruit is not, however, far enough advanced for the frost to do much damage. Some of the local weather prophets predict a cold summer and others go so far as to predict that we will have no summer at all, but frost all the year round, as is stated to have taken place in Canada in 1816. Hay the following spring, it is recorded, sold for $40 a ton, and other produce accordingly. Hay was brought into the country from Ireland to save the starving cattle. Moreover it is recorded of that year that the early spring was very promising. Snow, however, fell in June and from that time on the earth was never quite free of its wintry blanket, and scarcely anything by way of a crop was harvested. Flour sold, before another harvest was gathered, for $17 a barrel, and potatoes for a penny a pound. However, it is scarcely to be expected that Canada is to have a repetition of the 'summerless' year. The late Walter Riddell, father of Mr. Justice Riddell, Toronto, and the Hamilton township historian, says of the year 1816: "The year of 1812-15 was followed by several hard seasons, especially the year 1816, which was very cold and when there is said to have been frost in every month of the year. No corn ripened. Fodder and provisions were scarce and dear. In many respects it was a very hard year and greatly retarded the settlement of Upper Canada.".

Died in England.

Mrs. Meeson has received a letter from Sheffield, England, giving particulars of the death of her son's wife there. The deceased lady was in Cobourg from 1910 to 1913, returning then to the old country. She had been suffering from throat trouble, and in order to alleviate the distress which she felt from this, by treatment, put her hand to her mouth, when her wedding ring slipped off and lodged in her throat. She was taken to the Royal Infirmary, but died the following morning. Besides her husband she leaves four young children, two of whom were born in Cobourg. The family have the sympathy of friends and acquaintances here.

Impersonated Detective.

A man named Thomas Perkins, and said to be from New Liskeard, was brought to the counties jail here from Fort Hope, where he appeared in court and was remanded. It appears that a young man who was boarding at a Cavan street residence in Fort Hope, left there to work on the farm of Mr. Cecil Bebee, Hope township, leaving $5.00 unpaid on his board bill. The man who kept the boarding house, accompanied by a friend went to the farmer's home, it is alleged, where the latter, it is said, represented himself as a government detective on a salary of $10 per day, but agreed to accept $10 in full settlement of the claim for board and also for expenses. Mr. Bebee suspected it was a frame-up, and after an investigation had been made, laid charges against the two men. The proprietor of the boarding house is charged with obtaining money under false pretences and the other man is charged with falsely representing himself to be a police officer. The would-be detective was placed under arrest by Constable Boyd, and was remanded. The owner of the boarding house has been summoned to appear in court. Thus, what was looked upon as a huge joke, may prove to be a rather serious affair.

Cobourg Merchant Bereaved.

The funeral took place at Kingston of Lawrence, son of Mr. F. R. Burns, of the Burns' Shoe Store, which was recently established here. The young boy, who was in his 9th year, had an operation for appendicitis about two weeks ago. Complications developed, which resulted in his death on Sunday.

Social and Personal.

Mrs. E. H. Neave, who recently purchased the Col. Darcy Kay residence on King Street East, formerly owned by the late Hon. Senator Kerr, is in town this week.

Mrs. J. A. Janney, who spent the past week here, has returned to Philadelphia.

Messrs. Westington Bros. have moved to Cobourg from their farm on the Front Road, West, and are occupying their home on James Street.

The Ontario Reformer, Oshawa, states that Mrs. A. M. Irwin has been confined to Oshawa General Hospital because of a serious operation, but is improving. Friends in the district are glad to know that she is better.

Whitby Presbytery met and sustained the call given by Oshawa Presbyterian congregation to Rev. F. J. Maxwell, of Pembroke.

Mrs. T. E. Weller, Toronto, spent a few days in town visiting Mrs. Henry Delaney and other friends.

Mis Hattie Payne has left to spend a week or two at the home of her brother, Mr George Payne, Campbellford

Mr. and Mrs. Williamson and family, who have resided here for a couple of years ,are going back to Toronto shortly, where they will take up residence.

Death of Nicholas Broderick.

The death of Nicholas Broderick at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, removes a G.T.R. employee who was well known throughout this district, as he had been employed as a passenger brakeman on the route between Toronto and Belleville for the past thirty-five years.

Interred at Baltimore.

The funeral took place at Baltimore, of David Henry Woods, who passed away in his 69th year, after an illness of two months, with stomach trouble. The members of Baltimore L.O.L. attended in a body and six of their members were the pall-bearers. The services were conducted by Rev. C. C. Washington, B.A., and interment was in the Methodist Cemetery at Baltimore.

Many years ago the parents of the deceased came from Ireland, and settled near Baltimore Of their eight children, David Henry Woods is the fourth to pass away.

Surviving him are his brother Thomas, residing at Owossa, Mich., and three sisters, Mrs. James Gassmore, Chicago, Mrs. Charles Cole, New Jersey, and Mrs. John McMann, of Baltimore.

Mr. Woods was a waggon-maker by trade, and well and favourably known in the district. Recently he had been engaged in the lumber business

CAVANVILLE YOUTH SEVERELY BURNED

CAVANVILLE, May 14. — As a result of using heated tongs to loosen a nut on a gasoline tank on Saturday, causing the fumes to explode, Clifford Elliott, aged 19, was removed to Millbrook Hospital suffering from severe burns to his hands and face, and Oakley Carley was blown against a wall, rendering him unconscious.

The tank, which was of 40 to 50 gallon capacity, had been brought to Cobbley's blacksmith shop by its owner, Mr. A. Tinney, for repairs.

Believing the tank to be dry, Clifford Elliott, an employee in the shop, attempted to remove the nut with a pair of heated tongs. The fumes in the tank exploded, causing severe burns to his hands and face, and setting fire to his clothing.

Oakley Carley, son of the station agent, was waiting while Mr. Cobbley finished some basket ball rings, and the explosion threw him against a wall, rendering him unconscious. He was removed to Miss Annie Tinney's home, where Dr. H. A. Turner of Millbrook and Dr. Hamilton of Bethany were summoned.

On regaining consciousness, Carley returned home.

It was necessary to remove Clifford Elliott to Dr. Turner's Hospital at Millbrook for treatment, but late reports indicate that after a short stay there he was able to return home.

RUSSIANS WILL AVOID A BREAK WITH ENGLAND

RED ARMY READY.

MOSCOW, May 14. — Canadian Press. — While thousands of demonstrators marched through the streets on Saturday hanging effigies of Lord Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, and crying "Down with War," Tchitcherin and Trotzky, the Soviet leaders, speaking at a great mass meeting of the Moscow Soviet, declared that Russia's reply to the British ultimatum, would be an effort to avoid a break in the relations, if possible.

"We offer England a conference," said M. Tchitcherin, urging Russia to act in such a manner as to not yield to provocation, so that if a break comes the responsibility will not be Russia's.

"We shall not utter a word to hamper negotiations," said Minister Trotzky, "and will try by all means to keep peace But if war comes the Red Army is ready."

Tchitcherin, dressed in the uniform of a member of the Red Army, and wearing a red decoration, was the chief speaker at the meeting held in a theatre.

The theatre was crowed to the doors while in the streets thousands listened to speakers from motor trucks and balconies, all of whom made reference to what they termed the war threat against Russia in the British note; in the assassination of Vorovsky at Lausanne, and in other recent international developments.

Referring to Vorovsky, M. Tchitcherin said: "This is a symptom of the general European situation. The direct responsibility rests with the Swiss government which took no preventive measures, while the moral responsibility is on England, France and Italy, who originally invited the Russian delegation to Lausanne."

Regarding the British note, which he characterized as insolent, Tchitcherin said: "We are getting telegrams that British warships are already in the White Sea; perhaps by now they have opened hostilities against our ships.

GERMAN PROPOSALS A DISAPPOINTMENT TO BRITISH GOVERNMENT

Another Arrest in Wall St. Bomb Case

NEW YORK, May 14.— (Canadian Press.)—Noah Lerner was arrested Saturday night on information that he had boasted while living in the Kuzbas Colony in Siberia, that he was the man "who drove the little red wagon that exploded in Wall Street, September 16, 1920, when forty people were killed. He was arraigned before Magistrate Frothingham yesterday and held without bail. His hearing in the homicide court was set for Thursday.

Presbyterian Leader Passed Away Yesterday.

HALIFAX, May 14. — Canadian Press. — Rev. John McMillan, one of the leading clergymen of the Presbyterian church in the Maritime Provinces, died at the Victoria General Hospital, here, yesterday morning. He underwent an operation on Tuesday. Dr. McMillan was in his 81st year.

Dr. McMillan was at one time chairman of the Board of Trustees of Pine Mill Presbyterian College, Halifax, and for more than forty years one of the Board of Governors of Dalhousie University. He was also a member of the trustees of the Halifax Ladies' College. For eighteen years Dr. McMillan was convenor of the home mission board of the Eastern section of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and in 1890 was Moderator of the Maritime Synod. He was for many years clerk of the Halifax Presbytery.

Dr. McMillan was born at Scotch Hill, Pictou County, in 1842. He graduated with honours from Queen's College, Kingston, in 1862.

British Reply Made Public —Germany Must Have Foreseen Unfavorable Impression.

GERMANY'S OFFER.

LONDON, May 14.—(Canadian Press).—The text of the British Government's note to Germany in reply to Germany's recent reparations offer was made public yesterday. It is signed by Lord Curzon, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and says:

"His Majesty's Government have given careful attention to the memorandum of Your Excellency, communicated to me, May 2, in which the German Government put forward proposals for a settlement of reparations.

"This action on their part is well known to have been a sequel to the suggestion I made in debate in the British Parliament, April 20, and His Majesty's Government therefore have special interest in the response returned to that appeal.

"I cannot conceal from Your Excellency that the proposals of your Government come as a great disappointment, and that the unfavorable impression they made on His Majesty's Government, as well as on their allies, is one which, in my opinion, the German Government might and ought to have foreseen and therefore guarded against.

"The proposals are far from corresponding either in form or in substance, to what His Majesty's Government might reasonably have expected would be made in answer to the advice I on more than one occasion ventured to convey to the German Government through Your Excellency, and to the more direct indication to them in the speech referred to.

"The main grounds for this legitimate disappointment are the following:

"First—The German Government offer in total payment of their acknowledged debt a sum which, fall-

Every Dollar Comes Back

With Substantial Dividends

A Young Man's Investment

A satisfactory medical examination secures him a Capital Return Policy—combining Savings, Insurance, and Investment.

His policy means good health and future success, which improves his standing in the eyes of a certain "important person."

He finds his savings of great assistance in buying a home.—

And as time goes on he is enabled to enjoy many of the good things of life.

Have you ever heard of an absolutely safe investment, purchased by instalments, which does not require the payments to be completed if you become disabled, but, instead, pays you a monthly income as long as you live?

—which cancels all further payments in event of death and pays immediately the full amount you had set out to save?

—or, at the end of 20 years, absolutely guarantees to return to you every dollar you have deposited in annual premiums, with substantial dividends?

The Capital Return Policy

is a new departure in life insurance policies which the Canada Life introduced to the public. It has carried out the above program for a great number of policyholders who wisely took advantage of it.

This Policy Gives You---

1. Immediate Life Insurance protection for your home.

2. Cash values, available in emergencies, which, with the substantial dividends added at stated intervals, make your policy a valuable business asset.

3. At the end of 20 years you can draw out all you have paid in, along with dividends which have been compounding at interest,—

Or, you can take a Special Cash Guarantee, along with the accumulated dividends, and continue the policy (fully paid for) earning dividends as long as you live,—

Or, this Special Cash Guarantee may be applied to increase the amount of your policy—for example, a $5,000 policy would be raised to more than $7,500.

And in addition---

Suppose some day you should become totally and permanently disabled through accident or illness. Immediately all further deposits would cease, and you would receive $50.00 a month as long as you live—and the $5,000 would be paid in full at your death. (This feature is added for a small extra payment yearly, which is not returnable with the regular deposits.)

THE REASON FOR THE $9 RATE.

The resolution of protest passed by workers in the building trades in Toronto complaining about the freight rate of $9 per ton for Alberta coal and to be sent to Sir Henry Thornto is wrongly directed.

It might, with more reason, have been despatched to the various organizations of railway workers.

The main reason that the Canadian National Railways have to ask $9 a ton in freight rates is because a very large proportion of every dollar earned by the railways goes to paying the employees.

Were the railway workers' unions to be satisfied with a wage scale more in line with what is paid in other occupations it is more than probable that Sir Henry Thornton could quote a freight rate for the transportation of Alberta coal that would make the fueling of Ontario with the Western product a commercial possibility.

The Toronto workers who want cheaper coal have their muskets levelled at the wrong target when they blame the management of Canadian railways for what they consider an exorbitant rate.

Coal cannot be carried over the Government roads at less than cost, and no one should know better than the men who passed the resolution of protest that the greatest factor in that cost is the high wage scale which the railways have to meet.

THE TARIFF CHANGES.

Probably the best description of Hon. Mr. Fielding's tariff changes is that given by the Minister of Finance himself when he said:

"Our tariff proposals are not low enough to satisfy our Progressive friends, and not high enough to satisfy the official Opposition."

In other words, Mr. Fielding has followed a middle of the road policy that while not pleasing the high protectionists or the free traders, will probably be cheerfully accepted by the majority of Canadians.

The customs change that will have the greatest effect upon the consumer is the reduction of a half cent per pound on the duty on refined sugar and of 40 cents per hundred on raw sugar, a concession to the housewife that will save the families of Canada at least $2,500,000 a year.

In view of the present prices of sugar, the alteration in the duty is particularly opportune.

The reduction in the preferential tariff of 10 per cent. of the amount of duty computed under such tariff when goods are conveyed without transhipment into a Canadian port is expected to have a very beneficial effect upon Canadian ports and to bring increased business to Canadian railways. Halifax and St. John should considerably benefit by this change as winter importations which have hitherto been made through New York may be diverted to the Canadian ports.

Mr. Fielding's alterations are not sweeping, but they encourage imports into Canada's harbour, they relieve the consumer to some extent, and they are not of a nature to hamper Canadian industry.

THE BALANCE SHEET.

The figures presented by Hon. Mr. Fielding in his Budget speech show that Canada has not yet shaken off the extravagant habits of the end of the war years.

The present Federal Government, like its predecessors, and like Provincial Governments throughout the Dominion, has so far failed to learn the lesson of strict economy, of eliminating the unessentials, of paring down to the bone.

The simple fact is that every year we are getting deeper in the slough of debt.

In the past year Mr. Fielding tells us Canada added nearly fifty million dollars to her national debt.

Compared with the financial accomplishments of Great Britain, compared with the showing of the United States, not usually noted for Governmental economy, that record should give Canadians something to think about.

Last year Great Britain was able to show a surplus of a little over five hundred million dollars, and in four years the Motherland has succeeded in reducing its national debt by over a billion dollars. Already tax reductions have been effected and careful financing promises to speedily relieve the people of Great Britain of a considerable portion of the burden of taxation.

The United States last year had a credit balance in spite of very large expenditures of $125,000,000.

Against these exploits in financing Canada in 1922-23 has to admit an addition to the national debt of almost fifty million dollars, and to derive what comfort there is in the fact that the deficit last year was smaller than the year before.

And Mr. Fielding frankly admits that for the present fiscal year there will be another deficit, and another increase in Canada's debt.

Where lies the remedy?

Not in finding new methods of raising revenue, but in chopping off expenditures, in cutting off sums that are voted for enterprises not absolutely needed, in sitting on the lid of the Treasury.

THE WAY IS OPEN.

Mr. Robert Forke's plea for the development of closer trade relations with the United States was answered by the Budget speech—at least as completely as such a plea could be answered by a Canadian Minister.

Mr. Fielding is leaving the way open.

The Fordney tariff is an effective barrier against the entrance of Canadian products into the United States. It is hurting the Canadian producer, but that cannot be helped, for Uncle Sam's right to make any tariff arrangement that suits him is not any more to be questioned than is the privilege of the Canadian Parliament to do precisely the same thing.

Canada's Finance Minister, recognizing the benefit of greater trade with the United States, looks to the future and makes two proposals that may pave the way to the desired goal.

He intends first to include a clause in the Canadian customs tariff which will authorize any Canadian Minister to enter into negotiations with any authorized representative of the United States with a view to arriving at a commercial agreement between the two countries.

Further, Mr. Fielding proposes that if the President of the United States, taking advantage of the Tariff Act of 1922, which authorizes him to act without waiting for Congress, should reduce by 50 per cent. the duties on cattle, wheat, flour, oats, barley, potatoes, onions, turnips, hay and fish, the Canadian Government will be authorized to make reasonable reductions on such articles coming from the United States into Canada.

The Finance Minister has gone as far as he can go at present.

The next move will have to be made by the United States.

THE "HAREBELL" AND THE HARE.

It looks as if the gunboat "Harebell" would succeed in sinking the foe which suspicious bystanders have thought she was sent out to engage. That foe, in the wicked minds of the aforesaid suspicious bystanders, is not a Russian "pirate" at all, but the British Labor Party.

If the Labor Party were guided by the brains which it is presumed to possess in its little exotic group of "intellectuals," it would see that this is a particularly bad time for it to bleed and die for its Bolshevist friends. The Bolshevists have just murdered a Roman Catholic priest, and murdered him in that most odious fashion—under the forms of law. One concrete atrocity of this sort stirs universal indignation far more effectively than rivers of hackneyed vituperation against "religion" in its generic sense.

The consequence is that the surest road to unpopularity in Great Britain to-day must be to espouse the Bolshevik cause, even indirectly. We may assume that the managers of the present British Government are fully aware of this fact, and that they are also aware that Labor has an automatic proclivity to leap to the rescue every time anybody proposes to do anything to the Bolshevists. It is not that British Labor believes in Bolshevism. Not for a moment. They would never dream of introducing that fantastic economic nightmare into their "tight little island." They know better, much better. But, for all that, the Bolshevists have displayed a certain robustness in dealing with their own local "Tories," and British Labor is inclined to love them just a little for that.

So if there be such a person as a political strategist anywhere in or behind the present British Government, he may have hoped—as our previously mentioned suspicious bystander imagined—that if Great Britain today made a challenging gesture toward the Soviet regime, Labor could be depended upon to "get in wrong" by rushing promptly to the defence of the priest-murderers. It would thereby alienate the sympathy of every Roman Catholic workingman in the United Kingdom, and a vast number of good Protestants who may be assumed to be at least antipathetic toward the murder of Christian clergymen of any denomination.

* * * *

As for war, Great Britain and Russia are about as well equipped to make war on each other as a whale and a bear would be. The British could destroy the Murmansk fisheries, thereby starving a lot of innocent Russian peasants, and could keep the Russians from shipping out some at least of their wheat surplus, thereby possibly saving some Russian peasants from starvation. But the last thing the British would dream of doing would be to land a military expedition to march on Moscow; and yet that is about the only thing that they could do which would really frighten the ferocious band of brigands who are ensconced at Moscow.

It is doubtful whether Britain could even finance—out of her lean purse—a punitive force manned by other peoples, say the Poles. Indeed, any such invasion of the soil of Russia would have precisely the effect that all previous "invasions" have had, even when they were led by Russian generals and composed largely of Russian exiles, but suspected of relying on foreign support. That is, it would rally all Russia to the defence of a regime which few Russians really like. Bolshevism is a disease which must be cured by internal cleansing and not by outside surgery.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT

The duty has been reduced on stumping machines. Not the kind, however, that will be used in the Ontario election.

The reduction of the excise tax on cigarettes was not, it is thought, inspired by a resolution from the W.C.T.U.

So far, at least, nobody has attempted to hold Hon. W. E. Raney responsible for last week's bad weather.

The lowering of the duty on sugar a half a cent a pound is the kind of tariff revision that everybody is able to visualize.

Nineteen children from the northern part of Hastings County, who have been made wards of the Children's Aid Society, cannot read or write, nor do they know their ages. There seems to be many opportunities for missionary work right at our doors.

Canadian journalism has suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. William M. Hale, the founder of the Orillia Packet, and for fifty-three years its editor. No weekly in the Dominion has been more widely quoted than the Packet under Mr. Hale's guidance.

The Ontario manufacturers declare that farmer and industrialist must pull together if Canada's prosperity is to return. Unfortunately, however, there is no way suggested of bringing about this desired condition.

The Wyandotte King of America has been nominated as a candidate in the Ontario election. There will be a lot of crowing if he happens to be elected.

The report that President Dedman is going to clean up the Midland League suggests that he is not going to attempt to do it with the Lindsay team.

According to one view point the fact that the farmers are satisfied with the weather of the past few days, explains why many of them are satisfied with the Drury Government.

It is recorded that an English architect has completed his one hundredth century. There are no figures as to the number of cups of tea consumed while he was setting up this mark.

GERMAN PROPOSALS

ing far below the moderate amount forming the basis of the British scheme submitted to the Paris conference in January last, must have been known in advance to be altogether unacceptable to the Allied Governments. Furthermore, payment of even this inadequate sum is made dependent on a series of international loans, the success of which in the conditions predicated must be largely speculative. So much so that the scheme proposed by the German Government actually contains provisions dealing with the question of these loans materializing. Moreover, the arrangements proposed under this head involve financial conditions less burdensome to Germany than if the loans were to be successful, so no real incentive thereby is held out for her to attempt to raise them.

"Second—The failure of the German reply to indicate with great precision the nature of the guarantees they are disposed to offer is more particularly to be regretted. The Allied Governments, instead of receiving concrete and substantial proposals in this respect, are confronted with vague assurances and references to future negotiations which in a business transaction of this kind are lacking in practical value.

"The disappointment is enhanced by the belief, which His Majesty's Government would like to entertain, that indications are to be found in the German memorandum, that the German Government recognize the responsibility resting on them to make an earnest effort to discharge their obligations under the Versailles Treaty in a manner which the Allies could regard as both equitable and sincere.

"If Germany did intend to open the way to an effectual and speedy solution of the problem, the failure to settle, which is gravely disturbing the political and economic conditions of Europe and, indeed, the whole world, then it seems unfortunate that she should not have shown keener appreciation of the lines on which alone can any such settlement be sought.

"His Majesty's Government are persuaded that in her own interest Germany will see the advantage of displaying a greater readiness to grapple with the realities of the case, and, discarding all irrevelant or controversial issues, will proceed to reconsider or expand their proposals in such a way as to convert them into a feasible basis for further negotiation.

"In such a discussion, His Majesty's Government will, at a suitable moment, be ready to take part by the side of its Allies, with whom they share a practical interest in this question, which they have no intention to abandon, as well as a desire to terminate a situation of international peril.

"But they cannot conceal from the German Government that the first step forward to a realization of any such hope must be recognition by Germany that a contribution much more serious and much more precise is required than any which yet has been forthcoming."

The C.C.M. Triplex Makes Pedaling Easier

The C.C.M. Triplex Hanger is an exclusive feature found only on C.C.M. Bicycles.

A SIGHTSEER, going through the large C. C. M. plant, asked us what we considered the most important part of a bicycle.

Unhesitatingly, we replied, "The Crank Hanger."

He Was Surprised

He wanted to know why.

"Well," we explained, "the crank hanger is the power plant of the bicycle. When you push on the pedals, the crank hanger turns and generates the power that makes your bicycle go. The smoother and easier the crank hanger turns the less effort you need to put into your pedaling."

"That's true," he agreed.

"Now," we continued, "if your crank hanger turns a little stiff or hard, or if it develops those irritating 'tight and loose' spots, it means more friction and less power—and more work for you."

"It sure does."

"If," said we, "a rider would step and figure things out for himself, he would be willing to pay $10 to $15 extra to have the C.C.M. Triplex Hanger on his bicycle—yet we give it as regular equipment."

"The Triplex! What's that?"

Special C.C.M. Design

"The Triplex is a special C.C.M. design. It's a perfected three-piece hanger. Practically all the leading racers prefer a three-piece hanger, you know. And with the improvements our long experience has enabled us to make, the Triplex has no peer as a crank hanger. Tight and loose spots have been eliminated. The Triplex turns with wonderful ease, smoothness and quietness."

"My, you're enthusiastic about the Triplex!" he exclaimed.

"So will you be after you've ridden a C.C.M. Bicycle. You'll start with hardly an effort. After you're under way, you'll just glide along. And if you want to burn up the road, the Triplex will respond swiftly to the pressure you put on the pedals. It has lots of pep—and speed—and power!"

Saves a Lot of Energy

"You don't need to say anything more about the Triplex. Even if it just turned ever so little easier than an ordinary hanger, it would save me a lot of energy in wheeling to my work and back. And just think how much fresher I'd be at the end of a fifteen-mile ride than the fellow who had to push an ordinary crank hanger."

"You've got the right idea. Now, let's go through the rest of the factory so you can see for yourself just how carefully and accurately every part of a C.C.M. Bicycle is made. Then, you'll understand why C.C.M. Bicycles give so many years of faithful service."

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Police Made a Raid on Saturday Evening and a $200 Fine Resulted—Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 14. — Chief of Police C. Duncalfe and Assistant Chief Crawford, about six o'clock on Saturday evening, raided a house which stands on the Grand Road just outside the limits of the corporation, and which had been for some time the object of official suspicion. The result showed that these suspicions were justified. The officers found on the premises seven one-gallon jugs, each filled with mash.

The apparatus used in the manufacture of this decoction was not found, as it became too dark to pursue a search.

All the members of the family, consisting of several men and women, were taken to police headquarters. One of the men took upon himself the entire responsibility for the infringement of the Revenue Act and offered to plead guilty if given a speedy hearing.

A night session of the Police Court was held, and Magistrate Payne imposed a fine of $200, and costs. The defendant was given until Monday to raise the money, and if he fails to settle, will be taken to Cobourg to serve three months in jail.

Progressives Are Active.

The Seymour branch of the Progressive Party held another meeting in their club rooms here on Saturday night, when the chairmen of the various sub-divisions appointed a week reported on the action that had been taken. In nearly all of the polling places the deputy returning officer, poll clerk, and scrutineers have been selected. The chairmen appeared optimistic over the prospect.

Oddfellows at Brighton.

About forty members of the local Lodge of Oddfellows motored to Brighton yesterday afternoon to take part in the annual church parade of the fraternity in that village. The services were held in St. Andrew's Church.

Mothers' Day in Churches.

Mothers' Day was celebrated in the local churches yesterday. Before the morning sermon, Rev. C. F. McIntosh, of St. Andrew's Church, gave an interesting five-minute talk, in which he told of the origin of the day, the anniversary of which is now so generally observed. The church was handsomely decorated with white and red roses in memory of the dead and in honour of the living.

In the Methodist Church, at the morning service, the pastor delivered a very helpful sermon from the words found in II. Timothy, chapter 1, verse 5, "When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois and thy mother Eunice, and I am persuaded that in thee also."

Mr. Kenny's evening subject was "Women of Scripture."

The large choir, in charge of their efficient leader, Mr. R. T. Cowell, A.R.C.O., rendered special music at these services, their evening selections being: "Come Unto Me" (Ashford), Miss Nellie Hoover taking the contralto solo part; "Faith of Thy Mothers," and a male quartette composed of Dr. H. O. Richardson, Messrs. George Lucy, Walter Lowe, and Carl Maguire, rendered most acceptably "Your Mother is Praying for You."

Rev. R. Pogue to Preach.

Rev. Robert Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough, will preach the anniversary sermons in St. Andrew's Church here on 17th June. On the following Monday evening the annual lawn social will be held on the church grounds.

DESERONTO AND HASTINGS TIED

HASTINGS, May 14. — The first juvenile exhibition game of lacrosse was played here on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and resulted in a tie, 3-3.

The Deseronto boys with a few supporters arrived by motor at noon and were taken in charge by the local boys. Although the weather was cold and rain was falling there was a large crowd from the village, the country and Campbellford.

The Deseronto team is composed of a husky bunch, play good, clean lacrosse, and in their manager, Harry Moore, the National game has a find as his instructions to his men were, "always play fair and stay on the field. He is a member of the O.A.L.A. council and a great promoter of the game.

At 4 o'clock Referee W. Tate called the game; the lay was snappy from start to finish and it was anybody's game at the start of the last quarter.

To pick out stars would be to mention every player of each team for the clash was full of thrills. The catching, passing and dodging would have made veterans sit up and take notice. The game was clean throughout, only four minor penalties were inflicted on each team.

The battle started fast with Maracha of Deseronto landing the first goal in three minutes of play. Soon after the face off Cruickshanks made a beautiful pass to Cowell, tieing the score.

There was no let up in the second quarter and both teams settled down to a merry battle each scoring one goal.

In the third quarter the Deseronto boys scored one goal, breaking the tie and going into the final quarter one up. After a few minutes of play in the last quarter the Hastings bunch captured a goal, and the fans, who despite the cold, had stayed on the job, cut loose for a victory, but the Deseronto boys were right on the job, finishing the game 3-3.

ELECTED TO BE TRIED BY JURY

Otherwise Brighton Main Accused of Receiving Stolen Property Might Have Been Discharged

BRIGHTON, May 12.—Frank Atkinson, the young business man who was arrested recently on a charge of receiving property that was stolen from the Proctor home, has been given a preliminary hearing before County Magistrate Floyd of Cobourg, and has been held for trial at a higher court. The hearing was conducted in the Brighton court room on Saturday, having been adjourned from the previous week.

When the case first came up for hearing, Atkinson, through his attorney, George Drewery, of Brighton, elected to be tried by a jury at the next court of competent jurisprudence. Magistrate Floyd stated Saturday that but for this condition he would have discharged the defendant on the evidence submitted a week ago. As it was he had no alternative but to hold him for trial.

Case Attracts Interest.

The interest that is taken in the case by the residents of Brighton and district, was shown by the crowd that filled every inch of space in the court room. Among the audience was a large number of women, many of whom stood for nearly three hours listening to the evidence, as seats were at a premium. The court officer had lowered the three windows on each side of the building, so that a chilly breeze passed over the heads of the audience.

Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, of Cobourg, who appeared for the Crown, discovered early in the hearing that a number of men had donned their hats as a protection against the draft .He at once called a halt in the proceedings and insisted on judicial decorum. When the offenders against court room ethics protested that they were in danger of catching their deaths of cold, Mr. Kerr graciously compromised, and Constable Spencer was instructed to close all of the windows except one on either side, these being lowered about one foot from the top.

"Twenty years ago," philosophized Mr. Kerr, "no attention was paid to ventilation. When people died their friends wondered what it was that brought the departed to an untimely end."

Two Witnesses Heard.

The chief witnesses used by the Crown against Atkinson were three of the young men who are awaiting trial, on $1,000 bail, on the charge of breaking into the Proctor residence and stealing liquor, damaging furniture and carrying off silverware and two valuable watches, during the absence of the family in Toronto. Two of these witnesses were heard a week ago and the third testified on Saturday, this concluding the case for the Crown.

One of the watches stolen was an old timepiece with a solid gold case. The works were useless but the case was sold by the young men, who admit taking it, to Atkinson, who is in the jewellery business here, and who paid $10 for it. The purchase was admitted by the defendant, who said that buying old gold and silver was in the regular line of his business.

The question of Atkinson's guilt turned upon the point whether he knew at the time of the purchase that the gold case had been stolen. The young man who took the stand Saturday swore that when the case was offered to Atkinson he had asked where it had come from and had been told that it had been taken from the Proctor home.

Defendant Testifies.

When Attorney Drewery told his client to take the stand, Magistrate Floyd asked him if it was his intention to proceed with the defence and was answered in the affirmative.

Atkinson was ready and apparently straightforward in his answers, either to his own lawyer or to Mr. Kerr on cross-examination. He denied emphatically the evidence of the other witnesses as to his knowledge of how the watch case had been obtained. He swore that when it had been offered him one of the young men said he was going to Montreal and needed the $10 which he asked for the article. This young man, Atkinson swore, had told him that the watch case had been the property of his grandfather.

Atkinson further declared that the charge against him was a frame-up by the young men, who suspected him of working up the evidence against them. When he had learned that warrants were out, Atkinson had gone to Crown Attorney Kerr at Cobourg and explained his part in the affair.

When he bought the watch case, Atkinson said he did not know that the Proctor home had been entered. He sent the watch case and some silver articles to George H. Lees, of Hamilton, who is a gold beater, and showed the invoice to bear out his statement.

When Crown Attorney Kerr, on cross-examination, asked Atkinson what he knew of the young men who testified against him to justify his assertion that they would frame up such a charge, the defendant proceeded to give each of the young fellows such a character as their most intimate friends and the public generally have, according to all reports, never suspected.

Magistrate Calls Halt.

A number of the leading business men of Brighton had been subpoened by the defence, among these being W. W. Porte, a jeweller for whom Atkinson had worked before going into business for himself, and Harry B. Phillips, who last year was reeve of Brighton, and warden of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham. They were not called, however. At the conclusion of Atkinson's testimony, Magistrate Floyd said it was useless to proceed further with the hearing, as he could not dispose of the case, Mr. Drewery at the beginning having elected to have the case go to a jury. The magistrate added that if he had been left free to dispose of the matter he would have acquitted the defendant at the hearing a week ago. On account of the stand taken by Mr. Drewery the Magistrate said he was bound to hold the defendant for trial so that it was a waste of time to hear further evidence. Atkinson was accordingly allowed to go, on $5,000 bail, the same as that set at the time of his arrest. The case will be tried at the term of court at Cobourg in which the other five young men who are out bail will learn their fates.

Fined $50 and Costs.

A farmer was fined $50 and costs on his pleading guilty to selling fermented cider to boys.

RUSSIA ASKS A CONFERENCE

Soviet Government Rejects Terms of British Ultimatum—Would Discuss Relations With Britain.

LONDON, May 14 (Special.) — Russia has rejected the terms of the British ultimatum in the view of Leonid Krassin, interviewed by the Daily Mail's correspondent.

The Russian reply to the British note which demanded satisfaction on the subject of the seizure of British trawlers, the executions of the clergy, and propaganda, was handed to a representative of Great Britain on Saturday.

It is understood to propose a conference at which Russo-British differences can be ironed out.

Summary of Note.

What purports to be a summary of the Russian note to Britain is printed under a Moscow date line to-day by the Daily Herald, the labor organ. The article says that the Soviet government's reply proposes a conference of plenipotentiaries to discuss not only Lord Curzon's recent communication but the whole problem of Anglo-Russian relations with a view to establishing a general understanding. The main theme of the note says the article, is the claim that the Russians have equal grounds of complaint. Russia has always wished, it asserts, and Britain has always declined, to discuss the relations between the two countries.

The Moscow Government declares its willingness to abide by the decision of the proposed conference with regard to the three mile limit, and as evidence of good faith has released all the British trawlers.

BRITISH PRESS VIEWS ON DIPLOMATIC NOTES

PARIS, May 14. — (Canadian Press). — The British and Italian notes to Germany have been received lukewarmly by the press, which, however, had them too late for a detailed analysis. There is regret that the Ruhr occupation is not mentioned, but satisfaction over the strong condemnation of the German terms as too low. The chief criticism in London of the British reply to Germany is that it ignores the German offer on an international commission. The Times is emphatic in condemning the omission and regrets that the note is not more explicit in stating the British terms. The Westminster Gazette is likewise strongly condemnatory on this point. Two Liberal papers, the Daily News and the Daily Chronicle, approve the note.

U. S. FARM BLOC TO FIGHT RECIPROCITY

Formidable Forces Oppose Hon. W. S. Fielding's "Trade Agreement" Plan.

WASHINGTON, May 14 (Canadian Press). — The announcement of the Hon. W. S. Fielding, Canadian Minister of Finance, in which he outlined a proposal for tariff reciprocity between Canada and the United States, has already drawn the opposition of the influential leaders of the Republican farm bloc in the United States Congress, and indications are that any attempt to reach an agreement along the lines proposed will be fought by the entire farm bloc.

Representative Dickerson head of the open farm bloc in the House, said the plan would be fought by his followers in the House.

Newspaper sentiment here has not been favourable to the proposition.

Commenting editorially on the reciprocity proposal advanced by the Hon. W. S. Fielding, the Canadian Minister of Finance, in his budget speech, the New York World is sceptical of any result After reviewing the change in the Republican Party since the Taft administration proposed reciprocal agreement between the two countries, and Canada rejected it, the World says:

"The lucid interval of the Republican Party as regards Canadian reciprocity soon passed. At this distance it seems like an unnatural adventure into which it was led by the President, swayed by Liberal impetus. Now that Canada, through political changes, has come round again to look with favour on reciprocity, the Republican Party, speaking through the Harding administration, is more than ever infatuated with extreme protection."

LIBERAL SUPPORT FOR PREM. DRURY

"Independent Assistance" is the Opinion of Hon. Nelson Parliament.

PICTON, May 14 (Canadian Press). — The political situation in Prince Edward County has developed into one of the most complicated and most interesting in the Province.

On Saturday the Liberals here selected the Hon. Nelson Parliament as their candidate It had been thought that as Mr. Parliament had been the Speaker for the U.F.O. Government in power, that party would not put a candidate in the field against him, and the Liberals express themselves as disappointed.

At the meeting, Mr. Parliament made no reference to the Farmers' action, but R. L. Brackin, Liberal, West Kent accused the Government of ingratitude.

Interviewed, Mr. Parliament said the Liberals will continue to give "independent assistance" should Drury be returned to power."

BONDS RECOVERED ON FARM YORK TOWNSHIP

TORONTO, May 14 (Canadian Press). — While no one has yet been brought to trial in connection with the robberies at the Royal Bank of Canada at Mount Forest and the Standard Bank of Canada at Stouffville, the authorities appear to be in possession of the details of both crimes.

From some source they knew that four men were engaged in the robbery at Mount Forest and that immediately following the crime, on the way into Toronto, bonds and explosive were buried on a West York farm, where they were recently dug up.

SHEVLIN CLARK TIMBER DEAL WAS CRITICIZED

BARRIE, May 14. — (Canadian Press).—Hon. E. C. Drury, in the opening address of his campaign here on Saturday afternoon, devoted a large part of his time to Hon. George Howard Ferguson in the Shevlin Clark timber teal and the Kapuskasing settlement and his attitude on the Ontario Temperance Act. He charged the Conservative leader with trying to ride two horses on the temperance issue and with offering a gold brick to the "wets" in holding out hope for a change in the law.

REV. W. MEGAW AT ST. PAUL'S

Deals With the Solution of Industrial Problems and Relations Between Employer and Hands.

"Some men are as chivalrous as they can be outside, and are regular bears at home..

The way your young man treats his mother now is the way he will treat you when you are the mother of his children.

The solution of the industrial problems of to-day is the bringing in of a little more human element into the relations between employer and employee.

These are some of the pertinent points driven home by Rev. Wesley Megaw of Stewarton Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, in his powerful sermon in St. Paul's Church yesterday evening on the occasion of the 90th. Anniversary of the Church.

Reading the story of the Roman centurion whose servant was sick, the speaker remarked on the four tests of character revealed in this man's simple story. He was a member of a proud and dominating race whose capital city was the scene of butchery of slaves to relieve the dull days, yet this man had a slave who was dear unto him. This is a homely test for us. What do your servants think of you, and what do you think of them? What do those at home think of you? The fruits of the Spirit are not romantic loud advertising, things, but are very homely; love and joy, kindness and courtesy. We sometimes do away with the homeliness of our religion but Jesus came to earth to preach a gospel of labour.

The Lord of Love came down from above to live with the men who work. You demand honest wages and a recognition of your worth in your work, do you give honest wages.

Christianity must reveal itself in the home. "I want to give you some advice, young ladies, about that young man who is giving you a little special attention," the speaker said. "No matter how chivalrous that young man may be to you, find out how he treats his mother. If he treats his mother with any less respect than he treats you now when he is merely paying you his courting attention, and forgets his mother break it off—he is not right at heart."

There was a time when an employer knew all his men and knew when his men's children were ill, but that is impossible in the huge businesses of to-day. A little more human element might be worked in. "In the Name of Him who came to reveal the glory of God and worked at a carpenter's bench, there can be no snobbery in the Christian Church the speaker declared. "It is blasphemy against the Holy Ghost."

The centurion's home life was vindicated and the verdict of the villagers who hated the Roman conqueror was "He is worthy." Some men never see beyoud their own private interests, and there are some women whose lives are in pies and pastry, who have no interest in other people's children, and who spend the Gethsemane of bitterness as they listen to others' children being praised instead of their own. But the had shown an interest in his neighbours and had used his prestige for the public weal.

Test number three is what the centurion thought of himself. When Jesus came to the door the proud representative of Rome said to the carpenter's son, "I am not worthy." An essential element of all greatness is humility. The supreme test of a man's character is when he confesses in sincerity his own unworthiness. The nearer a man gets to Christ the better he will see the perfection of Christ and the dark corners of his own heart, with the ugly and slimy things that breed only in darkness and are dispelled by the shining in of the glory of God.

"What do you think of yourself?" asked the speaker. "Some people say, 'I don't smoke or play cards or drink,' but that is a negative Christianity. What, in His name, have you done? That is more important."

The fourth test is the real test. A man may deceive this own family and may have a splendid reputation as far as public opinion goes, and he may even delude himself, but he cannot elude the all-seeing eye of God. What does Jesus think of you? We are all too much worried about what the public thinks—we are so frightened that the world will think ill of us—the tyranny of convention has a strangle hold on us. Mr Megaw told of walking in Toronto on the 15th July when he had to remove his collar and his coat because of the intense heat, and meeting two girls wearing heavy furs. "Because some silly actress on a Paris Boulevard had worn furs these silly slaves to fashion tortured themselves," he said.

What others say does not matter so much as what God thinks of you. You are your own priest and must deal with God yourself.

In his concluding remarks the speaker made an eloquent appeal for a return to the old time simple religion. "Ere we can mold public opinion and become leaders of men," he said, "we must cling to the old rugged cross ,forgetting all but that He is sinless and we are sinners. He will meet us and will lead us along the way of life."

The music under the direction of Mr. Martin Chenhall, A. R. C. O., was very appropriate. Miss Agnes Adie, of Toronto, sang two beautiful solos, "My Mother's Prayer" and "Open the Gates of the Temple." Mr. Frank Oldfield was heard to splendid effect in " IGave My Life For Thee" and "Honour and Arms." "The Omnipotence" was rendered by the male voices in the choir, Miss Agnes Adie taking the obligato part.

WATCH LINES IN YOUR NECK TO KEEP FACE YOUNG, SAYS BEAUTY EXPERT

By Mme. Helena Rubinstein

The neck needs fully as much attention as the face for long before the face shows signs of age, the throat indicates its approach.

I always say to my patients, "Judge how young you look by your throat and hands and don't wait for your face to give you away."

If you see horizontal lines across the neck or dry patches below the lobes of your ears, don't hesitate a minute before beginning an anti-wrinkle treatment on your face.

Methods of treatment for the neck are in many ways the same as for the face, but as the neck is bound to come in contact with water when you take your bath, you must be rather more liberal in your use of cream upon it.

Many actresses famed for their beauty apply cream before entering the bath and protect the throat from the water and soap which is often injurious.

A thin neck, which shows a tendency to wrinkle, must be massaged nightly with a tissue building cream which should be patted gently into the skin.

The woman who has a tendency towards superfluous flesh and who finds her chin doubling or tripling on her has a really serious problem to contend with.

Massage for the double chin should be done with very heavy strokes which will break down the fat cells. Astringent lotions should be applied frequently to tighten the skin. Slapping the chin briskly with the back of the hand also breaks down the fat formation.

As soon as a woman loses her contour, when her line become indefinite or heavy, and when she no longer presents a clean-cut outline, her claim to youth is gone no matter how good a case the calendar may make out for her.

Never before have women had such a keen appreciation of the beauty of line. A generation ago the woman who dieted and kept her figure down was the exception. To-day, practically four women out of five who have come into their thirties are dieting.

Diet is one of the first steps toward beauty. The woman who will restrain her appetite and indulge in hours of exercise to preserve her figure will also give to her face, hands and hair the care they demand.

Every day, in every way, women are becoming more and more beautiful.

GIVE REASONS FOR MARRIAGE FAILURES

Among Them Are Too Much "Jazz" and "Poor Cooking."

CHICAGO, May 14.— (Canadian Press.)— Many and varied reasons are given by Chicago judges for the increasing number of marriage dissolutions. Some of those advanced by Justices who have heard from two thousand to six thousand divorce cases are:

Too much "jazz."

Too much cabareting and liquor toting.

Ultra sophistication of the rising generation.

The tendency of young married couples to live with their parents, thus becoming susceptible to their influence.

Too little religion in the home.

Economic marriages where the husband and wife work, figures indicate, are a success as the principals rarely seek dissolution of matrimonial bonds.

MILLBROOK NEWS

MILLBROOK, May 11.—The ministerial association held their regular meeting on Monday, at 9.30 a.m., that attendance being somewhat lessened because of illness, and absence of a number of the members. The president, Rev. G. S. Gervan, gave an excellent paper on, "The Significance of the Temptation of Jesus", which was listened to with close attention and much profit by those present. The usual discussion followed. Next month the speaker will be Rev. J. E. Beckel, of Bethany. At Monday's meeting a letter from Mr. Kidd-Byrne was read, inviting the association to be present at Port Hope on Sunday, May 27, for the unveiling of a monument to the memory of Joseph Scriven, the author of the well-known hymn, "What a Friend we have in Jesus". This monument is being erected by Mr. Kidd-Byrne at his personal expense, and he is also having the one formerly at Kidd's Corners, which has been moved by the road authorities, re-dedicated. The association, while thanking Mr. Kidd-Byrne for his kind invitation, felt that they could not accept it for a Sunday, and instructed their secretary to write and request the unveiling and dedication be held on a week day, if at all possible, as such an event on Sunday will undoubtedly disarrange the services in a number of churches in this vicinity. Rev. C. S. Applegath, of Hamilton, formerly pastor of the Methodist church, Port Hope, is to be present and assist in the dedicatiory services.

Mrs. Barry, of Peterboro, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Bingham this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Given, who have been visiting at the home of their son, Mr. Reg. Given, in Toronto for the past ten days, returned home on Monday. Their daughter-in-law, Mrs. R. Given, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is progressing favorably toward redcovery.

AGAIN DISMISSED ACTION WITH COSTS

His Honour Judge Huycke has again dismissed the plaintiff's action with costs. This was an action that was brought by the firm of Mahood & Havery against Robert H. Bigelow, of Cavan, for the amount of a note made by Mr. Bigelow to the firm of Mahood & Havery.

The firm of Mahood & Havery made an assignment in bankruptcy, and the proceedings were revived at the suit of the Canadian Credit Men's Association as trustees in bankruptcy, and came on for trial over a year ago.

His Honour Judge Huycke at that time dismissed the action against Mr. Bigelow, and gave costs against the firm of Mahood & Havery, and the Canadian Credit Men's Association, the trustees, appealed to an Appellate Court, and a new trial was granted.

The action was again tried at the April sittings of the County Court, and His Honour dismissed the action with costs.

The note sued on was given in payment of a car which Mr. Bigelow had purchased, but which was misrepresented as to its condition and quality. This was set up as a defence to the action successfully.

Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., and Mr. E. R. Widdifield acted for the firm of Mahood & Havery and the Canadian Credit Men's Association, and Messrs. Gordon & O'Brien for the defendant.

"While speaking of the robbers, I might mention that the Stars and Stripes are greatly respected by them. We always hoist Old Glory on our sampans, and doubtless this fact, together with the good prayers of our friends in America, has thus far kept us out of the bandits' clutches.

"The conference in Washington too has done much to make relations between China and America most friendly. The Shantung question has proved to the Chinese that America's interest in her is unselfish, and that we are not all 'foreign devils.'"

Employment Only Solution.

Father Timothy also has had experience with Chinese bandits. In proceeding by boat from Hungkaing to Shenchowfu, he and a party of friends were challenged three times from the shore.

"Knowing too well what the summons would mean we kept right on going," he writes, "I remained up with the oarsmen lest they would become frightened and pull into the bandits. I was expecting to be fired upon any minute, as was Father Hipolito, an Augustinian, the last time he passed through the same locality.

"We made an excellent target as we stood there grouped together in the clear moonlight. But we finally got by successfully."

The missionaries unite in the belief that solution of the whole guerilla problem lies through government intervention by supplying the roving bands of looters with employment such as road building and other public work.

try fair held in the good old-fashioned way on the village green. In the midst of it all was a enormous motor van with the words painted upon the back of it in large lettering, "You need Canada, Canada needs you." It proved to be a travelling exhibition with doors which opened out displaying the same ornate sheaves of grain and brilliantly-polished apples, rows of luscious-looking fruit in glass jars, and the usual stuffed animals. It was one of the government's exhibition motor cars, complete with a driver, his assistant and a lecturer. Certainly it had created a sensation and fringing the crowd were swarms of children gazing open-mouthed at the zoological specimens. "We make a point of interesting children," the lecturer told me, "and talk to them in the schools."

We can do it with a lot of this rosy-cheeked youth from the by-ways of England, particularly on the prairies, but they will need a lot of kindness. If you had seen that village green sewn with daisies lifting their starry faces to catch every drop of the pure gold spring sunshine that was spilling over them, and the tree-shadowed swan's pond in front of an inn which had been built by its proprietor's ancestors in the fourteenth century, you would understand why.

In the world of the theatre the marionettes from the Theatre dei Piccoli in Rome are the most talked of players at the moment. It is too killingly funny to see these wooden creatures miming. They are about four feet high, and sing and dance and gesticulate in the most ridiculously life-like manner. One can quite believe that it takes ten years to train the wire pullers.

The Servant Problem.

It always amuses me to hear the English people discussing "the servant problem." The other day I could not help overhearing a luncheon conversation between two men. "We are having trouble with our maid," said one. "She did not get in till half-past ten last night and last week she was fifteen minutes late." I gathered that the maid did everything in the house, including looking after the children, and got about ten dollars a month for it. "Things have changed so since the war," remarked the other. Well I should hope so. As far as one can make out, in the halcyon days a girl in domestic service in England could hardly call her soul her own. As a matter of fact it is the easiest thing in the world for intelligent people to get and keep domestic assistants here.

Why So Pretty?

Analyze a beauty's beauty

Note how white teeth count

If you ever envy pretty teeth, let us show you how folks get them.

You see them everywhere today. They have brought to millions new charm and new beauty.

It is so the world over, for people are using a new cleaning method now. And largely by dental advice.

They fight film

Film makes teeth dingy—that viscous film you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms cloudy coats. Tartar is based on film. That's why beautiful teeth were seen less often than now.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. That's why tooth troubles came to nearly all.

Germs breed by millions in film. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea, now so alarmingly common.

Old ways inadequate

No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats film. So nearly everybody suffered more or less.

Then dental science, after long research, found two film combatants. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods by many careful tests. Then a new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research. These two great film destroyers were embodied in it.

That tooth paste is called Pepsodent. It is daily used by careful people of some 50 nations now.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

These things also

Dental research proved other things essential. So Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

This test will tell

Pepsodent quickly proves itself. The changes in a week will delight you.

Send this coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

This test may change the whole dental history of your home. Cut out the coupon now.

Why we Feel Achey, Stretchy, Indolent & Weary in the Spring

During the winter months our bodies are constantly being subjected to sharp and sudden changes of temperature which act as shocks to all of our organs. We rush from the bitter cold and biting winds of outdoors into our over-heated and ill-ventilated homes or places of employment, then back again into chilling snow or cutting sleet.

But the temperature of our bodies remains the same during all the sudden changes that we make from very cold to very hot surroundings, because an even temperature of our blood is absolutely necessary to a normal activity of our organs. So it must be clear that whenever we pass from a hot and poorly ventilated place into the cold fresh air of outdoors, we impose an enormous stress on the delicate mechanism that keeps the temperature of our bodies the same, year in and out. It must also be clear that there is bound to come a time when we will feel the consequences of this stress in one way or another.

So we need not be surprised, then, that when spring arrives and the mild weather tempts us to open the windows and admit an abundance of fresh air or to take walks in the warm sunshine, we feel a bit achey, stretchy, "gappy" and lack energy. These symptoms simply mean that the organs of our bodies are slowly adjusting themselves to the new and more favorable climatic conditions, and that in doing so they are forced to show some signs of the burdens that were placed on them during the long months of sudden and severe changes of temperature. The symptoms that we generally experience when spring arrives are the same symptoms that most people experience when they migrate from one country to another; we have to become acclimated when we move from one climate to another, and during this adjustment to new atmospheric conditions there is bound to be some interference with the functional activity of our organs. In other words, we have to become acclimated to Spring, and this accounts for the fact that we usually feel indolent and weary while the adjustment is taking place.

But sometimes the stress imposed on our organs during the trying months of winter leaves them in a debilitated condition, so the adjustment of the body to its warmer surroundings is inevitably slow. When this is the case, we should assist our organs by taking a good general tonic and restorative. We should take a preparation that enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and invigorates all the organs of our bodies. A preparation that contains the elements that are necessary in the production of vital forces will hasten the adjustment of the body to the new climatic conditions, and it will flood the body with fresh energy and robustness. Such a preparation is Wincarnis.

For almost fifty years Wincarnis has been used by those who feel achey, stretchy and weary when the mild weather comes. A great many physicians prescribe it for those who lack stamina or feel nervous or debilitated. It is an excellent tonic for men or women who are in a run-down condition.

Begin taking Wincarnis today. You will be surprised how quickly your system will respond to its extraordinary invigorating virtues.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

"Miguel Farrel, you'd anger a sheep," Parker cried wrathfully, and strode away toward his automobile waiting in the infield. Kay and Don Mike watched him drive straight across the valley to the road and turn in the direction of El Toro.

"Wilder than a March hare," Don Mike commended.

"Not at all," Kay assured him. "He's merely risking his life in his haste to reach El Toro and telegraph Dan Leighton to report immediately."

CHAPTER XXXI.

John Parker's boredom had been cured by a stop-watch. One week after Panchito had given evidence of his royal breeding, Parker's old trainer, Dan Leighton, arrived at the Palomar. Formerly a jockey, he was now in his fiftieth year, a wistful little man with a puckered, shrewd face, which puckered more than usual when Don Mike handed him Panchito's pedigree.

"He's a marvelous horse, Danny," Parker assured the old trainer.

"No thanks to him. He ought to be," Leighton replied. His cool glance measured Allesandro Trujillo, standing hard by. "I'll have that dusky imp for an exercise boy," he announced. "He's built like an aeroplane—all superstructure and no solids."

For a month the training of Panchito went on each morning. Pablo's grandson, under Danny Leighton's tuition, proved an excellent exercise boy. He learned to sit his horse in the approved jockey fashion; proud beyond measure at the part he was playing, he paid strict attention to Leighton's instructions and progressed admirably.

Watching the horse develop under skilled scientific training, it occurred to Don Mike each time he held his father's old stop-watch on Panchito that race-horses had, in a great measure, conduced to the ruin of the Noriagas and Farrels, and something told him that Panchito was likely to prove the instrument for the utter financial extinction of the last survivor of that famous tribe. "If he continues to improve," Farrel told himself, "he's worth a bet—and a mighty heavy one. Nevertheless, Panchito's grandfather, leading his field by six open lengths in the home-stretch, going strong and a sure-fire winner, tangled his feet, fell on his nose and cost my father a thousand steers six months before they were ready for market. I ought to leave John Parker to do all the betting on Panchito, but—well, he's a race-horse—and I'm a Farrel."

"When will Panchito be ripe to enter in a mile and a sixteenth race?" he asked Parker.

"About the middle of November. The winter meeting will be on at Tia Juana, Baja California, then, and Leighton wants to give him a few try-outs there in fast company over a much shorter course. We will win with him in a field of ordinary nags and we will be careful not to win too far or too spectacularly. We have had his registry brought up to date and of course you will be of record as his owner. In view of our plans, it would never do for Danny and me to be connected with him in any way."

COFFEE FOR HUBBY STARTS DAY RIGHT.

Man's Gloomiest Hour is When He Gets Up in the Morning.

By Marian Hale

NEW YORK, May 14.—"Start your husband right in the morning and you need not worry about him the rest of the day," is the advice to wives given by Mrs. Alice Foote MacDougall of New York.

"And the best way to overcome early morning masculine moods is with a cup maybe two, of coffee," she continues.

"But it must be good coffee," she hastens to warn.

"Man's gloomiest hour strikes when he has to get up in the morning; and a cup of thin, brown, bad-tasting coffee will only confirm his belief that the world in general, particularly his home, is a pretty poor place."

Mrs. MacDougall speaks with authority, for she really knows what good coffee is. She has devoted the last 16 years of her life to producing it.

When she was forty and the mother of three children her husband died, leaving a hopelessly bankrupt business. The assets consisted of three samples of green Cofffee in the ingredients of a private blend he had devised for use in his own home—and $38.

Had Small Start

With $20 of the $38 she rented a tiny room and went into the coffee business. Today she is the head of a tea, cofffee and cocoa concern that does over $100,000 worth of business a year.

She is the only woman coffee expert in America, and her working day is passed before a revolving table in her laboratory where she blends and tests coffee.

"Good coffee is easy to make," she says. "In the first place it must be freshly ground in a clean mill. Ground coffee that stands too long loses its strength and flavor, and if coffee dust is allowed to accumulate in the mill the oil in it gets rancid.

"Coffee should be ground to the fineness of granulated sugar. The essential oil which gives the beverage its characteristic taste and soothing quality is contained in cells distributed throughout the coffee bean.

"Fine grinding releases all the oil while coarse grinding permits some of the cells to remain unbroken and the oil is wasted."

Without a Percolator

Using a coffee pot to serve six persons, mix half a cup of finely ground coffee to a thick paste with a little cold water. Drop this into a quart of fresh water just brought to a boil, and set it back on the stove where it will keep hot but will not continue to boil. Settle with half a cup of cold water down the spout of the coffee pot and serve through a strainer.

With a Percolator

Fill the receptacle with enough cold water to cover the spout on the inside. Fill the cup with finely ground coffee, using a teaspoonful to a cup. Percolate for at least 15 minutes. The longer the pumping continues, the stronger the cofffee. For after-dinner coffee, decrease the quanity of water.

YOUR COMPLEXION IS JUST WHAT YOU MAKE IT

By Mme. Helene Rubinstein

The shape of your nose or the size of your eyes are matters beyond your control, but your complexion is what you make it.

You can bring it to the point of loveliness where it suggests duchess satin or you can allow it to deteriorate until it seems to have taken the swiss cheese for its model.

In windy countries such as Australia or New Zealand, I have seen girls of 16 more wrinkled than a woman of 60 should be, and in Paris I have seen grandmothers with ravishing skins.

As you know, the skin is composed of layers of cells with little blood vessels, nerves and glands whose ducts lead to the surface and culminating in pores.

Every cell should contain a certain amount of moisture as this is the natural skin food with which the tissues are kept soft and supple. If anything internal or external interferes with this moisture the skin is robbed of its nourishment and dryness ensues and lines follow.

For a dry skin I suggest the following treatment each night: First cleanse the skin thoroughly with cold cream. Leave this on for a few moments so it may soften the surface and draw from the pores any impurities they may harbor. Then when you have removed the cream, press in a mild skin stimulant with the fingers or with warm compresses. Then pat in and massage with a rich skin food, using sweeping movements covering both face and throat.

I do not approve of water for the skin or do I advocate using nothing but cream for cleansing. My reason is that the dry skin is always irritable and unless some cooling liquid is used it will become overheated and develop a tendency to blotchiness.

The ideal method of cleansing the tender skin is to use a cream night and morning and at all other times a non-drying but slightly astringent tonic. This tones the tissues which might be inclined to flabbiness and helps you preserve your contour and maintain the firmness as well as the freshness of your face.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I have been interested in the Armour Hill memorial campaign, and now that the property has been purchased by enthusiastic women of Ashburnham, might I suggest that after the proper plans and specifications have been obtained that a tree be planted and named after each one of the brave soldiers from the city of Peterborough who died as a result of the war. This would then make it a living memorial, and, I believe, would be appreciated.

Yours, Interested Citizen.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

Will you be so kind as to give me a small space in your valuable paper, as I would like to say a little about the argument made at the recent Indian fishing case in Peterborough. Some of the lawyers were telling the court how much money is spent every year by the Government to educate the Indians. What has that got to do with the fishing case? The same man also said that Indians were getting better off. Some of them have auto cars and launches. With this talk it sounds to me the better off the Indian gets it weakens the laws until it kills the legal rights of Indians, and I suppose if we hadn't the auto cars and launches the laws would have been good yet.

Now, you white man, you make the laws and why don't you respect the laws you make, as it says in the game and fisheries act, exempting Indians from any of the provisions of this act.

Dan Whetung.

A Clip From a Toronto Paper

RIGHTS OF INDIANS MUST BE RESPECTED

Fort William, Ont., July 31 — (Canadian Press).—An act dated 1884 was invoked today when a tug and nets were seized in Thunder Bay for infraction of the law, giving exclusive rights to the Indians here to fish off Pie Island. The property was returned on payment of a fine, and a warning was issued to all commercial companies to respect the rights of original inhabitants.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

Figures recently published show the infant mortality rate (deaths per thousand births) in Ontario to be approximately 103.

In the city of Toronto the rate is down to about 87, while in the city of Peterborough the rate is not only higher than the city of Toronto but is higher than the average for all the province.

Children live largely on a milk diet so that the safeness of milk is more directly responsible for the health of children than it is for the health of adults, and to those citizens who are interested in the lives or in saving the lives of the babies of this community, a study of the pasteurization of milk would undoubtedly be an interesting one.

The city of Toronto pulled their infant death rate down from 197 per thousand to about 87 per thousand, principally by doing two things, namely cleaning up their water supply and pasteurizing their milk. Peterborough's water supply is today, we believe, second to none in the country and her milk supply should be on the same high plane.

The pasteurization of milk is a subject that has been given a great deal of thought by some of the greatest dieticians in the world and by health boards that, like the Toronto Health Board are second to none, and it is of first interest to know authoatively that no epidemic of any kind was ever traced to pasteurized milk, yet there have been and will continue to be a great many epidemics and deaths traceable directly to raw milk which may be infected or may not, no one can tell which.

As evidence, in Glasgow, Scotland, during an outbreak of typhoid fever 500 cases were traced to one raw milk supply. In Stratford, Conn., 307 cases were traced to one raw milk supply. In an epidemic of scarlet fever in the city of Boston 105 cases were traced to one raw milk supply. All these would have been prevented by pasteurizing the milk.

FRANCIS NICKAWA IS COMING TO CITY

Will Give Program With Assisting Artists On Friday Evening Next.

St Paul's Women's Missionary Society feel they have been very fortunate in the selection of artists for the entertainment to be presented next Friday evenign, and one of the finest programmes of the lar is assured.

Miss Frances Nickawa, who is already well known in Peterboro, is a remarkable entertainer, possessing at the same time an individual charm and a dramatic intensity which combine to make her one of the best known readers in Canada.

Dorothy Allan Park, an artist who is attaining an enviable reputation among Toronto musicians, is heard all too little in concert work in this city. Mrs. —art is deservdely popular as a church soloist but her true ability and splendid voice find fuller expression on the concert platform.

Mary Agnes Logan has just achieved a success of which Peterboro is exceedingly proud. She is a pianist who gives promise of bringing musical fame to the City, and as her plans will take her from Peterboro in the near future, Friday evening will afford one of the few remaining opportunities to enjoy her delightful playing.

Mr. Maurice Park, tenor and Mr. Robert A. Brown, bass, both popular Peterboro singers will also take part in the program.

Mr. Leslie Unitt will accompany the soloists at the piano.

It is expected that St. Paul's will be well filled on this occasion.

SEVEN DAYS' JAIL FOR THIS ACTOR

S. Emerson, the actor, who was the cause of a small fire in his boarding house on May 5, appeared in police court this morning on a charge of vagrancy.

Emerson was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley to seven days' imprisonment. It is understood that upon his release the immigration authorities will be communicated with and the man's deportation arranged. He came here from the United States with a show company which disbanded in Peterborough. He first came to the attention of the police when he sued his employer for non-payment of wages due. The employer settled with him and the charge was withdrawn. Then on May 5 Emmerson fell asleep while his midnight meal was cooking on an electric iron, and the police and firemen combined to prevent a serioues fire. On the Sunday morning following he called up the police and offered them a gift, apparently for their services on the occasion of the fire.

He was apprehended on a charge of vagrancy, and has been in jail ever since that time. On his arrest he was found to have 15c. in his pocket. It is believed that all the other members of this show company left the city,

DECLARES FOR RE-UNION ENGLISH LIBERAL PARTY

LONDON, May 14.— (Canadian Press.)—Charles A. McCurdy, M.P., formerly chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons, declares there can be no re-union of the two sections of the Liberal party upon any terms which could do injury to H. H. Asquith's position as leader, or which would fail to recognize the great position in Liberalism occupied by Lloyd George for over a quarter of a century. There can be no re-union which would ask national Liberals to abandon their leader.

HAD TO FIGHT TO GET BREATH

Reed Declares Gases Were So Bad He Nearly Choked at Times.

"Last winter grippe and tonsilitis confined me to my home for weeks and left me so thin and frail it looked like I could never get back to my business again. I would choke up with gas until I had to fight for breath, was so nauseated I could scarcely retain a thing, and pains in my stomach and sides would double me up. I could scarcely sleep a wink, and my hands jwere so trembly I couldn't even arrange my tie.

"However, the Tanlac treatment suited my case so well it ended my troubles, increased my weight, and fixed me up to where I felt as fine as I ever did. I feel right all the time now, and haven't missed a day from my business since I finished the treatment. Tanlac has no equal."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

HAPPY TIME SPENT ON OCCASION OF SHOWER

A very pleasant time was spent at the home of Miss Dollie Brotherstone, on Friday evening, May 11; the occasion being a miscellaneous shower given in honour of Miss Ethel Armstrong, whose marriage takes place at an early date. The prettily decorated basket carried in by little Opal Shaw and Elwood Greenly, was filled with useful gifts, among which was a beautiful set of linen from Golden Link Rebekah Lodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shaw, Mrs. Joseph Greenly and Miss Mossie Millar of Warkworth motored up for the occasion.

TIMELY SERMON TO THOUSAND WOMEN

Mission by Redemptionist Fathers Opened at St. Peter's Cathedral.

"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his soul?" was the text of the opening sermon last evening of the mission by Redemptorist Fathers which will be held in St. Peter's Cathedral during the next fortnight. From May 13th to 20th is Women's week and over a thousand women filled St. Peter's Cathedral to the doors last evening for the opening by Rev John R. O'Brien, C.S.S.R., of Toronto. Rev. James McCandish, C.S.S.R., of Toronto, and Rev. Francis Kensel, C.S.S.R., of Annapolis, Maryland, will also assist in the two weeks' Mission, the week from May 20th to 27th being devoted to the men of the parish.

Breaking up Homes.

"What is the reason for the conduct of the young girls of to-day, for the actions of married women who are breaking up their homes and destroying the lives and aspirations of their children? You will not find it in the book of the world. The answer is to be found in Holy Scripture. It is summed up in the words of my text, the eternal question which has been disregarded by worldly men and women since the beginning of time. Go to the cemeteries, look beyond the loving inscriptions on the white stones there, and ask the dead. If they could come up out of their graves they would tell you the same thing. From the heights of heaven or the depths of hell, you would hear the same cry—"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his soul?" It is an answer that covers the reason for all religions, the salvation of the immortal soul of man which God made in His own image and likeness.

"Look at society, look at the sins of the world and of individuals. Ask the young girl on the city street with the painted lips and the story of her life written deep on her countenance —ask her if she remembered the salvation of her soul when she gave her virtue to the first young vagabond who asked for it. That is the history of thousands of young women in the world to-day. Ask the mother who perhaps contributed to the damnation of her own children by her neglect of the teaching of the fundamental truths of their religion; ask her if she remembered that the salvation of their souls came before the social advancement or wealth for which she helped them to their spiritual destruction?

The heathen in the jungles of India or of Africa may have an excuse, said the reverend gentleman, but Christains have no such excuse. On the cross the blood of Christ was drained to the last drop that those who were made in His image might be ultimately saved. From the pages of history come the lessons to Christians of to-day of the sacrifices made by young, tender youth, martyred because of the realization by men and women in the ages of faith that the salvation of the soul was paramount above all earthly things.

"What a rebuke to the lascivious age of to-day, with its lack of virture, its hatreds and spites, its crimes and lust and murder—and yet you and I call ourselves Christians."

"You sit here to-night, and perhaps if I asked you, you would tell me that you will live for years to come, for twenty or thirty or seventy years yet. But what of your eternal life? There is no clock to tick your eternal life away. There is no such thing as the suicide of the soul. Whether you like it or not your soul will go on living through the ages of eternity. Tonight you are here. A hundred years from now you will be either in heaven or hell. If people would only realize that they are on their way to eternity, it would be a great deterrent to sin and crime. Some day you will slip off into eternity alone. Is it not important that you get on the right road to eternal happiness?"

"The devil is a clever diplomat," said Father O'Brien. He will not tell you directly that you must not try to save your soul. He will merely keep on suggesting that you put off worrying about it until a later and more opportune time. But do you know of any example when the hand of God came down and cut the thread of life and dashed an ungenerate soul into hell? Don't talk to a Catholic priest about death-bed conversions or of putting it off from day to day. There may be exceptional cases where a saving grace allowed a man to make a sincere death bed repentance, but that is only one instance in a thousand."

On every week day during the Mission, morning sermons will be preached at the five o'clock and eight o'clock masses, with no sermon at the 6.45 Mass. A mission sermon will also be preached at half-past seven o'clock.

How to Safeguard The Future

And finally, there is the retirement from Life's activities when overtaken by old age, often without any savings.

Do you know that you can protect yourself and your family against all four of these contingencies, in one complete policy.

"Not Guilty! What a Joke!"

The Blonde Flapper of the Famous "Movie Murder" Cries Out Against the Cruel Ironies of Justice, Fate and Love

ALICE THORNTON, a pretty girl with yellow bobbed hair, was present in the home of George Cline, the movie director, the night that Cline shot and killed Jack Bergen, the daring "stunt" actor. Cline established the fact that Bergen had attacked Mrs. Cline at Saranac, and that Alice, who had been Bergen's sweetheart, had informed him of the outrage. In the presence of Mrs. Cline and Alice, Bergen had confessed the misdeed, and said that all women were "bums."

Just what occurred thereafter has never been entirely cleared up, even after all the principals testified in the trial of Cline, his brother-in-law and Alice on charges of conspiracy to slay Bergen. But at the trial Alice revealed in her testimony that Bergen had destroyed her faith in men and love when she was only sixteen, and had maintained a sentimental hold on her thereafter. Bergen's widow further verified the evidence that the dead man was a scoundrel who regarded all girls and women as playthings, who thought all women were fascinated by his good looks, and who had no respect for friendship, honor, virtue or law.

All the defendants were acquitted by a jury of six men and six women, with a girl of 21 as forewoman. Alice was set free and told she could "go." It was freely predicted that she would "return to the movies," with a suggestion that she would attempt to exploit her "publicity." Her own story, below, sets out that she never was in the movies, but had been just a hardworking office girl; that she is stunned by the whole melodrama in which she was a central figure and in which she says she was the chief surviving victim.

Here is her signed outcry against the combination of extraordinary circumstances that made her a news "headliner" and plunged her into prison for 63 days; then sent her out again into the world, misunderstood, notorious, confused, harassed and practically penniless:

By ALICE THORNTON.

NOT guilty! What a joke!

I never was guilty. I needed no jury to tell ME that. NOW I am told I am free—that I may go. Go where?

I am not an actress and never have been, and, as far as I know, never can be, and less inclined now than ever to attempt to be one.

I only know that three months ago, though I bore the secret scar of an unfortunate love affair with an ungrateful and unprincipled cad, I was a reasonably normal and fairly contented girl. When I learned of Jack's villainy in betraying his friend George at Saranac, I felt it my duty to tell George whom I had met as a friend of Jack's. George asked me that night to come to his home and repeat what I had said in the presence of Jack. I was not afraid to do it, and I did it. I saw him listen to the charge and admit it with a sneer, and express his contempt for all women.

George called him upstairs and there were some shots. I became involved in the newspaper accounts. I freely told what I knew—all except the details of my relations with Jack, which I had hoped to keep from public knowledge. But when the Prosecuting Attorney sent for me, I went without being legally summoned, into New Jersey, which was in another State.

"I never was guilty. I needed no jury to tell ME that."

A Snapshot of Miss Thornton, As She Was Being Led to Jail On Orders of the Prosecuting Attorney.

I lived in New York and could probably have resisted any New Jersey subpoena, I am now advised. But I never thought of such a thing, I answered.

The Prosecuting Attorney quizzed me, then called an officer and had me locked up. I thought at first it was as a material witness, and I was angry enough. But when I heard I was to be charged with murder!

I lived with my poor old granny, the only kin I have on earth. She took my humiliation, my imprisonment, my accusation, gamely and nobly. For more than two months she bore the agonizing suspense. So did I, there in prison with the female felons, delinquents and riffraff of all races and conditions of moral depravity and criminal obliquity.

Then I was dragged to court day after day for trial. I was questioned and cross-questioned. The most intimate sorrows of my young life were publicly juggled and sifted and discussed. The Prosecuting Attorney addressed the jury and made a gallant fight to present me as a monster seeking revenge on a man who tired of me.

I hope he can sleep peacefully.

Both the prosecution and the defense, with me as the innocent little "patsy" between both crushing machines, used me. I was the ingenue of the drama, and my photographs made the best and biggest "copy."

I had been behind bars, caged in for 63 days and nights. My heart was sick and my body was faint. But I went through. I did as I was told—as I had always done—as I had done when Jack told me to sacrifice myself to him, when George told me to involve myself in their tragic mix-up, when the Prosecuting Attorney told me to come to his office, when the lawyers told me to testify. And I went when the warden told me to go.

I went. I crawled back to the shabby little flat where I lived with my granny, deeply in debt, followed by crowds who stared at me and called out allusions to the several phases of my misfortunes. I couldn't ask for my old position as a typist back. Now I'm timid about asking any one for another position. In New York one must have "references." What "references" shall I give? The matron would probably give me a "character" as an ideal prisoner, because there, too, I always did as I was told. Maybe the Prosecuting Attorney would admit—now that a jury said he was wrong—that I was an intelligent and truthful girl. Try to get into a bank or a business house with those recommendations.

A lot of people offered me a lift when I walked out of the jail, free, with my little bundle in my hand. But I walked—I staggered—alone. I wonder now how far their offers for a "lift" would have carried me. Little granny's welcome—yes; that was on the level and all the way. She begged me with tears to forget what had happened, and she and I would start all over again. I can't forget; but I'll try to start again.

I'll try.

And why shouldn't I succeed? I am free. The jury unanimously said I was not guilty. By every constitutional protection I am just as clean and just as good as I was before I was accused. It's a fine theory.

George Cline and his brother-in-law, my late co-defendants, will go right back to the accustomed routine of their lives. George has forgiven his wife. She loves him more than ever because of what he did and dared for her. They had a great reunion at home, I read in the papers. But I'm a girl. I have only granny. She can't do much for me in a practical way. But I'll pull out somehow and get along some way. I don't particularly want sympathy.

But I surely would love a nice job at living wages, where some employer would appreciate a girl who is willing. I guess the world will tell you I'm not hard to get along with. I have a record for doing as I am told. And I am again in what the law calls "statu quo" (meaning, roughly, "As you were"). "Roughly" is right. The world pays about as much heed to it as it does to the Volstead law.

ROGER WETHERED IS GOLF CHAMPION

DEAL, England, May 14.—(Canadian Press.)—Roger Wethered, 24-year-old Englishman became the amateur golf champion of Great Britain by his victory in the final round here Saturday over the Scotchman, Robert Harris.

Wethered captured the coveted honor by a series of brilliant matches which were termed by the veteran, J. H. Taylor ,as "super-golf but his victory Saturday was a comparatively easy one after his task yesterday n the semi-finals in defeating Francis Ouimet, the last of the invading amateurs to survive in the tournament.

At no time in the final match was Wethered in danger and he was able to dispose of his older opponent—Harris, 41—by a score of seven up and six to play, in their 38-hole match. The elements did thier best to work hardships on the players and the afternoon round was negotiated under the cruelest conditions. Rain, a bitter north wind, and at time even hail, harrassed the golfers to the utmost, but Wethered gave no indications of flagging, and continued his flawless play until the last stroke.

Harris, an old an experienced campaigner, although slow and sure in his play, was unable to withstand the intensity and uncanny accuracy of the game put up by his youthful opponent, and when the weather was at its worst he was visibly tired.

Wethered's approach shots and putting gave him the lead on the second hole, and he was in front all the way through, ending the first round of eighteen holes, four up. His only flaw in this round was at the seventeenth, where he missed a short putt, giving the hole to his opponent. Wethered completed the round in 73, which is one less than the amateur record for the course.

He was unable to increase his lead to five on the first hole in the afternoon round by sinking a five-yard putt for a four. The next seven holes provided a wonderful exhibition of match play, both men reaching the climax of their efforts. The entire seven holes were halved. Harris lost the next one when he pulled into a bunker. The tenth hole was halved and Wethered became dormy seven on the eleventh, where Harris made two poor shots from the rough. On the twelfth Harris made a gallant effort to sink a long putt, but it stopped two inches from the cup, the hole was halved and the title went to Wethered.

The victor was given lusty cheers by the gallery of 3,000 who followed the pair, despite the weather. His sister, Joyce Wethered, who has been competing in the British ladies open championship tournament at Burnham, arrived in time to see her brother come in a winner.

KNOCKOUT VICTORIES BY JESS WILLARD AND FIRPO AT MILK SHOW

Former Champion Had the Best of It For Eleven Rounds--Renault Won on a Foul.

FIRPO WON EASILY.

NEW YORK, May 14.—(Canadian Press)—Two giants of the prize ring, Luis Angel Firpo, pride of the Argentine, and Jess Willard, Kansas man mountain stood out tonight as challengers for the fistic throne occupied by Jack Dempsey after scoring knockout victories in the two main bouts of the Milk Fund Carnival, before a crowd of nearly seventy thousand, at the Yankee Stadium, Saturday.

Firpo demonstrated once more he is one of the most terrific hitters who has climbed to pugilistic prominence in recent years by knocking out Jack McAuliffe, II., of Detroit, in the third round. Willard, while none too impressive in his comeback after years of idleness, proved himself the master of his young Iowa antagonist, Floyd Johnson, and was awarded a technical knockout after eleven rounds of the most spectacular battling on the card.

These two bouts, both scheduled for 15 rounds, were headliners of a card of five heavyweight contests. Official figures were lacking tonight but the throng which packed the stadium was a record for a boxing show in this State.

Gate receipts were announced unofficially by Tex Rickard, promoter of the show, for the municipal milk fund's benefit, as approximately $300,000.

Two of the three other bouts on the card besides the main fights also were terminated before the limit, Jack Renault, of Chesham, Quebec, Canadian heavyweight champion, was declared the victor over Fred Fulton, Minnesota plasterer, on a foul blow in the fourth round after the Canadian had piled up a substantial lead on points.

In the other preliminary matches, Harry Drake, of England was awarded the judges' decision over Joe McCann, of Newark, N.J., in a four round encounter while "Tiny Jim" Herman, of Omaha, Neb., knocked out Al. Reich of New York, in the sixth round.

Firpo's quick victory over McAuliffe was the most decisive bit of ring work of the afternoon, but the triumph of the forty-year-old Willard over a youngster half his age in a hammer-and-tongs struggle from start to finish, was the high spot of the show.

Most of the experts were skeptical of the Pottawattomie giant's ability to come back after his long lay-off, but while he wat at times unimpressive and an easy mark for his aggressive opponent, he proved beyond doubt that he has regained much of his old stamnia while retaining his powerful punching ability.

While McAuliffe obvously was no match for the giant Argentinian the victory boosted Firpo's championship stock and convinced critics that he is perhaps the most dangerous of the present crop of contenders for Dempsey's title.

The unfortunate termination of the Fulton-Renault match was a disappointment to the crowd, but it was filled with action until Fulton's low blow caused his disqualificaton after two minutes and 24 seconds of the fourth round had elapsed. The bout was scheduled to go 10 rounds.

Renault, a heavy hitter, was the aggressor from the start, and although he found difficulty in penetrating the elongated Fulton's defence, landed the most damaging blows.

WARKWORTH HAS A UNIQUE TEAM

Eight of Players to Open Season on Wednesday Saw Service Overseas—The Organization.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

WARKWORTH, May 14. — The team that will represent Warkworth this season in the Northumberland County Baseball League, is unique in one particular—more than 70 per cent. of those in the players' list are veterans of the Great War. Of the nine men who will appear on the diamond when the season opens here with Roseneath next Wednesday all but one have records for service overseas. The pr.per designation for the nine is th Warkworth G. A. U. V., the organization of returned men of which there is a strong branch here, as this village and district sent over 100 men to Flanders when the call came for volunteers.

The Warkworth G. A. U. V., were organized some time ago, one of the prime movers being J. W. Dixon, the present secretary. One year ago Mr. Dixon who has always been interested in athletics, promoted the organization of a baseball team, being convinced that this would tend not only to afford healthy exercise, but to hold the veterans together. Last year the team entered the Northumberland League, and at the end of the season found itself tied with Colborne, Roseneath and Brighton for the first place.

In the play off Brighton and Roseneath were eliminated and Colborne finally won the championship by a narrow margin, Warkworth finishing second. The team that represented Warkworth so creditably last year is practically intact this year. A few changes may have been made but these will add to the playing strength of the nine.

The Team for 1923.

The officers of the G.A.U.V. and those of the League baseball team are the same. Fred White is president; William Smook , vice-president; J. W. Dixon, secretary; C. E. Meiklejohn, treasurer; H. Mulhall, captain and K. Zufelt, manager. Wilford Armour is catcher and the pitching staff consists of Archie Zufelt, George Beatty and C Dawson Pitcher Beatty is the only new man among the twirlers, the others all having been tried out, and all giving a good account of themselves last year.

The complete team as it will appear on the opening day will be made up of the following players: Manager, K. Zufelt, first base; Arnold Poole, second base; Captain, H. Mulhall, third base; Neil Thompson, short stop; C. McGregor, right field; C. Dawson, centre field, Chas. Carr, left fiel l; Wildfred Armour, catcher, and Archie Zufelt, pitcher.

President of the League

It is seldom that a baseball team can be selected, even by experts entered in a league against seasoned nines and by skilful management finish the season in second place. It was J. W. Dixon, the present secretary, who as manager last season, piloted his team to within sight of a championship.

Mr. Dixon's good work and that of the team, was handsomely recognized by his unanimous election to the presidency of the League at the annual meeting held recenly in Colborn. Mr. Dixon has a distinguished war record. He was living in England when the war broke out and became a warrant officer in the Imperial Army. He served four years and was both wounded and gassed. He came to Canada in 1919 and has resided in Warkworth ever since. He is a young man still, with good executive ability, and all those who know him predict a successful year for the League under his administration

Bowling League.

Baseball is not the only form of sport indulged in here. The village has a bowling club of nearly 20 members, and this organization, like the baseball team is in the second year of its existence. Dr. C. C. Armstrong is president, and Ben Buchanan, secretary.

An attempt was made last year to introduce lacrosse, but the young men, many of them famous as hockeyists, did not take to this form of sport.

SET A NEW RECORD.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, May 14.—(Canadian Press)—Charles Brookine of the University of Iowa, broke his own world's record of 23.4-10 seconds in the 220-yard low hurdles by two-fifths of a second in the Iowa-Chicago Western Conference dual meet here Saturday afternoon, according to the time recorded by four officials.

C. P. C. AND SCOTS PLAY A TIE GAME

The C.P.C. and Thistles played to a draw in the Gordon Cup semi-finals on Saturday afternoon. The game was played at King Edward Park before a good crowd and proved an exciting and interesting encounter.

The C.P.C. started the game with nine men, and it was necessary to call on a reserve. Wag Hotston arrived after the game had been in progress a few minutes, and made up the complete team. The C.P.C. defended the top goal. Soon Ted Hotston and Fenton went away down the left, and Ted finished a nice movement by shooting over the bar. From th goal kick Hoggarth sent to Burgess, who forced a corner. Burgess took the kick and placed nicely, but Curtis fisted out in great fashion. Wag Hotston now was the attraction, and he centred nicely, putting his brother Ted in possession. Fenner made a weak return, and Wag pounced upon the ball to open the scoring. From the centre kick Richmond was given an opening, but his final effort went high over the bar. Richmond was doing his best to evade the attention of Oxley by long passes to his wing men. Shaun, a very good outside left, was making the best use of these, and Curtis was called upon to save repeatedly. From one of Shaun's timely crosses Richmond scored a good goal, making the scores even.

From the kick-off Wag Hotston again became prominent, and it took Hoggarth all his time to keep him in check. Shaw was well placed, but he shot wildly. Burgess then raced away and sent to Richmond and Curtis was cheered for a grand save. The C.P.C. men were playing for all they were worth Bradbury was sending his forwards ahead with beautiful touches, and backed up by a good pair of backs and a fine goalkeeper they were a source of trouble to their more experienced opponents. Half-time arrived with the score standing 1 to 1.

Upon resuming Shaw took the outside right position and Bradbury gave him a nice opening, but he shot over the bar. The Scots' forwards now seemed to settle down, and backed by their great trio of halves were a source of danger, but Curtis was magnificent, saving shot after shot.

Mann and House, of the C.P.C., were defending like Trojans. Wag Hotston, with a solo effort, nearly put the Packers ahead, Fenner giving a corner which Shaw put outside. Young and Burgess were very busy on the right but Underwood was a stumbling block to their progress. Once Burgess crossed to Richmond, who sent in a terrific shot, which Curtis saved and threw out. Burgess took the flag kick, and Richmond headed just wide. From the goal-kick Fenton was sent away, and Wag met his centre, but again Fenner caught the leather and threw out Hoggarth gave to McMillan, who sent over to Shaun, but Bradbury averted the danger by kicking out. From the throw-in Richmond hit the cross-bar with a great drive. The Packers came on again, Oxley sending Wag on his journey with a nice pass Rae gave a corner, which Shaw placed in the mouth of the goal. Anderson eventually relieved the situation by a good return. Ted Hotston again gave Fenner an awkward customer to save, but Charley was in great form. The play was in midfield when time was called, with the score standing 1-1.

The teams were:

C. P. C. — Curtis; House and Mann; Bradbury, Oxley, and Underwood; H. Hotston, Shaw, Wag Hotston, Fenton, and Ted Hotston.

Thistles — Fenner; Anderson and Rae; McMillan, Hoggarth, and Jackson; Shaun, Brown, Richmond, Young, and Burgess.

Referee, J. Clarke.

A COMEBACK.

Jess Willard.

Former heavyweight champion, who though he is past the forty mark and has had but three battles in the past fifteen years handed Johnson a most decisive beating on Saturday. Willards last fight, previous to Saturday, was in 1919 when he lost the heavyweight title to Jack Dempsey. He is evidently in earnest in his efforts to regain his lost laurels. Louis Firpo will be his next opponent.

Conspiracy Charges Were Ruled Out.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 14.—(Canadian Press)—Charges of conspiracy to keep thm out of major league baseball contained in the $400,000 damage suits of Charles (Swede) Risberg and Oscar (Happy) Felsch, former White Sox players, against the Chicago American League Baseball Club, were ruled out in decisions Saturday by Circuit Judge John L. Gregory. Allegations of deceit, made against the White Sox Club officials in the $117,500 action of Joe Jackson, former left-fielder of the club, were upheld by the court, who similarly in the Felsch and Risberg cases, permitted charges of slander to stand.

The issues in the three cases are now practically narrowed to the question whether the world series baseball games of 1919 were deliberately lost the Cincinnati National League team. The cases, it is expected wil not be tried before the Fall term.

JUNIOR PACKERS WON FROM C.G.E.

The C.P.C. defeated the C.G.E. juniors by a score of 2 to 0 in a fast game at King Edward Park Saturday afternoon in the first round for the Mayor's cup. The Packer's were in fine form and the two teams furnished the crowd of spectators with a fine exhibition of soccer.

The C.G.E. won the toss and taking advantage of the wind went away with a rush, but Curtis relieved and sent Billingsley away who centered and Chambers sent just wide of the mark. By the aid of some nice passing on the part of James and Cross of the C.G.E., Edgar was called upon and cleared. J. Downer sent the leather away to Mitchell and some nice combination was seen by the Packers' forwards, but the Feeley boys at back came to the rescue. Lynch made a nice run down the centre and sent out to Stanley who shot high over the bar. F. Ball, who had a very good wing opposed to him, was now in the limelight and by a nice piece of work gave Jimmy Edwards a chance which he accepted and Jenkins was very lucky to save. The play was fast with both sides putting on all they knew. Half time arrived with no score.

From the centre kick the Packers took control of the game and Jimmy Edwards opened the scoring. The C.G.E. were now kept in their own territory with Curtis and I. Downer making beautiful returns. From one of these Chambers beat Jenkins for the second score. The C.G.E. players pulled themselves together and pressed the attack. Williams was playing his forward with some nice passes, but the Packers defence was very safe. T. Ball sent Killenbeck along and this young player sent in a daisy cutter which Jenkins saved at the expense of a fruitless corner. From now to the call of time the game was very even leaving the Packers winners o fa well earned contested game by 2 to 0.

The teams were;

C.P.C.—Goal, Edgar; backs, Downer and Curtis; halves, F. Ball, Halliday, T. Ball; forwards, Mitchell Killenbeck, Chambers, Edwards, Billingsley.

C.G.E.—Goal, Jenkins; backs, I. Feeley and F. Feeley; halves, Williams, Millard, Naish; forwards, Stanley, Houghton, Lynch, James, Cross.

MERCANTILE WILL OPEN THE SEASON

Bankers and Examiner Will Clash at Riverside on Wednesday.

The inability of the City League Juveniles to get under way on Saturday has left the formal opening of the city baseball season to the Mercantile leaguers who will start their hostilities on Wednesday. Bankers and The Examiner are the teams slated for the opening battle. Both teams have been working out regularly and are in good shape and both are expected to spring some dark horses on the unsuspecting baseball world.

The Bankers have made some recent additions to their pitching staff but the names of the new mound artists have been kept a profound secret. It is thought however, that "Jeff" Hardill will be seen on the mound for them as often as any one. They have a strong infield lined up and an outfield that will be as good as any in the circuit.

With several good prospective pitchers to pick from Manager Swanston is grooming Baker for the opening game and the youngster is expected to give a good account of himself. He will be backed by an air tight infield and a hard hitting aggregation in the outer gardens. A new prospect for the initial sack position has been unearthed in McCauley who has been showing good in the practices.

The Examiner team will play their first game of the season this evening when they crash up against Lakefield, East Peterboro leaguers at Lakefield. Owing chiefly to working conditions they will not be able to put their strongest team on the diamond for this occasion, but are nevertheless expected to shape up pretty well .

Questions

ONE—If a batter is hit by a pitched ball that goes directly over the plate, what is the ruling?

TWO—What was the ruling made by the major leagues relative to spit ball pitching?

THREE—Can a batsman be removed at any time regardless of the balls or strikes that may be on him?

FOUR—If, after two strikes have been pitched to an improper batter, the team at bat discovers the mistake, can the proper batsman be substituted?

FIVE—If, with two out, a base runner is hit by a batted ball which retires the side, does the batsman receive credit for a hit?

Answers

ONE—If, in the opinion of the umpire, the delivery was up to the specifications of a strike, he would so rule it whether or not it hit the batter.

TWO—The major leagues ruled that the pitchers who used the spit ball in 1920 would be allowed to continue it during their career.

THREE—A batsman can be removed at any time. The man selected to takes his place, simply takes the balls and strikes on the batter at the time of removal.

FOUR—The proper batsman can be substituted when the mistake is discovered, and he simply takes the count that was on the improper batter.

FIVE—The batter always receives credit for a hit on such a play, no matter what the status of the game may be.

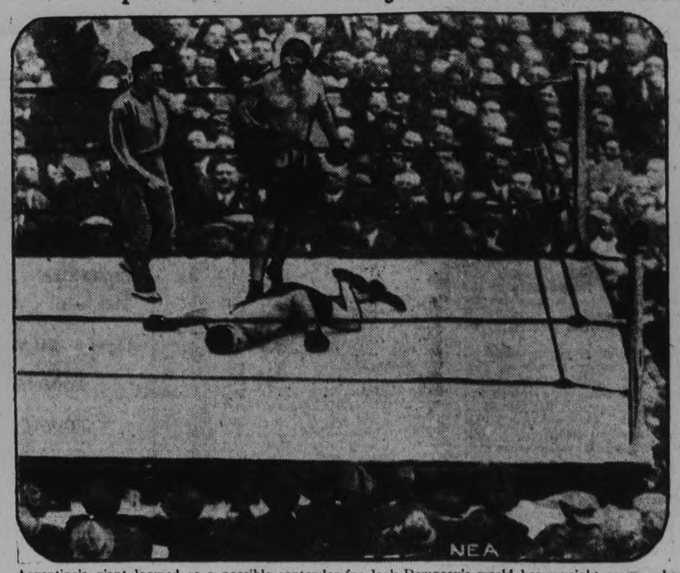
Luis Firpo Knocks Out Jack McAuliffe 2nd



Argentine's giant loomed as a possible contender for Jack Dempsey's world heavyweight crown when he scored a knockout in the third round of his battle with Jack McAuliffe 2nd, of Detroit, at the new Yankee Stadium, New York. Luiis Firpo dropped his opponent with two right uppercuts. Picture shows McAuliffe flat on his face in the middle of the ring, with the bulky South American towering over him, the referee declaring Firpo a winner as 60,000 spectators cheered.

PETERBORO UNITED LOST TO DE LAVAL

The De Laval Juniors defeated the Peterboro United Saturday afternoon by a score of 2 to 1 in the first game for the Taylor Cup. The game was played at the Oval and as was expected the teams proved to be very evenly matched.

The De Laval started off with the wind in their favor and pressed the attack early in the game. Bell their outside right, was soon in evidence and gave Montgomery a hard shot to clear which he saved at the expense of a corner which Pulley put outside. Evans opened the scoring from a melee which followed near the United goal. The United team then pressed the attack and the Vinette brothers, who formed the right wing, gave Frick several hard ones to handle. Three corners were taken in succession. Ward eventually got hold of one of his old favorites and sent Elliott down on the left. Griffin took his pass to center and gave Montgomery a teaser which he managed to save. Connors got possession and sent a nice ground pass to Dundas who went away at full speed and finished up with a good shot which Frick saved in fine style. Half time was called with the De Laval in the lead and the score 1 to 0.

On resuming play with the wind behind them the United players were soon in the vicinity of the De-Laval goal. Cordroy, Vinnette and Dundas were trying hard to score and with the assistance of three good backs were having the best of the arguments. Their efforts met with success when Vinette beat Frick with a nice cross shot.

With the score even the play became very open. Connors of the United, was very much in evidence and gave his forwards every chance to score but the De Laval defence was too good. With but a few minutes left to play Ward broke loose and with a grand run, tricking first one and the another, finished up with a shot that Montgomery had no chance to save. Time was called with the De Lavals winners of a good game by a score of 2 to 1.

The teams were:

De Laval—Goal, Frick; backs, Ward and Grant; halves, Ashmore, Cooper and Studley; forwards, Bell, Pulley, Evans, Griffin and Elliott.

Peterboro United—Goal, Montgomery; backs, Slaughter and Bradley; halves, Connors, Smith and Sweeting; forwards P. Vinnette, A. Vinette, Cordroy, H. Vinette and I. Dundas.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

The Executive of the Mercantile League will meet to-morrow evening at seven o'clock in Cressman's store.

LACROSSE

This evening's practice will be at Central Park. There should be a big turnout to make up for last week's postponements.

Frank Convery has allotted Riverside Park Friday evening at 6.15 to the Lacrosse Club. Please keep this in mind, but meanwhile two or three workouts should be tucked away.

The O.A.L.A. boasts an entirely new district this season in the eastern group, including Belleville, Deseronto, Trenton and Picton. They are playing in the juvenile and midget series, and the group as a whole has sprouted from the Deseronto youngsters who are now in their third year of lacrosse under the enthusiastic management of H. M. Moore, publisher of the Deseronto "Post."

This is an encouraging development in Eastern Ontario and it is hoped the two schedules will be carried through by all four clubs.

Havelock are holding a tournament at their celebration of the King's birthday on June 4th, and have invited Peterborough to send the strongest team that can be mustered here to compete for a silver trophy and medals valued at seventy five dollars. There will also be medals for the runners-up. On the same day Hastings is holding a demonstration of its own and will clash with a Campbellford team.

Stan. Feeney, of Marmora, is anxious to have Peterborough put in a junior team. These are the only clubs in the district that are talking juniors, and it is likely that both will come through.

The Napanee team realized $90 at a dance held recently in aid of lacrosse. The eastern group drew up its schedule Friday night and is set for the season.

SOCCER NOTES

The executive of the P. & D.F.A. will hold an important meeting in the G.W.V.A. rooms this evening. All directors and club representatives are asked to be present.

The strain of playing two hard games in one week told on the Scots when they met the C.P.C. on Saturday afternoon in the Gordon Cup semi-final.

The G.W.V.A. team made a good impression last Thursday evening in the league game against the Thistles. Many of the fans have picked the Vets for the next Gordon cup holders.

The replay game between the C.P.C. and the Thistles will be played to-morrow evening at King Edward Park. The winner goes into the final on May 24.

The following team will represent the Thistles in the Gordon Cup replay to-morrow night: Fenner, goal; Anderson and Rae, backs; Jackson, Hoggarth and S. McMillan, halfbacks; Shaun, Young, Richmond, Rickards and Burgess, forwards. Reserves, Reid and T. McMillan.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

GREAT CAST IN "THE OLD HOMESTEAD."

The phrase "all star" has been much abused, but the cast of "The Old Homestead" which comes to the Regent Theatre to-night may truthfully be said to be of that calibre. Theodore Roberts, George Fawcett, T. Roy Barnes, Fritzi Ridgway, Harrison Ford, Kathleen O'Connor, James Mason, Ethel Wales and others make up a list that is hard to surpass.

This Paramount picture is based on Denman Thompson's famous play in which that celebrated actor appeared for thirty-two years, but is far more extensive in character and presents a great drama with plenty of comedy and a smashing climax.

The story is familiar—how the son of Uncle Josh is falsely accused of theft and goes away to meet with stirring adventure and finally to be restored to his home and sweetheart. But there is far more than that to the story. There is adventure, love, human character in abundance, humor that is rich and spontaneous and pathos that is deep and convincing. Tears and laughter abound.

Peter Porker Says:

"ROSE BRAND HAM cooked as follows is a revelation:

"Take thick slices (about three-quarters of an inch) from the middle of the ham, place them in a shallow dish, sprinkle with a little brown sugar, a few dabs of butter on top, just cover with milk. Place in oven and bake until milk has disappeared. Serve with any vegetable.

"Ordinary ham won't do—most likely too salt—buy a whole ROSE BRAND HAM. Use the middle slices as above, the ends can be used for frying and boiling—no waste."

Talented Daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland will be Seen Here in "The Glorious Adventure' First All-Colour Photo-play

No announcement in the history of the motion picture industry ever caused more widespread discussion and expressions of of interest than Diana Manners for a series of photo-plays under the personal direction of J. Staurt Blackton, the pioneer producer for the screen, "The Glorious Adventure,, the first appears in the leading feminine role, is also the first Prizma color screen feature production ever made. This picture remarkable for the fact that it presents Lady Diana, is the first all-color production and is a real picture in all senses was made for the Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation and has been booked as the chief attracttion for to-day at the ROYAL Theatre.

In all parts of the United States, throughout Europe and Canada, and even in the Orient there has been extensive comment on the decision of Lady Diana, world-famous beauty and aristocratic social leader of London, to become a professional actress.

Lady Diana Manners is considered the most noted woman of today, and by many well-known artists has been declared to be the most distinguished beauty of the present time.

Lady Diana is the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland, and her family occupies a place so high in the old British nobility as royalty, but it was not her eminent family connections that gave Lady Diana her fame. She became the outstanding beauty and social personality of this era by reason of her amazing wit, fascination, intelligence and diplomacy, combined with her superb beauty and jewels better than any other woman in Europe.

The acknowledged leader of London society, Lady Diana for years has held a social position unknown to recent generations in London or any other cities of the world.

Artists all over the world have begged for the opportunity of painting Lady Diana and there is no doubt of her being one of the most widely photographed woman in the world to-day. There is scarcely an exhibition of portraits in London that does not include one or more of Lady Diana, and portraits of her by great artists have frequently been exhibited in New York. One by Ambrose McEvoy recently attracted much in Fifth Avenue, New York.

An idea of the exquisite type of beauty possessed by Lady Diana is gained from statements about her by noted artists now in New York Mr. McEvoy at his studio in the Gainsborough said he had made six portraits of Lady Diana and considered her the most perfect type of beauty he had ever seen.

LAKE OF BAYS

The Region of Romance is the name that is often applied to the Lake of One Thousand Bays. Here Nature is seen at her happiest mood throughout the whole holiday season. Decked in her garments of varied greens, she woos the timid wayfarer to her side, nothing but with the restful melodies of winds and waters and chattering all her cares away for her unfeigned embrace. The thousand bays of which the lake may truly boast has each a thousand surprises and delights for the nature-lover. The Canadian National Railways have issued a very handsome and complete descriptive folder with the territory known as the Lake of Bays District, "Highlands of Ontario," and which contains list of hotels and boarding houses, cottages to rent, canoes, etc. A copy may be had free on application to any Canadian National Ticket Agent.

GOSPEL HALL NOTES.

Yesterday was a great day at the Gospel Hall. Mr. F. Baird spoke at three services. The address at seven o'clock seems listened to by an audience that filled the hall. His subject was "Born In Sin, Living in Sin, Dying in Sin." He showed from the words of God that all are born sinners, absolutely no exception and cannot be otherwise, but there is no need for any one to live in sin when God in Christ made a way to escape from sin and its power, as well as the penalty. Mr. Baird will close this series to-night with a message on work among the thousand million unevangelized world. All come.

Canadian Stock Exchange And Mines — New York Stock Exchange And Curb Prices

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

FURTHER REDUCTIONS IN PRICE OF CRUDE OIL.

NEW YORK, May 14 (United Press). — There was another flood of crude oil price reductions to-day. Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wyoming, and Louisiana fields announced cuts ranging from 10 to 25 cents a barrel.

This is the third reduction this year, and the other two signals for the market sell off. To-day that was not the case, and those on the conservative side were somewhat encouraged when prices continued a slight upward trend throughout the morning.

Accumulation of buying orders indicated that important interests considered the further break at last week's close had been overdone and prices in the general list started at higher levels. Corn products, Studebaker, American Can, Dupont, Steel and other speculative leaders scored gains over Saturday's final prices, while the market as a whole showed an improved tone.

Announcement of a 25 per cent. reduction in Pennsylvania crude oil following the market in technical shape to ignore the cut and prices continued to rally through the first hour. American Can and California Petroleum again headed the advance. Steel also showed signs of breaking away from the heaviness recently characterising whole steel groups. Steels' net earnings in the first quarter were $47,700,000 and in the current quarter may reach $45,000,000. Traders working on the constructive of the market allege that individual wealth will continue to increase rapidly until the end of 1923 at least. Full employment, high wages, and the large earnings of manufacturers and business men generally are creating millions of surplus daily that will seek sources of investments. Now that prices are off from 10 to 30 points the public is beginning to come in.

Bearish professionals renewed their attacks on the general list when the market showed a tendency to turn dull on the recovery in the late morning. Interests which believe that the current lull in business is merely a temporary pause, took a passive attitude with regard to the stock market, content to accumulate their lines on the recessions. This disposition favoured the cause of operators bearish for the long pull. Resumption of pressure on issues like Baldwin, Studebaker, and Steel arrested the rally in others of the list, and gave the whole market a heavy tone at noon. An observing floor broker remarked that 30 per cent. of the room operators were bearish.

"Half of that total," he said, "believe the market will turn definitely downward and fifty per cent. are bears for a short pull. Frankly I do not believe the short interest has been so large in years."

CHAS. R. TINNEY IN GOOD VOICE

Toronto Soloist Attracted Large Congregations to George Street and St. Andrew's Churches.

Many visitors crowded the congregation at the last session of Mr. Robert Gordon Kent's visit to Peterborough, his companion, Mr. Chas. R. Tinney, the second member of the Toronto Male Quartette engaged to sing in Peterborough churches yesterday was able to keep his engagement, and sang with much success to large congregations at the morning and evening services.

At George Street Methodist Church in the morning Mr. Tinney, who is the possessor of a full, clear, powerful bass voice, sang "King David's Lament" and "My Task." At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in the evening, after Isaiah 40 was read and prayer offered, Mr. Tinney sang also to splendid effect "Holy Father Cheer Our Way."

At George Street Church yesterday morning, the pastor, Rev. W. G. Young, announced that he had asked the Toronto Male Quartette, of which Mr. Tinney is a member, to sing at the church on the first Sunday in June.

BETTER HEALTH THROUGH BETTER BREAD

Alfred McCann, of New York, the noted writer on Foods, claims that

FOOD IRON—The element which builds and renews the blood—and without a sufficient supply of which rich, red blood cannot be maintained.

FOOD CALCIUM—The element in foods that builds teeth and bones, and Nature's great defender against the dread tubercular.

FOOD PHOSPHORUS—The element that has so much to do with sound stable nerves, so much needed in these days.

WITH SUCH A LARGE PROPORTION OF OUR FOODSTUFFS DEFICIENT IN THESE VALUABLE ELEMENTS—AND OTHER EQUALLY IMPORTANT ELEMENTS—HOW INCREASINGLY IMPORTANT THAT BREAD—THE GREAT STAPLE FOOD—BE NOT THUS DEFICIENT!

Browns' 100% Wholewheat Community Bread

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

FOOT TROUBLES.

A chiropodist made the remark recently that in her study of feet she had seen not one perfect foot. And, think of all the darling baby feet there must be something exceedingly wrong with our care of them if we get such poor results.

Shoes are the deformities of later years, she says, and I am inclined to agree with her. Children go barefoot when they can, and when they must wear shoes, babies' feet are quite unusual for them. The tiny, soft bones are easily pressed out of shape and when the foot develops a normal size it is ugly and misshapen, fail to indicate, in its misery to advantage.

When you take the child's shoes and stockings off at night notice if they look white and comfortable as if the toes were open, unconfined all day. Red spots on the instep and purple rivers are often show pinching. Take the shoes and stockings off as often as you can during the day and see that they are doing.

Keep your hand inside of the child's shoe and see that it is perfectly smooth, free from bumps or mid heads and that the lining is smooth. Be as sure as sure that the shoe is long enough to allow the toes to lie flat and spread when walking. Mothers who are particular that shoes are good in this respect may be disappointed to the size of the shoes. Woollen stockings especially and cotton hose in one or two sizes shoes after washing and unless they are dried on a stretcher they be far too short to allow the child's feet free room.

If the child is inclined to pull the shoes over have the shoemaker place an extra lift on the outside half of the sole. That throws the foot slightly in and will be a constant reminder to the child to toe in and walk straight, which he is not doing when the inside sole is worn over. If they are worn on the inside edge normally, an orthotic course must be taken, that is put the shoes all on the right of the shoe.

When shoes fail to fit and "get" trouble, discard them. Nature is worth that much to anyone.

WOMAN BACKED HER CAR THROUGH SHOW WINDOW

A car driven by Mrs. Fabian Case backed through the plate glass window of the J. M. Greene Co.'s Musgrave Street premises on Saturday afternoon, causing no slight damage to instruments on display and breaking one record.

Mrs. Case was proceeding along the north side of Charlotte street and in picking up in the task to take gasoline she lost control of the car, which jumped over the sidewalk and stopped only when it had broken eight plate glass windows.

LAKE OF BAYS

The Region of Romance is the name that is so often and aptly applied to the Lake of One Thousand Bays. Here Nature is seen in her happiest mood throughout the whole holiday season. Decked in her garments of varied greens, she woos the tired wayfarer to her side, soothing him with the restful melodies of winds and waters and charming all his cares away by her fascinating caprices. The thousand bays of which this lake may truly boast has each a thousand surprises and delights for the nature-lover. The Canadian National Railways have issued a very handsome and complete brochure dealing with the territory known as the Lake of Bays District, "Highlands of Ontario," and which contains list of hotels and boarding houses, cottages to rent, etcetra. A copy may be had free on application to any Canadian National Ticket Agent.

GOSPEL HALL NOTES.

Yesterday was a great day of good tidings, Mr. T. Baird spoke at all three services, the address at seven o'clock being listened to by an audience that filled the hall His subject was "Born in Sin, Living in Sin, Dying in Sin." He showed from the words of God that all are born in sin, absolutely no exception, and shapen in iniquity, but there is no need for any one to live in sin when God in Christ made a way of escape from sin and its power, as well as the penalty, Mr. Baird will close this series to-night with a messege on work among the thousand million unevangelised world. All come.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

FURTHER REDUCTIONS IN PRICE OF CRUDE OIL.

NEW YORK, May 14 (United Press). — There was another flood of crude oil price reductions to-day, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wyoming, and Louisiana fields announced cuts ranging from 10 to 25 cents a barrel.

This is the third reduction this year, and the other two signals for the market sell off. To-day that was not the case, and those on the constructive side were somewhat encouraged when prices continued a slight upward trend throughout the morning.

Accumulation of buying orders indicated that important interests considered the further break at last week's close had been overdone and prices in the general list started at higher levels. Corn products, Studebaker, American Can., Dupont Steel and other speculative leaders scored gains over Saturday's final prices, while the market as a whole showed an improved tone. ....

.....Announcement of a 25 per cent. reduction in Pennsylvania crude oil following the market in technical shape to ignore the cut and prices continued to rally through the first hour. American Can and California Petroleum again headed the advance. Steel also showed signs of breaking away from the heaviness recently characterising whole steel groups. Steels' net earnings in the first quarter were $47,700,000 and in the current quarter may reach $45,000,000. Traders working on the constructive of the market allege that individual wealth fill continue to increase rapidly until the end of 1923 at least. Full employment, high wages, and the large earnings of manufacturers and business men generally are creating millions of surplus daily that will seek sources of investments Now that prices are off from 10 to 30 points the public is beginning to come in Bearish professionals renewed their attacks on the general list when the market showed a tendency to turn bull on the recovery in the late morning Interests which believe that the current lull in business is merely a temporary pause, took a passive attitude with regard to the stock market content to accumulate their lines on the recessions. This disposition favoured the cause of operators bearish for the long pull. Resumption of pressure on issues like Baldwin, Studebaker, and Steel arrested the rally in others of the list, and gave the whole market a heavy tone at noon. An observing floor broker remarked that 90 per cent. of the room operators were bearish. ....

....."Half of that total," he said, "believe the market will turn definitely downward and fifty per cent. are bears for a short pull. Frankly I do not believe the short interest has been so large in years." ....

CHAS. R. TINNEY IN GOOD VOICE

Toronto Soloist Attracted Large Congregations to George Street and St. Andrew's Churches.

Although illness caused the cancellation at the last moment of Mr. Robert Gordon Kerr's visit to Peterborough, his companion, Mr. Chas. R. Tinney, the second member of the Toronto Male Quartette engaged to sing in Peterborough churches yesterday was able to keep his engagement, and sang with much success to large congregations at the morning and evening services.

At George Street Methodist Church in the morning, Mr. Tinney, who is the possessor of a full, clear, powerful bass voice, sang "King David's Lament" and "My Task."

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in the evening, the latter number was repeated, and Mr. Tinney sang also in splendid voice, "Holy Father Cheer Our Way."

At George Street Church yesterday morning, the pastor, Rev. H. W. Young, announced that he had asked the Toronto Male Quartette, of which Mr. Tinney is a member, to sing at this church on the first Sunday in June.

BETTER BREAD

Alfred McCann, of New York, the noted writer on Foods, claims that—

FOOD IRON---The element which builds and renews the blood---and without a sufficient supply of which rich, red blood cannot be maintained.

FOOD CALCIUM---The element in foods that builds teeth and bones, and Nature's great defender against the dread tubercular.

FOOD PHOSPHORUS---The element that has so much to do with sound, stable nerves, so much needed in these days.

WITH SUCH A LARGE PROPORTION OF OUR FOODSTUFFS DEFICIENT IN THESE VALUABLE ELEMENTS--AND OTHER EQUALLY IMPORTANT ELEMENTS--HOW INCREASINGLY IMPORTANT THAT BREAD--THE GREAT STAPLE FOOD--BE NOT THUS DEFICIENT!

Browns' 100% Wholewheat Community Bread

is guaranteed to contain ALL OF THE WHEAT, one of the richest sources in Nature of the valuable Mineral Food Elements, is made with milk, and contains no sulphurized molasses, so often used in "brown" breads.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

FOOT TROUBLES

A chiropodist made the remark recently that in her study of feet she had seen just one perfect foot. And think of all the darling baby feet! There must be something tremendously wrong with our care of them if we get such poor results.

Most of the deformities of later years get their start in childhood. Children make very little fuss about shoes, babies especially often wear uncomplainingly shoes that are much too small for them. The tiny, soft bones are easily pressed out of shape and when the foot develops to normal size it is ugly and misshapen, bad to look at, and a misery to its owner.

When you take the child's shoes and stockings off at night notice if they look white and "comfortable" as if the toes have been uncramped all day. Red feet, spots of red and purple, ridges or creases show plainly that the shoes or stockings are pressing into the tender flesh and we cannot tell how much damage they are doing.

Run your hand inside of the child's shoe and see that it is perfectly smooth, free from bumps or nail heads and that the lining is smooth. By all means be sure that the shoe is long enough to allow the toes to lie flat and spread when walking. Mothers who are particular that shoes are good in this respect may be disregardful of the size of stockings. Woollen stockings especially and even heavy lisle ones grow very short after washing and unless they are dried on a stretcher may be far too short to allow the child's toes free room.

If the child is inclined to run his heels over have the shoemaker place an extra lift on the outside half of the sole This throws the foot slightly in and will be a constant reminder to the child to toe in and walk straight, which he is not doing when his heels are run over. If they are run over on the inside edge, naturally the opposite course must be taken, that is put the extra lift on the inside of the shoe.

When shoes cause the foot any trouble, discard them. No shoe is worth that much to anyone.

BE ABSURD TO EMBARK ON A TARIFF FIGHT

FREE INTERCHANGE

NEW YORK, May 15 (Canadian Press). — The Times, in an editorial to-day on the reciprocity proposal of the Hon. W. S. Fielding, Canadian Minister of Finance, endorses reciprocity between Canada and the United States, and says:

"There is every reason why it would be absurd for Canada and the United States to embark upon a tariff war."

"There is no graphical barrier between the United States and Canada," it continues, "and facility of intercommunication is such that free and uninterrupted interchange of products between these two nations is to the advantage of both. America needs Canada and Canada needs the United States. During the year 1922 nearly 40 per cent. of Canada's exports went to the United States, and more than 65 per cent. of her imports came from this country. Canada can well absorb more American goods and the United States can offer Canada a much greater market for certain of her products.

"Thus far the reception of the Canadian offer in this country has been rather cold. Our farmers see in the plan another blow at their interests; agricultural prices would be reduced, they allege, while manufactured goods would remain high.

Cut the duties on the latter, and then the farmers will talk with you" they say.

FRENCH EXTENDING THEIR OCCUPATION

BERLIN, May 15 (Canadian Press). — The French have occupied the Baden Aniline and Soda Works at Ludwigshafen, according to a message received here to-day.

The employees have not attempted to enter the works, which are shut down with an entire French regiment quartered there.

The street railways at Ludwigshafen have ceased operation as a result of the French ocupation of the depot.

The Hoechst Dye Works at Ludwigshafen have also been occupied by the French, and it is said that the occupation French forces have entered Limburg, in Westphalia, which is outside the territory.

Big Achievement by Trent River Pullet

Miss B. G. French, of Trent River, is the proud possessor of a barred rock pullet which one day last week laid an egg six and a half inches in diameter, with a length of eight inches.

So many reports of phenomenal achievemetns by feathered industrialists come to hand these days that one might almost visualize a concerted movement in the interest of greater production worthy of emulation.

PROTECT FISH CHEMONG LAKE

Representative From the Department is in the City Today.

The natural spawning ground at Lancaster Bridge on Chemong Lake will be constructed, acording to the advice of Mr. A. W. McLeod, Superintendent of Hatcheries for the Provincial Government, who is today in the city arranging the details.

The Peterborough branch of the Fish and Game Protective Association has succeeded in convincing the Government of the utility of such a departure from the established routine. It is believed that this is the first occasion which a natural spawning ground has been given protection from the dangers of fish thieves, and also from the natural danger of the lowered waters just after spawning time.

Thousands of fish, it is hoped, will be saved by this inexpensive plan.

Mr. McLeod is arranging the details of the conduits and gates which will keep the water at a uniform height, thus preventing the spawn being left out of the water on the spring floods receding.

Mr. T. Tooms, M.P.P. for West Peterborough, has been active in furthering the plans of the Fish and Game Association regarding this project.

CONSERVATIVES TO CONVENE WEDNESDAY

In the West Peterborough Conservative camp, speculation is rife as to who will be chosen to carry their banner in the Provincial elections, for the big Liberal-Conservative convention in Victoria Hall, George street, on Wednesday night, May 16, at 8 o'clock, is to be wide open for the nomination of a candidate. Nine or more prominent Conservatives are in the limelight as desirable and possible candidates for nomination, but how many of them will allow their names to go before the convention cannot to-day be positively determined. But one thing seems assured and that is, West Peterboro Conservatives are in this campaign going to present a united front in behalf of whoever is selected to contest the riding.

President Denne's expectation of a large attendance at Wednesday's convention, to which the ladies are specially invited, will no doubt be realized, as W. F. Nickle, K.C., M.P.P., is to address the gathering. Mr. Nickle hardly needs any introduction, his name having figured largely in all important debates in the local Legislature, now expired.

Elected to represent Kingston in the bye-election of Feb., 1922, he was formerly a member of the Commons from the same constituency, and also one of the Royal Commission appointed in October, 1920, to draft new penitentiary regulations.

Mr. Nickle is one of the party's big platform guns, a scatching critic and a definite exponent of Liberal-Conservatism as inculcated by such provincial leaders as Sir James P. Whitney, Sir William Hearst and Hon G. Howard Ferguson.

TOURIST SEES NO SUFFERING IN RHINELAND

No Visible Famine But Lots of Hardship Underneath the Surface —A Few Cases.

AMATEUR BEGGARS

No. X.

By Ernest M. Hemingway.

COLOGNE, May 14.—Travelling on fast trains, stopping at the hotels selected for him by the Messrs. Cook, usually speaking no language but his own, the tourist sees no suffering in Europe.

If he comes to Germany, even travelling quite extensively, he will see no suffering. There are no beggars. No horrible examples on view. No visible famine sufferers nor hungry children that besiege the railway stations.

The tourist leaves Germany wondering what all this starving business is about. The country looks prosperous. On the contrary in Naples he has seen crowds of ragged, filthy beggars, sore-eyed children, a hungry looking horde. Tourists see the professional beggars, but they do not see the amateur starvers.

For every ten professional beggars in Italy there are a hundred amateur starvers in Germany. An amateur starver does not starve in public.

On the contrary no one knows the amateur is starving until they find him. They usually find him in bed. A very hungry person does not walk the streets after a certain length of time. It sharpens that feeling that is dulled by bed. In writing of amateur starvers no reference is meant to the inhabitants of bread lines, soup kitchens or rescue missions. They have violated their strictly amateur standing.

No. 1—Frau B. is the widow of the owner of an apothecary shop, who died before the war. She has a yearly income of 26,400 marks, the interest on mortgages. Before the war this yielded her $100 a week. Her 29-year-old daughter is suffering from lung trouble and cannot work. Her 21-year-old son passed the final examination at the grammar school, but cannot go to the university, and is earning his living as a miner. Another 13-year-old boy is in school. The family was formerly very well to do. To-day their income for one year is the minimum for the existence of a family of four persons for a period of two weeks.

No. 2—The married couple P., 64 years old, who have been blind for the last ten years, receive from their capital, which they earned by hard work, an income of 3,400 marks a year. They were formerly able to live comfortably on this income. To-day it represents half a week's wages of an unskilled laborer.

No. 3—Frau B., widow of an architect, is obliged to live with her two children of 9 and 6 years, on a yearly income of 2,400 marks. This represents less than two days' earnings of a laborer.

No. 4—The married coupe K. receive 500 marks a month from the rent of their house. The husband, formerly a farmer is suffering from heart trouble. A short time ago he was in bed a number of weeks as a result of poisoning. For six months the wife has been almost completely paralysed. The medicines necessary or their illness cost more than their income. In normal times the income derived rom the rent would have afforded these people a comfortable existence.

No. 5—The widow H., 48 years old, has four children, three of whom still attend school. She has a capital of 100,000 marks. This gives her 15,000 marks yearly. On this the family can live for one week.

These cases are not exceptional or isolated. They are typical of the situation of those people of the middle class in Germany who are dependent on a fixed income from savings. Neither are they German propaganda cases. All are taken from an appeal for the starving of Cologne signed by Mr. J. I. Piggott, Commissioner, The Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission, and Mr. D. W. P. Thurston, C.M.G., H.M. Consul-General, Cologne.

Cologne itself looks prosperous. The shop windows are brilliant, The streets are clean. British officers and men move smartly along through the crowds. The green uniformed German police salute the British officers rigidly.

In the evening the brilliant red or dark blue of the officer's formal mess kit that is compulsory for those officers who dine in Cologne, colours the drab civilian crowds. Outside in the street German children dance on the pavement to the music that comes from the windows of the ball room of the officers' club.

REFINERS OF SUGAR DEFEND OPERATIONS

Claim That Advances in Price of Commodity Due to Increased Cost of Raw Material—Trade to Combat Attacks

ABSORBED INCREASE

OTTAWA, May 15.—(Canadian Press).— That advances in price of sugar were due to the increased price of raw product and that Canadian sugar refiners were to be thanked for absorbing a portion of this increase rather than to be blamed for increases, was the statement of H. R. Drummond, president of the Canadian Sugar Refining Company of Montreal, who appeared before a special House of Commons Committee on Agriculture this morning.

Witness referred to a clause in the budget which removes dumping duty after sugar is increased over the eight cents per pound, as a "staggering blow to refiners"

Mr. Drumond strongly objected to submitting figures of the cost of production by his company.

PROTEST MEETING.

NEW YORK, May 15.— (Canadian Press.) — Plans for a mass meeting to portest against continued attacks on the sugar trade by Government officials were understood to have been discussed at a secret meeting held this morning on the floor of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange. The barring of newspapermen and even messenger boys from the floor caused a flurry of excitement in the trade. At the office of the superintendent of the Exchange it was said no announcement would be made as to the nature of the secret session.

United States Attorney Hayward was conducting the government's case against the Sugar Exchange today and refused to comment on the secret meeting and refused to say whether further subpoenas had been issued for members of the Exchange.

FORMER PETERBORO KNIGHT CURLING FAME CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Flavelle, Now of Lindsay, Observed Their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Monday

The many friends in Peterborough, and the number includes the entire male adult population of the city that have been, are now and may be Curlers, will be happy to know that a renowned veteran of the stane and broom will celebrated on Monday, May 14th His and Her Golden Wedding Anniversary. Mr. J. D. Flavelle, orginally a Peterborough boy, was loaned to Lindsay many years ago and never returned. For the town of this adoption found him such a useful, good whole-souled and entirely satisfactory citizen that wild horses would have hardly been able to part the town and the man.

Prominent always in the commercial and manufacturin life of the town, wise and thoughtful, untiring in his loyalty to his Home Town and jealous of its personality and progress he was selected for important duties in the administration of affairs of the Province and most worthily discharged the trust. But it is as a Curler that he is known from Halifax to Winnipeg, and even in Bonmie Scotland, and his renown as an exponent of the "runnin' shot" has had no equal and mighty few peers. A skip of infinite patience, a master of strategy and tactics on the ice, a leader in whom his rink and his party never lost confidence, and a competitor whom all curlers were proud to meet and—for it has happened—delighted to vanquish. And having done so at once apologized for so doing, as taking an unwarranted liberty.

So the best wishes of a host of friends are due and offered, that the happiness and comfort of a long and active life may run on uninterruptedly for many years to come. And while the personally delivered greetings of brothers, and daughters, nephews and neices and those of the third generation who assembled from Halifax to Vancouver were affectionatley received, a benison from the Curling Fraternity was radioed, wirelessed and carried in thought and suggestion to Lindsay to a man who has ever "did good by stealth and blushed to have it known".

MAKE PETERBORO A CLEANER CITY

Houses Are Being Modernized and Provided With Conveniences.

That Peterboro has more houses without sewer connection than any other city is the sweeping statement made this morninng by the plumbing inspector, Mr. A. G. Metherall.

Two years ago there were 1,350 dwelling houses in Peterboro without sanitary conveniences or sewer connections, whereas in Toronto at that time there were only 350 and in Winnipeg only 400. During last year there were 128 of these unsanitary houses modernized, and up to date this year 38 have had sewer connections installed. A determined effort is being made. the plumbng inspector said, to bring Peterborough up to the standard of other cities in this respect.

RUSSIAN NOTE IS IMPUDENT

And To-Day May See Britain's Government Break Relations With the Soviet.

LONDON, May 15. — (United Press.)— British Conservatives today sought a break with Russia on the strength of the latter's unsatisfactory reply to Great Britain's tei day ultimatum:

Leonid Krassin, Russian trade representative, arrived here this morning. Upon his resuming negotiations with British confreres rests the issue of peace or a break. Krassin, who flies about Europe in a speedy Chasse plane, was delayed by the inclement weather encountered on his trip from Moscow and was forced to make the last leg of the journey by boat from Holland. The Conservative press views the Russian note, which, while conciliatory, insisted that Russia and Britain meet on equal footing and straighten out their differences, as impudent. The Cabinet discussed the Moscow document at a night session.

BUSINESS NOW BETTER SHAPE

Orders Coming in for Small Lots — Requests For Samples.

"Business is slowly improving," a manufacturer told the Examiner today. "but orders are nearly all for small lots."

This manufacturer sells extensively to dry goods stores, departmental stores and mail order houses through out the Dominion, and has his finger on the pulse of the retail business.

Travellers report to him that although business is still far from good it is steadly growing better, especially in Western Ontario.

Numerous requests are received for samples and this is a healthy condition than prevailed a few months ago when interest among buyers could not be aroused to even that extent.

SOPHIE KOHEN IN LAW COURT SEEKING HELP

Youthful Coal Brokress Contended That the C. P. R. Was Interfering With Her Business.

INJUNCTION REFUSED

Sophie Kohen, of Toronto, who might lay claim to the distinction of being one of the few women in the company of middlemen in the coal business, and who supplied Peterborough's municipal fuel yard during the war time winter of extreme scarcity, appeared before Mr. Justice Mowat at Osgoode Hall yesterday asking for an injunction restraining the C.P.R. from interfering with her business.

Miss Kohen is a graduate of the Ontario Ladies' College at Whitby. She has been, she told the court, seven and a half years in the coal business in which she trades under the name of the Canadian Coal Supply Company.

She alleged that the C.P.R. had interfered with her customers, advising them not to pay her accounts. She did not, she said, accuse the directors of the C.P.R. but some of the officials. There was, she said, a negro in the woodpile.

"That is perfectly understandable language," said his Lordship, "but I don't understand your coming here for an injunction."

His Lordship intimated that the proper court to go to was the trial court, where she could marsaal all her evidence.

Her Own Counsel.

When the case was called, and the slender young woman, gowned simply in brown, arose, Mr. Justice Mowat asked the young woman whether she had not counsel.

"The actions of the C.P.R.," she replied, "have been such that your Lordship will readily understand that it will not require an awful lot of counsel to interpret their actions."

Miss Kohen declared her willingness to trust to herself rather than place the case in the hands of someone not so familiar with the facts, whose brain might be twisted.

"Have you done all these papers yourself?" asked Mr. Justice Mowat.

Miss Kohen admitted that she had, even to the typewriting of them.

Right to Apply.

The youth of the fair pleader impressed his Lordship, and he recurred to it during the statement of her case.

"Who told you that you were right to come here?" he asked.

"No one," she answered. "I thought I had a right to get an order to prevent them interfering with my business."

"Have the officials at the Hall helped you to get the papers that are here?" asked his Lordship.

"No," she replied.

"Are you the sole proprietor of the business?"

"I am."

"You seem a very young girl?"

"If you are going to work, you have to begin," she returned.

"What are they doing that you don't like?" asked Mr. Justice Mowat.

"They are trying to run me out of business," she answered. "They go to shippers and say that they should not do business with me. They take my cars of coal and do not make delivery. They take my cars of coal and sell them to their friends; they don't make delivery to me."

She instanced a case where a car of coke sold to the city was involved.

"Did you pay the freight?" asked Mr Justice Mowat.

"The city pays the freight," she returned. "The city has an account with them."

"When did this occur?" asked the court.

"In February."

"Counsel would have told you," said the judge, "that you can't have an injunction for things that are past."

Coal at Cut Rate.

"They are continuing," she declared, and added that one of her customers had said that he could get the coal for next to nothing; the railway would sell it to him.

"I can hardly believe that," said his Lordship.

"I wouldn't say that of the directors of the company, but of certain officials. I wouldn't be fool enough to try make your Lordship or any other judge believe things that are not so, because it would prejudice me."

J. D. Spence, who appeared for the C.P.R., objected that Miss Kohen was introducing statements which were not borne out on the material, and which did not appear in the affidavits.

AN EVENT RARE IN RELIGIOUS ANNALS

Catholic Priest's Address to Protestant Body Described as Epoch-Making.

TORONTO, May 15.—(Canadian Press.)— For an eminent Roman Catholic priest to be the honored guest of an organization of the Protestant church is an event rare in religious annals of this city, and the visit of Rev. Father Minehan last night to the West Presbyterian church to address members of the young people's society was described in the course of the proceedings as "memorable," "epoch making" and "significant." A rousing reception was given to the visitor and there was a good deal of reference to the spirit of fellowship which the visit signified.

"Ideals of citizenship" was the subject of Father Minehan's address, and in his opening remarks he made suitable reference to the fact that he should be invited to such a gathering. At the conclusion of his address, Father Minehan said they were told: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall inherit the kingdom of heaven." But what about peace disturbers, he asked. Well they certainly ought to be at home in a place where there should be no difficulty in finding the printers devil."

A SHAKE-UP FOR LINDSAY POLICE

Council Decides to Advertise for Chief and Night Constable.

LINDSAY, May 15.—As a result of the action of the town council, last night, a complete shake-up in the police department will take lace. The services of Chief Short (who is 71 years of age), will be dispensed with on July 1st, and applicatons will be asked for the postions of chief and night constable. The salary of the Chief is $1500 and the night constable $1200. Reeve O'Reilly will introduce a motion to reduce the salaries to $1000 and $900 respectively. He claimed the police had little to do as the Provincial Police covered the ground.

Bill For Protection of the Home Secretary.

LONDON, May 15. — (Canadian Press). — It was decided by the Cabinet yesterday to introduce in Parliament immediately after Whitsuntide recess an indemnity bill for the protection of Home Secretary Bridgeman, who is named in a suit of Art. O'Brien, president of the Gaelic League in London, and one of those deported to Ireland after the March raids.

CHILDREN'S AID NEGOTIATE FOR NEW SHELTER

Proposed That They Acquire G. H. Popham's Property, Lock and George Streets.

SEVERAL OPTIONS

Negotiations by the Children's Aid Society reached last night within $2,000 of an agreement with Mr. G. H. Popham for the sale of his residence and property fronting on both Lock and George streets, to be converted into a new Shelter and home for the society's wards.

Mr. Popham had given an option of $16,000 until May 31, and after a lengthy discussion of their financial position the society, through Mr. F. H. Dobbin, proposed last night the sum of $12,000. Mr. Popham replied that he was willing to reduce the option price to $14,000, and the conversation was closed at that point, the members of the society hoping that a further consideration of their tentative offer of $12,000 would bring Mr. and Mrs. Popham to accept it.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman presided at last night's special meeting, with the following members present: Ald. Meyers, C. S. Cummer, John Edgar, F. H. Dobbin, Dr. King, G. W. Powell and Mesdames Gibbs, Fanning, Darcy, Knox, Hill, Kimberley, Hopwood and Wright. The particular business for which the meeting was called was the question as to whether, until they could afford to erect a building embodying their own specifications, they should resume occupancy of the old Shelter recently damaged by fire, or buy one of the private residences on which they had obtained options.

These properties were as follows: The William Irwin estate in Ashburnham, upon which a verbal option had been given for $25,000; the Hamilton estate at Auburn, comprising 13 acres, at $15,000; the Louis Yeotes residence at 266 Burnham street, Ashburnham, for $11,000; the old Dawson property, Dufferin and Ross streets, near the Nicholls Oval, for $10,000; and the Popham block at $16,000. Mr. G. R. Langley offered a plot of four acres on Concession and Dunlop street for $2,350 as a special price.

The Society's Treasury.

Mr. Cummer, the society's Treasurer, reported assets amounting to $11,500 in bonds, mortgages and cash, which had been carefully accumulated during a period of twenty years.

Mr Ackerman, Mrs. Fanning and Mrs. Gibbs reported that Mr. Vincent Eastwood, representing the City Trust, custodians of the city property, on which the old Shelter is situated, had proposed to spend in repairs and improvements to the building the money which had been received as insurance.

"If the board would consider that," said Mr. Ackerman, "we could get back into the old home within a month or six weeks. Personally, I think it would be well worth considering. Mr. Eastwood said that the wash-room would be improved in accordance with the wishes of the Matron, the building would be thoroughly repaired and redecorated

DRURY BLAMES HYDRO SCHEME PART OF COST

Calls It a Sound Project—Claims Hon. G. H. Ferguson Lacks Temperance Policy.

CAMPAIGN SPEECH.

OAKVILLE, May 15.—(Canadian Press.)— Vigorous denunciation of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson's erstwhile administration of the Department of Forest and Mines, coupled with sarcastic shaft at his failure to advance a definite temperance policy, stood out in Hon. E. C. Drury's campaign speech in his own riding last night.

His opening remarks were definite of his government's expenditures. The greater part had been incurred, he said in furtherance of schemes such as Hydro Power Commission, which had been launched before the Government took office.

Among items of capital expenditure he singled out Hydro development and Temiskaming and Northern Ontario railway as sound projects which were bringing in substantial returns.

A fair trade is passing in potatoes. Prices were down 3-4c. to 1c. per pound for butter. The cheese market was very quiet.

A SNOWSTORM IN THE WEST OVER THE WEEK-END

Started Out With Rain and Then Wound Up in a Real Snowstorm — Prospects Good.

SPRING SEEDING.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., May 15. — Canadian Press. — Southern Alberta was drenched by rain and snow over the week end, precipitation recorded in Lethbridge being .90 for Saturday night's storm which wound up a regular May snowstorm in the early hours of Sunday morning.The storm came on top of a rainfall of .32 on Friday night. Three inches of snow fell at Cardstone and Pincher Creek while about two inches lay on the ground here at 8 o'clock. The total precipitation at Lethbridge for May to date is 1.30 inches which is 50 per cent. more than fell during the whole month of last year.

Southern Alberta has not received so much of the May rainfall as the southwestern part but from Foremost to Taber west on the Lethbridge Weyburn and Crow's Nest branches of the Canadian Pacific Railway the fall has been heavy.

Rains amounting almost to cloudbursts fell in the Barnwell and Milk River districts on Saturday afternoon. The moisture conditions are now ideal throughout southern Alberta. The late rains will result in some later wheat seeding than usual, while the oat acreage will be considerably augmented. On the whole the prospects are considered brighter to-day than any time since 1910

A considerable increase is expected in corn, sweet clover and other fodder crop acreage. Fall rye is now showing up well. Cool weather prevailed in Manitoba during the past week, but it was favorable for seeding operations. The present conditions are conducive to the development of a good root system and to the conservation of moisture. One week's good weather should enable farmers to put in all their wheat acreage except in the wet districts. Coarse grain seeding is not general in the province yet, probably only 5 to 10 per cent., being completed.

Weather conditions were favorable for seeding in the Saskatchewan district. Twenty five to thirty per cent. of the wheat crop is seeding in the central and southern districts, and 10 to 15 per cent. of the coarse grains while in the north 65 to 75 per cent. of the wheat is seeded, and from 30 to 40 per cent. of the coarse grains. Moisture and soil conditions are favorable but warmer weather is now required.

Rain was general over the south and western portions of Alberta last week and it was very beneficial to the newly seeded land and earlier sown areas, where the grain is now coming through in good shape.More rain is needed at a number of points in the central part of Eastern Alberta, and also in the northwest. In these areas there has been intermittent precipitation, but insufficient to furnish the amount of moisture necessary for immediate needs.

Wheat seeding has been practically completed along the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Ry., and is up in many districts, being 2 inches at Spirit River. Rain is required at all points to assist the growth. The seeding of coarse grain is also nearing completion.

Encouraging reports have been received from all districts of British Columbia where beneficial showers occurred during the past week. Fruit blooms are very heavy and present indications point to a greater crop than in some years past, while the tonnage is estimated at from 10 to 20 per cent. heavier than in 1922. Conditions in the fruit belt are about two weeks earlier than last year.

Stone fruits were affected slightly by the frost last week in some of the districts but the damage was not serious. The Mission district expects to make its first shipment of strawberries in two weeks time.

SPRING SEEDING.

WINNIPEG, May 15. Canadian Press. — Good progress in wheat seeding throughout the Prairie Provinces is reported in the weekly crop report of the Agricultural Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway issued here yesterday evening. Wheat seeding is from 25 to 55 per cent. completed in Manitoba, 25 to 75 per cent. in Saskatchewan, and 75 to 85 per cent. in Alberta. The early wheat is up in many sections of Saskatchewan and is showing a good stand and color. The spring plowing for oats and barley is well under way.

Hamilton Man Appears Before Montreal Court.

MONTREAL, May 15.— (Canadian Press.) — A man giving the name of Wilfrid Hamilton, of Hamilton, Ont., was before the local courts yesterday charged with stealing a bolt of cloth from an East End tailor. He denied the charge and was remanded on $300 bail for enquete May 22.

KINMOUNT MAN WAS THE CHOICE OF CONVENTION

James Mark Will Contest the Riding For the Conservative Cause—Twelve Names Proposed at the Meeting.

LINDSAY, May 14.—A red hot battle was staged at the Liberal Conservative convention in Fenelon Falls to-day when James Mark, merchant, of Kinmount, was selected as the party standard bearer in the forthcoming Provincial election. Twelve names were proposed, but all withdrew save I. E. Weldon, barrister, Lindsay; R. Hawkins, ex-Reeve of Eldon; Thos. Hodgson, of the Hodgson Chemical Co., Lindsay, and James Mark, of Kinmount. Three ballots were taken before Mr. Mark was declared the winner. He is very popular in the north country and will prove a strong candidate.

The Progressives will meet in convention at Fenelon Falls on Tuesday to select a candidate, and another warm fight is expected. The fight will be between Jasper Forman, U.F.O. county director, (and a returned soldier), and Edgar Watson, ex-M.P.P., and chairman of the Hotel Commission. It was expected that Wm. Newman, of Lorneville, the well known dairyman, would be a candidate, but such is not the case. There is quite a strong feeling against Mr. Watson in the farmers' ranks, and it is expected that he will be turned down at the convention.

The Liberals meet in convention at Fenelon Falls on Wednesday, and if a candidate is selected it will likely be ex-Reeve Tiers, of that village.

DRAYTON FIRED FIRST SHOT AT LATEST BUDGET

Amendment Moved By Progressives Demands Reciprocity in Accordance With 1911 Agreement; Increase in British Preference to 50 Per Cent.; and Reduction in the Customs Tariff on Necessaries — Higher Taxes on Unearned Income.

VIEWS ALL PARTIES.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 15.—(Canadian Press).—Debate on the budget opened in the house yesterday. First came Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance in the former government, and chief financial critic of the Opposition: then, Robert Forke, leader of the Progressives, with the expected amendment. Usually, the moving of an amendment to the budget lies with the official opposition —as under the rules of the house, only one motion is permissable to the formal budget motion that the house "do resolve itself into committee on ways and means." This year, Conservatives did not move an amendment and it was from the third party that the amendment and it was from the third party that the amendment came.

The amendment was a challenge to the principle of protection. It declared protection to be unsound and advocated:

(1)—Tariff reductions on the necessaries of life and means of production.

(2) — Immediate increase in the British preference to fifty per cent.

(3)—Reciprocity with the United States on the basis of the 1911 agreement.

In addition, that any resulting loss in revenue should be compensated by higher taxes on unearned income and luxuries.

Sir. Henry Drayton described the budget as a "beautiful bit of camouflage' going north, south, east and west at the same time. It was going to throw a sop here and a sop there and a general kick all round when the final result is obtained. Robert Forke thought there would be disappointment over the budget in many parts of the country. "I for one," he exclaimed, "am unalterably opposed to the principle of protection." The result of the recent by-election in Moose Jaw, with the defeat of the Liberal candidate, was "handwriting on the wall" for the government and comparing prices in the United States and Canada, Mr Forke observed that 'it costs something to be a Canadian sometimes in dollars and cents."

They will appear for trial May 22.

BELIEVE BANDITS USED AEROPLANES

Saskatchewan Police Are Investigating a New Theory.

REGINA. Sask., May 15.—Rather than instituting an airplane patrol to prevent raids on branch banks along the International border, the Saskatchewan provincial police are investigating a theory that the bandits responsible for the robbery of the branch of the bank of Hochelaga at Dollard, on May 9, arrived and departed by airplane.

The theory is gaining owing to the failure to find a single person who actually saw an automobile at any time before, during, or after the raid. At least 50 people saw one or another of the robbers at various times Not one saw a car. Cars seen by people before the raid prove to have been occupied by innocent travellers

SIXTEEN KILLED 100 INJURED IN TEXAS TORNADO

All Deaths Occurred on More or Less Isolated Farms — List May Be Larger When All the Reports Are In.

EARLY MORNING.

COLORADO, Tex., May 15. — (Canadian Press.)—Sixteen dead and 100 injured were reported late yesterday afternoon as a result of the tornado which tore through Mitchell county, south and east of here, early yesterday. The injured are in the hospital, Methodist and Baptist churches and many private homes here. Some were hurt so seriously their deaths are expected.

The tornado descended in Mitchell county between four and five o'clock yesterday morning and caught most of its victims in bed. It levelled buildings and left death and injury in its wake for 30 miles. Starting south of Westbrook, it continued for seven miles through the county and passed just west of Loraine.

All the deaths were in more or less isolated farms. Due to the distance between farms and demoralization of wire communictaion it was expected here that it would be many hours before the entire district could be heard from.

Citizens of towns near the storm swept area rushed first aid, provisions and relief supplies for the victims.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—(Canadian Press.)— Twenty men were arrested yesterday in a raid on Los Angeles headquarters of Industrial Workers of the World and held on charges of criminal syndicalism.

LOWER PRICES ARE EXPECTED BY FRUIT MEN

SUPPLIES ARE UP.

OTTAWA, May 14.— (Canadian Press.)—Giving further evidence before the Special House committee on agriculture last night, J. B. Fairbairn, a fruit grower and shipper of Beamsville, Ont., said he thought the price of grapes would diminish rapidly. At present grapes were yielding a fair return per acre. Dealing with other fruits witness stated that fertilization was one of the fruit growers' problems. Increased freight rates and shortage of manure, together with restrictions against unloading during the summer months, made matters difficult,

"Things that we buy are double the cost," said witness, "and we have to absorb most of the increase such as sales tax, and labor, and yet our selling price is less than in 1914."

"How long can you keep that up?" asked Thomas Sales (Progressive, Saltcoats.)

"One more year will see many of us out of business," witness declared.

The chairman announced that he had received printed statements from the British Columbia Fruit Growers along similar lines to that placed before the committee by Mr. Fairbairn.

The companies already formed are The companies already formed are others are almost up to strength. Quebec, Ottawa, Hamilton, Saskatoon and Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg will be ready to form their companies in a few days.

"The progress which has been made in recruiting for the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve has been satisfactory. This reserve is composed almost entirely of young Canadians between 18 and 22 years of age. They are already showing fine interest in the work and they promise to build up a highly efficient reserve force," adds the announcement.

Hundreds of I.W.W.'s Arrested Yesterday.

G. H. FERGUSON IN STATEMENT ON THE O.T.A.

Would Enforce the Act in the Spirit in Which It Was Passed.

CAMPAIGN SPEECH.

HUNTSVILLE, Ont., May 15. — (Canadian Press.)—Brief statement of his attitude towards the Ontario Temperance Act was made at this centre last night by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson in response to questions from a citizen of this town. Question was: "If you are returned to office will you make any change in the O. T.A. without question being submitted to the people."

"I will answer that frankly," replied Hon. Mr. Ferguson.

"When the Ontario Temperance Act is changed it must be in the way in which it was enacted."

Replying to a second question as to whether he would enforce the act fearlessly, the Conservative leader declared that most of the respect for the act and a great deal of its usefulness has been largely destroyed by the manner in which the Act has been administered by the Drury government.

"If I become Prime Minister," he contineud, "I will follow the course laid down by the late Sir James Whitney and that will be to attempt to create a sentiment which will dictate the manner in which liquor legislation is to be enforced and it will not be to attempt to penalize people or to compel them to take any particular line of thought."

Asked further as to his manner of enforcement, Hon. Mr. Ferguson replied that he would enforce the Act to the letter, but in the spirit in which the Act passed, and not in the spirit of fanaticism.

Addressing the Conservative convention at Bracebridge, which nominated G. W. Ecclestone for the riding, Hon. Mr. Ferguson drew attention to the personnel of the United Farmers in the Government and insisted that they really had no right to call themselves farmers. It was a government which represented only a small portion of the farming community and they were men "who destroyed one of the greatest movements in Ontario," for they were men "who injected virus of party politics" into the movement which began in a purely commercial way.

A COMMUNITY EFFORT.

A farewell concert for the benefit of Miss Agnes Logan, Peterborough's clever young pianist who won so many honours at the Ontario musical competition and who is to visit England this summer to continue her studies, has been announced.

The Examiner mentions this subject editorially because it feels that the concert should be made a community effort to honour a young musician who seems destined to win still greater fame for herself and for her home city.

The date set should be observed by citizens generally, and every effort should be made to give the concert the right-of-way over other events.

Mr. Gliddon declared recently that Miss Logan would one day belong to the world.

At present, however, she belongs to Peterborough and we should be prepared to make this event in her honour a success that will show that this city appreciates a worth-while effort along any noteworthy line by her sons and daughters.

We honour winning athletic teams; we should be equally ready to honour winners in other fields.

The concert on behalf of Miss Logan is commended to readers of the Examiner as a community occasion in which there should be general participation.

A COMMENDABLE CAMPAIGN.

The Ontario Motor League is to be commended upon continuing its campaign to make traffic conditions safer by offering through the Ontario Safety League one hundred and forty cash prizes for the best essays on the subject, "How Children May Help to Avoid Motor Accidents."

The contest, which will close on May 15, is open only to the school children of Ontario, and the compositions must be confined to the subject mentioned.

It is felt that very valuable results followed a similar competition held last year, and that is to be readily believed as it brought the subject of traffic perils before the school children of the Province, among whom many of the accidents recorded have occurred.

The Examiner in endorsing the plan suggests to local school teachers that they would be doing a very important public duty in not only bringing the competition to the attention of their pupils, but in prescribing the subject for a class composition.

The motor car has revolutionized traffic conditions and has made it necessary for the exercise of ever-increasing care and vigilance on the part of motorists and pedestrians alike.

If the school children of the Province can be made to see the need of being careful on the street, a very material advance in the direction of safer conditions will have been made.

By inaugurating a contest of this kind the Ontario Motor League is doing much to accomplish its object.

A DESIRABLE CHANGE.

While the effect on the consumer may possibly mean a slight increase, there is no questioning the fact that Hon. Mr. Fielding has earned the gratitude of the smaller manufacturers and the retailers in the simplification of the Sales Tax announced in his Budget speech.

The system hitherto followed was a cumbersome and vexatious method, expensive to the retailers and not yielding anything like the amount of revenue the expense of collection warranted.

By levying the Sales Tax at the source of supply milliners, confectioners and others who manufacture on a small way will be greatly relieved.

E. M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, is authority for the statement that under the old method retailers such as mentined had to spend $100 a month to keep track of $20 worth of taxes they had to pay the Government.

That is, the cost of collecting the tax was five times the revenue raised.

In addition, the Government had to go to the expense of sending men around periodically to the small manufacturers to check over their books.

All this has been wiped out by the new arrangement, which imposes a tax of 6 per cent. at the source of supply and does away with "pyramiding" and all the defects of the intricate system adopted last year.

The change, one of the most important made by the Budget, appeals to the Examiner as a sensible and business-like one.

FREAK LEGISLATION.

In the passing of freak legislation there seems to be no end.

Bad as we are in this respect in Ontario, we are still, fortunately, a long way behind some of the States in the neighboring Republic, which seem to be obsessed with a mania for attempting to regulate life by legal enactments controlling other people's lives and habits.

The act recently passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature making it illegal for any city or town in the State to adopt daylight saving under the authorization or command of any municipal ordinance is an example.

No matter what may be the opinion about daylight saving, it is certain that summer-time advocates cannot be blocked off by any fool legislation of the kind quoted.

The act is bound to fail. Simply because any community that wants daylight saving has no need of violating the letter of the law.

There is no necessity of passing a municipal ordinance.

All that is needed is for the people to agree among themselves to use the daylight saving.

They are already, by common consent, doing that now.

The Pennsylvania act is one of those joke bills that cannot be enforced, because the spirit of the legislation can be avoided in adhering to the letter.

Governor Pinchot undoubtedly felt that the legislation was bad—but he signed it because he believed it was popular.

It may be among people who do not stop long to think.

Connecticut is almost as bad with a bill that makes the public display of anything but standard time an offence, punishable by a fine of $100.

What will they do to a man whose clock happens to be wrong?

VIEWS ON THE BUDGET.

Close to the People.

The taxpayers will hear with satisfaction that there are no new forms of taxation. New revenue is needed, but the Finance Minister will get along without. In that attitude he comes closer to the people than in any other way. The public expect, and they have a right to expect, that the Government will assume this attitude on many matters—the people are paying taxes enough, and they must have relief.—London Advertiser (Liberal).

Economy Needed.

The Budget is one that might be expected from Mr. Fielding, who, despite any protests to the contrary, is a protectionist at heart and realizes that a certain stability in tariff is needed if we are to have solid business progress.

The chief disappointment in the Budget is the fact that there is a deficit and our national debt is still climbing. However, Mr. Fielding, like all Canadians with any faith or confidence in their country, is optimistic as to the future. He looks for renewed prosperity in the early future. When this improvement comes it should not form an excuse for new expenditures, but any increased revenue should go to reduce our debt. Economy in government and relief for the Canadian taxpayer are both sorely needed.—London Free Press (Conservative).

Will Satisfy Majority.

No Finance Minister of aany Government could frame a Budget that would meet with the approval of every section of the people. Hence it is not to be expected that the Budget which the Hon. W. S. Fielding presented to the House of Commons yesterday will please everybody. Yet it is a Budget which will satisfy the great majority of the people. Because the tariff has been prepared by such a veteran Parliamentarian and financier as Mr. Fielding, Canadians have the feeling that it must be a just tariff. Seventeen Budgets have been presented to the Canadian Commons by Mr. Fielding, who holds the British Empire record in this respect. His former Budgets have been very satisfactory indeed to the country at large, and that of 1923 is the best for the people since the late Government was compelled because of war needs to levy large taxes.

The fact that most of the changes in the tariff are in the way of reductions in taxes indicates that Canada is entering upon a new era of prosperity and that lower taxes will take care of the national requirements. According to the Budget speech, the ordinary revenue during the present fiscal year will yield a surplus of fourteen millions, but the National Railways will require seventy-four millions. Thus the Finance Minister has to secure additional revenue of sixty millions because of the railway deficit.—Kingston Whig (Liberal).

A Protectionist Budget.

Perhaps the severest comment that Mr. Fielding has called for is that he has not balanced his Budget. In his Budget address last year he spoke eloquently and with seeming earnestness upon the need for economy, and said that the time must soon come when we should begin to pay something off the national debt. It was a worthy ideal; but Mr. Fielding's sole contribution toward it since then has been to increase the debt by 50 millions of dollars. In his speech yesterday he did not even pay economy the homage of a pious aspiration toward retrenchment. The position, therefore, is this: There is no provision for any extra revenue, and little promise of reduced expenditure, with the almost certain consquence that we shall find ourselves next year burdened with still greater obligations.

Apart from this failure, the Budget is neither very bad nor very good. It aims to secure a maximum of good for the consumer with a minimum of injury to business. It aims, also, to concede something to the West, without imposition of hardship upon the East. It is a protectionist Budget, as much protectionist as any that Mr. Felding introduced durng the fifteen years of Laurier. In a word, it is Liberal practical allegiance to the National Policy; and if it were accompanied by anything like evidence or promise of bringing expenditure within the orbit of revenue, little important fault could be found with it.—Ottawa Journal (Conservative).

Nothing Heroic.

There is nothing heroic about these measures, but one important provision remains to be considered—the increase of 10 per cent. in the preferential tariff on British goods conveyed without transhipment to Canadian ports. That should result in an improvement in the trade of Canadian ports, and is in the right direction of encouraging inter-imperial commerce. The flirtation with trade reciprocity with the United States will be differently viewed. It will end, no doubt, with being jilted once again. Quite obviously, Uncle Sam is fully persuaded of the merits of high protection, and in self-defense Canada must follow suit, whatever may be the individual views of Finance Ministers.—Hamilton Spectator (Independent).

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

If Col. Herb. Lennox is not to be a candidate a good many North York electors will not believe the present election campaign is official.

J. J. Morrison has made a campaign speech without even mentioning Premier Drury. There is no danger of that happening at any Opposition meeting.

The Farmer bloc in the United States are stoutly opposed to any suggestion of reciprocity. But they may not always be in the saddle.

A saxophone endurance contest is suggested. The League of Nations ought to deal with that question.

Trotzky declares that the Red army is ready for war. No one doubts that after the record of killing it has set up.

Mr. Fielding forgot to put a tax on marathon dancing contests.

Seeing that they were boxing for the Milk Fund, it might be quite proper to say that the heavyweight winners in New York on Saturday won with a milk punch.

Syrup Pepsin Loved By Hosts of Babies

Half a teaspoonful will make a fretful youngster happy and playful

THE mother has her choice of many remedies for her baby's minor ills, but she should be careful which remedy she selects lest she do the child harm. What might be safe for herself may do injury to an infant. You will find that if the little one cries and doesn't want to play that its bowels are constipated. First look carefully to the diet and give the child one-half teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin. You will then see results in a few hours. You will not have to force it on babies or children: they actually ask for it, it is so pleasant-tasting and free from griping.

Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. The ingredients are stated on the package. It is a mild, gentle vegetable laxative that everyone finds effective and pleasant. It is better for you and yours than purgatives, coal-tar drugs, or salt waters and powders, which may concentrate the blood and dry up the skin; or mercurial calomel, which may salivate and loosen the teeth.

Use a safe laxative like Syrup Pepsin, and especially for the children, for invalids, growing girls, nursing mothers, elderly people, and persons recently operated upon who need bowel action with the least strain. Mrs. H. Lefever of Medicine Hat, Alberta, always gives her little girl Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin, and Mrs. May Stephen Sharpe of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., is never without it in her home. Your druggist will supply you, and it costs only a cent a dose. Try it in constipation, colic, biliousness, flatulency, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try my Laxative Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 23 Caldwell Building, Toronto, Ont. Do it now!

FARMER SETTLERS LAND FROM LINER

QUEBEC, May 15.—(Special).—The steamer Marvale, five days late on account of ice conditions in the Straits of Cabot, in command of Capt. Lewis from Glasgow, has arrived at Quebec, with 685 passengers including 164 cabin and 521 third class. The latter all new settlers of the farming class, with the exception of twenty seven domestics, booked for Saskatchewan, and a small compliment of mechanics. These new arrivals were partly Scotch and partly Irish, the former embarking at Glasgow and the latter at Belfast, and a splendid lot of new arrivals who were landed and conducted to immigration buildings for inspection, after which they entrained for their western destinations on a C. P. R. special. The delay of the ship was rather enjoyed by the passengers who had a gala time on the voyage. Impromtu concerts, whist parties and dancing was included in one one of the features was a masonic meeting attended by sixty masons, and held in the ships dining-room, of course, this lacked the full ritual of masonary and was simply fraternal gathering.

Talk of a Gala Day on July 1 in Benefit of the Fire Brigade—Personals

LAKEFIELD, May 15.—An act of good citizenship would be to get together a group or committee of public spirited ctiizens who would arrange for a gala day on July 1, as a benefit occasion for the fire brigade and the band. A real good day with a full programme could be staged, would cost the individual but a trifle and would attract many outsiders from other towns. A baseball match in the morning with a regatta in the afternoon and perhaps a band concert at night would make a day worth while and two organizations, both a credit to the village, would benefit. Citizenship means service and there are enough capable men and women in the village to run this off and raise a good sum in benefit of the village in every way.

Stop Debt Additions.

Robert Forks congratulated Mr. Fielding on delivering the budget speech but said that he could not speak with commendation of the substance of the speech. He felt satisfied that the members of the Progressive party had not much to be thanful for in the budget. "It is simply a matter of standing pat," he said.

The "Liberal promises of 1919," had become almost a hackneyed phrase. Mr. Forks declared himself most disappointed with Mr. Fielding's reference to "finality and stability of the tariff."

Labor Dissatisfied.

J. S. Woodsworth (Labor, Winnipeg C.) submitted that the most vital question before Canadians today was an adequate administration of the country's natural resources. He suggested the time had arrived when some radical adjustment in the whole economic system was needed.

It was well, perhaps, that the Minister of Finance had come out plainly in favor of tariff stability. There was no question that the government was committed to very much the same policy as the government it succeeded. Essentially, the Budget revealed the intention to stand by what had been long known as the "National Policy."

But, proceeded Mr. Woodsworth, the people were looking for light, and wondering from what direction the light would break. Clearly it was not from the benches occupied by the Liberal party.

Mr. Woodsworth described the Budget changes as being made in the interests of those who were well-off rather than in the interests of those possessed of small means, and advocated a capital levy to pay the national debt.

Ignore Country.

John Pritchard (Progressive, N. Wellington) held that if we looked at the result of the protective policy, as shown by conditions to-day, we must come to the conclusion that there was something wrong with it.

The policies of past governments appeared to be to build up the towns and cities at the expense of the country. "My policy is, look after the agriculturists in an agricultural country and then you will build up the towns and cities," said Mr. Pritchard.

Liberals Are Pleased.

Fred. Stork (Liberal, Skeena) expressed satisfaction with the contents of Mr. Fielding's Budget. The reciprocity principles outlined were a step toward realization of better trade relations with the country to the south. In tackling the sugar situation as he had done, Mr. Fielding had shown his interest in the problems of the housewife. The method proposed by Mr. Fielding would be more efficacious than would boycotts such as had been organized in the United States.

Her Heart Skipped Every Third Beat

Mrs. James Burleigh, 248 King St. E., Chatham Ont., writes:—"I think it my duty to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me.

I suffered for years with palpitation of the heart, my nerves were very bad, and I could not be left alone at any time. I doctored for over a year, and the doctor said my heart was very bad as it skipped every third beat.

I gave up, just at this time, and then my mother advised me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, saying my eldest brother had been relieved by using them when he was very bad with his heart and nerves. I got a box and started to take them, and when I had used it I felt a lot better; could sleep a little and felt stronger. I continued taking them for about three months, and felt better than I had for years.

When I think of the misery and suffering I went through before I started Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I feel like letting everyone know what they did for me."

CITY STRICKEN BY WATER AND FLAMES

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 15. — Hot Springs, the city of many disasters, was stricken last night as never before, when water and flames united in general devastation that left death and disaster in its wake. How many are dead is unknown.

Water in torrents, raging like mad, split the city into three sections. Flames followed in the path of the flood and at nightfall water covered all sections before a summary could be made. There was not a body reported at the morgue late last night. But there were resucers whose heroism deserves great praise.

The entire city of Hot Springs is endangered by fire which followed a cloud burst and tornado, according to reports received here last night by American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Several persons are reported burned to death in the fire which destroyed Grand Rapids school. The Marquerite hotel has been destroyed.

ANOTHER DECLINE PRICE OF SUGAR

TORONTO, May 15 (Canadian Press). — What will doubtless be good news to the housewives is the announcement of a decline of 40 cents per hundred pounds in the wholesale price of sugar, the first practical effects of the new Budget tariffs.

"It is pretty safe to say that this decline is due to the effect of the Budget, providing for a reduction of the tariff on sugar," a prominent sugar broker told the Globe last night.

From $11.44 per hundred, the price declined to $11.04 per hundred yesterday.

As to whether a further decline may be expected in the near future, it is imposible to state with any degree of certainty, owing to the generally unsettled condition of the market.

ANOTHER MYSTERY IS ADDED TO LONG LIST UNSOLVED PROBLEMS

BURIED IN A HURRY.

BRIGHTON, May 15.—The farm of Carman Baker, about one and a half miles from the village, has for years been voted as the home of one of the finest herds of thoroughbred Holstein cattle in Ontario, and as a standing illustration of what one man may accomplish when he devotes his energies to modern methods of agriculture. And now the Baker farm has had additional fame thrust upon it by the discovery last week of a human skeleton on the premises, a discovery that has been reported to the Department at Toronto and which means another mystery added to the long list of unsolved problems now before the Canadian public.

One of Mr. Baker's prize cows, valued at $3,000, contracted blood poisoning and died. The animal was insured for $1,000 and the owner proposed to give her a fitting resting place. He chose for the grave a sandy knoll in his orchard not more than 100 yards from his barn, and set one of his men to do the digging. The latter had not got down two feet below the surface when he came across a human skull. The earth was carefully removed and an entire skeleton of a full grown man or woman was revealed. All traces of flesh had disappeared from the frame, but the bones were still so hard as to lead to the conclusion that the body had not lain many years where it was found.

The Coroner Investigates.

Mr. Baker at once notified Dr. F. M. Dure, coroner, at Brighton, who drove out to the farm to investigate. It was evident that the body had been buried in a hurry, for aside from the shallow excavation, it had evidently been forced face downward into the grave. When an attempt was made to remove it the skeleton fell to pieces. Coroner Dure carefully collected all the bones and removed them to his office in Brighton. He told an Examiner representative yesterday that so far he is unable to give an opinion as to how long the body had been buried. He purposes to put the bones together and he will then be in a position to form an estimate and to determine whether the remains are those of a man or a woman. In the meantime he has made a report of the case to the authorities at Toronto and hopes that the affair will be given the interest publicly by the newspapers so that anyone able to do so may be able to shed some light on the mystery. The cranium of the skeleton is filled with sand and this must be carefully removed before a complete examination is made.

Mr. Baker's Theory

Mr. Baker, the owner of the farm, has a theory. The orchard is on a hill separated from Brighton Bay by a swamp about one hundred yards across. Mr. Baker says that any person or persons with a body to dispose of secretly could easily come across the bay in a boat and land at the foot of his orchard. The hill which was chosen as a burying ground was the first dry land they would reach and the sandy soil was easy to dig for a depth of about a foot where solid clay was reached. He thinks that those who disposed of the remains may have landed at night for the gruesome task and found the subsoil too hard to dig further. At any rate, the position of the skeleton would indicate a hurried burial.

Working the Orchard.

Like every good farmer, Mr. Baker carefully cultivated his orchard every year. The wonder is that in these operations the skeleton was not discovered long ago. The body could have been buried without the fresh excavation being noticed in soil that was recently plowed and harrowed.

Another Theory.

Louis Vamvicklin, who is baggageman at the Grand Trunk Station here, is a brother-in-law of Mr. Baker and three years ago helped the latter when he was erecting a new barn. That same summer Mr. Vamvicklin plowed the orchard and he declares that his furrows were turned beam deep and that if the skeleton had been there at the time he most certainly would have unearthed it.

Mr. Baker's Farm.

Mr. Baker has lived on this farm for over 25 years. He was born in Prince Edward County, but when nine yeas old he came to Brighton with his parents, his father engaging in business as an apple dealer. When the boy was grown he and his father jointly purchased 17 acres of land ,which formed the nucleus of the present fine property. Later the son bought out his father's share and decided to embark in the breeding of thoroughbred Holsteins. He secured two cows as a start, but one of the animals proved a disappointment, so that he really made a beginning with one. His herd now numbers 35 head, and the original farm of 17 acres has been added to at intervals, until he now has 155 acres all in the highest state of cultivation His barn is one of the best appointed in Ontario, costing, with the two silos, $10,000. He paid for the building by selling two cows, which brought him over $11,000. Careful selection and developing the milk strain in his cows brought Mr. Baker's herd up to the fancy prices above noted.

Nine Years in Business.

It is nine years since Mr. Baker made his first venture in the cattle business. At the sale of thoroughbred Holsteins held last winter in Belleville, his stock commanded the highest figure. When he appeared for the first time at the annual sale in Toronto, four of his animals brought him in an even $10,000. He does not exhibit at the big fall exhibitions, but every year at the Brighton Fair he carries off first honours in his class.

The sire of his herd, purchased from Senator Hardy, of Brockville, cost him $6,000, and is insured for $4,000.

The star producer in Mr. Baker's barn is Princess Lyons De Kol, whose dam was sold for $6,500. Senator Hardy bought two of her daughters, one for $3,000 and the other for $3,500. Four generations of this family have an average record of over 30 pounds of butter-fat in seven days. Another star in the herd, now three years old, as a two-year-old produced 20,040 pounds of milk, or 828 pounds of butter in a year. His cow, Kate Rose Law, stands second in Ontario as a milk producer, her record for seven days being 855 pounds and 133 pounds for one day.

Believes in Sweet Clover.

Mr. Baker filled one of his silos with sweet clover last year, his first trial of this fodder. He says that it beats corn ensilage, in his opinion, as a milk producer, and his cattle thrive on it. He will raise it more extensively than ever this year. He looks after his herd himself and personally attends to all the tests. His cream separator is operated by a gasoline engine.

Speaking of champion milk producers recalls the fact that the champion of America, May Echo Sylvia, now owned by Senator Hardy, of Brockville, was raised by Milton E. Maybee, M.P., of Trenton, who purchased her when she was a calf for $75. He sold her to Senator Hardy for $1.000, a record price at that time. The cow has proved a gold mine to her present owner, one of her progeny having been sold to an American stock breeder for the unparalleled sum of $106,000.

ANOTHER OFFER FROM GERMANY

Thought That Next Proposals to Allies Will Contain More Guarantees— Cabinet Meeting

BERLIN, May 15. (Untied Press.)—Germany now proposes to make a new Reparations offer to the allies.

With replies from France and Belgium, Italy and Great Britain in hand, all rejecting the Cuno government's latest offer, the Cabinet has decided to try again.

The next proposal will contain more guarantees but the limit of 30 billion gold marks fixed in the most recent offer, would not be raised.

At least this was the decision thus far, which it is possible may be changed by another Cabinet meeting this afternoon before the next note's context is finally agreed upon. More over Chancellor Cuno is to remain in office as well as Foreign Minister Rosenbaum.

The mark reached fifty thousand to the dollar unofficially yesterday, and is expected to hit one hundred thousand by July if things keep on as they are at present.

RITCHIE AFTER TITLE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 15.—(Canadian Press.)—Willie Ritchie, former lightweight champion of the world, announced here last night that he would soon come back and would shortly challenge Benny Leonard for a title bout.

Young People Donate $50 to Fresh Air Fund — Teams and Men Working on New School.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 15. — President John Storie presided at the regular weekly meeting of the Young Peoples' Society of St. Andrew's church last night and after the opening devotional exercises the matter of making the usual grants from the funds of the society was taken up. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of over $100. It was decided to donate $50 to the fresh air fund raised by the Presbyterian church every year to give mothers and their children who reside in cramped quarters in Toronto, an outing during the hot weather at the summer camp maintained by the church at Lake Scugog. A similar grant was made by this society last year.

It was also decided by unanimous vote to give $15 for the purchase of new hymn books for the use of the Sunday school and to purchase 50 hymn books for the church, these to be handed to strangers and visitors by the ushers at each service.

The last regular meeting for the summer of the society will be held two weeks from last night, but during the vacation special gatherings and probably a picnic will be devised with the object of keeping the young people together until activities are resumed in the fall.

The topic of the evening, Service in the Church, was ably dealt with by Miss E. Meiklejohn, one of the most efficient members of the choir, and who is, besides, the pianist of the society. At the conclusion of Miss Meiklejohn's paper, Rev. C. F. McIntosh, complimented the speaker on her excellent address and as instances of really worthy service, cited to the action of the society in making the donations referred to. The grant of $50 to the fresh air fund he considered especially commendable.

Mr. McIntosh suggested another form of service that might be taken up by the young people, the welcoming of strangers to the church, especially in the evening. He felt sure that in this way the attendance could be increased. He also recommended that the members of the society take an active part in the annual garden party which will be held on the church grounds in June. They could volunteer to undertake a certain share of the work in connection with this function.

Improvements in Church.

Extensive improvements are being made in St. Andrew's church buildings and grounds. The town water is being piped into the building and two lavatories are being added. A sewer is being constructed from the church to connect with the one from the manse. The town council is replacing the old wooden sidewalk on the manse side from Ranney to Booth street, with a cement walk. These improvements are well advanced and when completed the property will be modern in every sense.

Special Musical Service.

The choir next Sunday evening under the direction of Fred Wigglesworth, will next Sunday evening render the cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," by Maunder. The evening discourse will be dispensed with.

On the following evening the choir will give the same cantata at Sterling and on Tuesday evening will render it in the church at Burnbrae. At both places special programmes will be put on by local talent.

Netx Sunday morning Rev. C. F. McIntosh will preach to the Orangemen, who will hold their annual church parade to St. Andrew's.

Work on New School.

Contractor Brown has a large force of teams and men working on the excavation for the new school and the laying of the foundation will soon begin. Every effort will be made to have the building completed as soon as possible. It is expected that work will soon be started on the new dam which the Hydro Commission propose to build here so that there is a prospect of a busy summer for the working men of Campbellford.

League Season Opens.

The session for the Northumberland Baseball League opens Wednesday with Campbellford at Hastings; Brighton at Trenton; Colborne at Orland and Roseneath at Warkworth. As there are nine teams in the league the Harwood nine will have an off day. The next game will be played on the twenty-fourth. A large number of local fans are expected to go to Hastings to-morrow to cheer the Campbellford team on to victory.

ORLAND TEAM IS READY FOR FIELD

Season Opens Wednesday With a Game at Home.

ORLAND, May 15.—The following players will compose the regular team that will represent Orland in the Northumberland Baseball League this year: Lisle Way, pitcher and captain; Lex. Moran, catcher; Allan Austin, first base; Harry Belford, second base; Ed. Houlihan, third base; Wm. Moran, short-stop; Vincent Moran, left field; Roy Plumpton, centre field; Frank Moran, right field; Wade Thompson and Leonard Scott, substitute pitchers.

Frank Moran last year was regarded as the best player in the team. Lisle Way, the regular pitcher, is also a good man at bat. His father, H. F. Way, who is cheesemaker at the Hilton Factory, is so enthusiastic over the game that he has promised his son $5 for every home run he makes during the season.

The team opens the season on the home diamond Wednesday, their opponents being the Colborne nine, winnrs of the League championship last year.

"I Avoided an Operation Appendicitis Disappeared"
Mrs. James Wells, Udora, Ont., writes:—

"I took a severe pain in my right side. It was very bad at times. I tried oils and tablets without gaining any relief. The doctor pronounced it chronic appendicitis. I dreaded an operation and a friend advised Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I used them and not only obtained relief from pain, but I believe it has completely freed me of appendicitis, as it is now over a year since I have had any of the old symptoms."

BOLSHEVIK SCHOOL FOUND IN WELLAND

Children Taught Devil Worship, Say Roman Catholic Priests.

WELLAND, May 15.—(Canadian Press)— That children of Russian and Polish parentage are being taught Bolsheviki doctrines, undermining of Churches and worship of God was told Welland ministerial association yesterday afternoon by Rev. Father Charles Barron whose charges were supported by Rev. Father Zaro Shunski, Priest of Local Russian Church.

Father Barron told of Death threat made against one of parishoners if latter did not cease church attendance and sent his children to alleged Bolshevist school and stated that he had information that picture of devil had been shown children as representing God. He said schools held two hour sessions each day after close of public schools and that forty children attended one and sixteen other. Both priests states that similar schools existed in Thorold and St. Catherines and Father Barron expressed his belief that mortgage of two in this city had been paid off with Soviet money received from Winnipeg.

Chinese Government Apologizes to Canada.

OTTAWA, May 15. Canadian Press. — Questioned in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon Premier King said that a telegram had been received from Lowe, Buswall & Company, asking whether or not the Canadian Government would demand satisfaction from China for the detention of Mr. Lowe.

Mr. King added that an enquiry was now being made into the circumstances, pointing out that conditions in China were very much disturbed. Following the release of Mr. Lowe the government of China had made some apology. But the government of Canada was, notwithstanding making representations "with a view of seeing what reply the Chinese government wish to make."

OTTAWA, May 15.— (Canadian Press.)—Miss A. Belton of Toronto, has been appointed to the teaching staff of the Ottawa Collegiate Institute.

ARE MOBILIZING FEMALE FORCES

TORONTO, May 15.—(Canadian Press) — Local church unionists state that an attempt is being made by anti-unionists to stage "suffragette raid" on the Presbyterian General Assembly which meets in Port Arthur, June 6. Unionists say that for some months anti-unionists have been trying to mobilize the female forces of the church for the purpose of fighting the projected union and most of their meetings are now being held under auspices of the Women's League of Presbyterian Church. It is stated that a petition is being quietly circulated throughout the church with the object of securing as many signatures as possible against union, and it is understood that this petition will be presented to the General Assembly by a deputation of women.

Dentists Discussed Question of Ethics.

TORONTO, May 15.—(Canadian Press.)—The question of dental ethics came in for considerable discussion last evening in the business session of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, held in connection with the annual convention of the Ontario Dental Association. It was stated that five dentists who advertised in Toronto were flouting professional standards and although four of the men summoned before the Board had not been suspended, such conduct could not be allowed to pass unchallenged in future.

It was also stated that abuse of the privilege under the Temperance Act on the part of the members would call for prompt action, and members engaging unlicensed help would be checked up.

IMPORTANCE AND NEED OF MEDICAL MISSIONS

MILLBROOK, May 15.—The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist chuch held their first meeting of the church year at the parsonage, the wet weather lessening th attendance somewhat, but not the interest nor enthusiasm of those who wre present. The president, Mrs. S. T. Tucker, occupied the chair, and gave the opening devotional leaflet, "The Healing of the Nations," emphasizing the importance and need of medical missions. During the response of the "Watch Tower' Miss E. Hetherington, superintendent of Christian Stewardship gave a most helpful reading, "Henry Milltop's Visit to Timothy Worthyman', which illustrated clearly the value of recognizing the Lord's claim to at least one-tenth of our possessions.

A Questonaire on the annual report, by which the following took part, Mrs. G. W. Sayles, Mrs. W. Turner, Mrs. Freelove, Miss M. E. Hetherington, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. F. Smith, proved very interesting and profitable. At only one meeting each year, usually in May, is this "Quiz" taken up, when a general view of the work being done by the W.M.S. in both home and foreign fields is gained, and it is always thoroughly enjoyed by the members.

A pleasant social hours was spent before the gathering dispersed. The next meeting will be held in June after delegates have returned from the Branch Meeting in Cobourg, when the report of that gathering will be heard. It is expected to hold this meeting at the home of Mrs. R. Lunn, Carmel.

TRESPASSERS CAUSE ENGINEER'S GREY HAIRS

With the advent of good weather and the drying up of railroad track, trespassers are becoming more frequent, and the railway detectives are on the war path. Engineers claim that many of their grey hairs are caused by people walking on the track and refusing to leave the exact centre of the ties until the last possible moment before the train arrives at the spot where they are.

Trouble to the railway authorities and police court proceedings for the offenders will be prevented by a respect for the "no trespassing" signs on the railroad tracks.

CHOIR CONCERT AT ST. PAUL'S

(By Jeannette).

A unique opportunity was afforded music-lovers of the city last evening who attended the anniversary concert at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church of comparing the music of modern times with musical compositions of a century back. Probably the majority of the very appreciative audience, numbering between nine hundred and a thousand people, who last evening heard the cantata, "Spring Rapture," composed in 1922 by Harvey B. Gaul, and the pastoral, "The May Queen," composed a hundred years ago by Sir W. Sterndale Bennett, would be inclined to give the palm to the last-named work.

Spring a hundred years ago must have been a merrier season than dwellers in the twentieth century have any experience of. To depict the lusty, robust birth of the year in a hardier age, a virile, laughing lad with sparkling eye and springing step might well represent the spirit of "The May Queen," as compared with the pale maiden singing softly and scattering flowers, in the measures stanzas of "Spring Rapture."

"The May Queen," which might well be reproduced in the Grand Opera House, where it would have the setting and costuming and atmosphere it seems to demand, has a dramatic background. While the modern composer of "Spring Rapture" is seemingly content to talk about the verdant growth of the year in smoothly flowing blank verse which progresses in ordered sequence through the various natural manifestations surrounding the waking from winter sleep of a peaceful Mother Earth, the composer of "The May Queen" gives a romantic setting to his vernal ecstasies, linking the spring of life with the spring of the year, making Nature's unfolding harmonize with his tale of youth and love under the greenwood tree.

"Spring Rapture," a cantata for treble voices alone, is a descriptive thing of freely-flowing harmonies, a bright carol of spring sung in unison. Forty-two feminine singers in a white-robed choir, including fourteen of the younger girls from the church's Sunday School, who made their first appearance in public last evening, took part in "Spring Rapture," with the contralto singer, Mrs. Florence Fenton-Box, as soloist. The fresh, sweet light voices soared up and out in the undulating melody of the pretty vernal music, in a harmoniously blended volume of sound, their attention to attack and release, their clear, high volume of sweet melody making their chorale-cantata a distinct credit to themselves and their teacher, Mr. Martin B. Chenhall, who conducted the entire programme.

A male chorus, Schubert's "Omnipotence," followed, with twenty-one members of the male choir taking part, assisted by Miss Agnes Adie, soprano, who took the obligato. This was a majestic rendition, with the impressive sonority of the deep voices forming a dignified background for the high, pure tones of the soprano.

"The May Queen" is a production that gives tremendous scope to the vocal and dramatic powers of its soloists. It has a theatrical atmosphere heightened by the fuller use of the orchestra, which rounds out and fills in the pauses in the action. The brazen notes in the instrumentation are used effectively here, and the music itself is of more heavy and vigorous quality, with intricate and difficult tempo and phrasing. The demands made by the composer were last evening adequately met by the orchestra, the soloists and the tuneful chorus of over sixty voices. Although the theme is worked out mainly by the solo singers, the choral work was outstanding in excellence. Volume and quality was apparent in the swelling voices, joining in with life, color and vim in the merry music. "With a laugh as we go round" was particularly attractive, a May-pole dance interlude, in frolicsome, vivacious rhythm.

The story of "The May Queen" centres around the lovers of the Queen of the May, (Miss Agnes Adie) who is pursued by rival suitors. The Lover (Mr. Albert Downing) is favored until the Captain of the Foresters (as Robin Hood) Mr. Frank Oldfield, appears, and charms her fickle fancy. The plot progresses through a series of reproaches to the "stony-hearted maiden" from her love-lorn swain, and bravado on the part of the intruder, culminating in a quarrel between the rivals. Then the Queen (Mrs. Fenton-Box) appears, and in stern accents straightens matters out, sending the bold invader about his business and chiding the frivolous maiden. "And the cloud hath passed away" is the finale to the attractive pastoral romance, with the raptures of the awakening year in its merry choruses. "Wake with a smile, o' month of May," and "Hark! their notes the hauthoys swell."

The visiting artists made a splendid impression in their delineation of the lovely music, and in the programme of songs which they generously rendered in turn at its conclusion. Eminently suited to their several parts, their four fine voices were heard to excellent advantage in the tone pictures of "The May Queen," with its varying demands in recitative, solo, duet and trio. Life, color and vim were apparent in the work of the different soloists. A soprano voice of wide range and power and sweetness under perfect control, an organ of strong, clear, lyric beauty, whose sustained, pure, soaring finales were delivered with easy freedom is the possession of Miss Agnes Adie, while Mrs. Florence Fenton-Box has a vibrant contralto, of rich, creamy depth and full, rounded strength.

Of Mr. Frank Oldfield, much has already been said in Peterborough, and his performance last evening merely enhanced his reputation as an artist, whose attractive personality and ease in singing makes his music a constant delight. The robust vigor of the part of Robin Hood suited Mr. Oldfield's style to perfection, his warm, rich voice, sonorous and true, swelling out in resonant volume.

Mr. Albert Downing is not so well known to Peterborough audiences, but his singing last night was accorded the measure of hearty appreciation which it deserved. A true artist, capable of expressing the finest shades of feeling with his splendidly-trained voice, there is the ringing, echoing quality of a bugle in his clear, high intonations and the piercing sweetness of a flute in his minor ,silver-sweet notes.

At the conclusion of the "May Queen," Mr. Downing's solo numbers were "Sunrise and You" and "If Winter Comes." Mrs. Fenton-Box sang "Springtime is Nigh," and "All For You," and Miss Agnes Adie gave in Italian "The Kiss" and Tosti's "Gooy-bye." Each of the visiting artists was accorded a hearty encore, but, running true to form, the audience brought Mr. Oldfield back for a third song after his rendition of "Invictus" and "I Passed By Your Window."

A special word must be said for the orchestra, a twelve-piece organization which, by its efficient support, and splendid playing, added immeasurably to the success and effectiveness of the double cantata programme. Led by Mr. Martin Chenhall, it was composed of the following players: Pianists, Miss Agnes Logan and Miss Isabel Donnelly; organ, Fred Chenhall; violin, G. Howarth, (leader), T. McKeown; clarinets, W. Dyer, W. Townsend; cornet, W. Hughes; horn, H. Wood; trombone, B. Robinson; bass viol, W. Cunningham; 'cello, Martin Chenhall, Jr.

For the solo numbers, at the conclusion of the cantata, Mrs. F. Oldfield and Mr. M. B. Chenhall acted as accompanists. In the pastoral, "The May Queen," a brief vocal solo was taken very creditably by Miss Daisy Davidson.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

Don Mike nodded and rode over to Agua Caliente Basin to visit Bill Conway. Mr. Conway was still on the job, albeit Don Mike hazarded a guess that the old schemer had spent almost two hundred thousand dollars. His dam was, as he facetiously remarked, "taking concrete shape," and he was rushing the job in order to have the structure thoroughly dry and "set" against the coming of the winter rains. To his signal relief, Farrel asked him no embarrassing questions regarding the identity of the extremely kind-hearted person who was financing him; he noticed that his young friend appeared a trifle pre-occupied and depressed. And well he might be. The secret knowledge that he was obligated to Kay Parker to the extent of the cost of this dam was irritating to his pride; while he felt that her loving interest and sympathy, so tremendously manifested, was in itself a debt he would always rejoice in because he never could hope to repay it, it did irk him to be placed in the position of never being able to admit his knowledge of her action. He prayed that Bill Conway would be enabled to complete the dam as per his contract; that Judge Morton would then rush to trial Conway's suit for damages against Parker for non-performance of contract; that Conway would be enabled immediately to reimburse himself through Parker's assets which he had attached, repay Kay and close the transaction.

On November fifteenth Danny Leighton announced that Panchito was "right on edge" and, with a few weeks of experience in professional company, fit to make the race of his career. The winter meeting was already on at Tia Juana and, with Farrel's consent, Panchito was lovingly deposited in a well-padded crate mounted on a motor truck and transported to El Toro. Here he was loaded in an express car, and, guarded by Don Mike, shipped not to Tia Juana, as Parker and his trainer both supposed he would be, but to San Diego, sixteen miles north of the international boundary—a change of plan originating with Farrel and by him kept a secret from Parker and Danny Leighton. With Panchito went an ancient Saratoga trunk, Pablo Artelan, and little Allesandro Trujillo, ragged and barefooted as usual.

Upon arriving in San Diego Don Mike unloaded Panchito at the Santa Fe depot. Gone now ere the leg bandages and the beautiful blanket with which Danny Leighton had furnished Panchito at starting. These things proclaimed the race-horse, and that was not part of Don Mike's plan. He led the animal to a vacant lot a few blocks from the depot and, leaving him there in charge of Pablo, went up town to the Mexican consulate and procured passports into Baja California for himself and Allesandro. From the consulate he went to a local stock-yard and purchased a miserable, flea-bitten, dejected saddle mule, together with a dilapidated old stock saddle with a crupper, and a well-worn horse-hair hackamore.

Returning to the depot, he procured his old Saratoga trunk from the station master and removed from it the beautiful black-leather, hand-carved, silver mounted stock saddle he had won at a rodeo some years previous; a pair of huge, heavy, solid silver Mexican spurs, with tan carved-leathern straps, and a finely plaited hand-made rawhide bridle, sans throat-latch and brow-band and supporting long, cruel, solid silver Spanish bit with silver chain chin-strap and heavily embossed. In this gear he arrayed Panchito, and then mounted him. Allesandro mounted the flea-bitten mule, the old Saratoga trunk was turned over to Pablo, and with a fervent "Adios, Don Miguel. Go with God!" from the old majordomo, Don Miguel and his little companion rode south through the city toward the international boundary.

PUTS HEALTH AND VIM INTO WOMEN

So Says Mrs. MacPherson of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brantford, Ont.—"I was always tired and the least exertion would put me out for a day or two. I had a pressing pain on the top of my head, pain in the nape of my neck, and when I stooped over I could not get up without help, because of pain in my back. I did not sleep well and was nervous at the least noise. I keep house, but I was such a wreck that I could not sweep the floor nor wash the dishes without lying down afterwards. A friend living near me told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her so I began to take it. With the first bottle I felt brighter and got so I could wash dishes and sweep without having to lie down. Later I became regular again in my monthly terms. I have taken ten bottles all told and am now all better. I can truly say that your wonderful medicine cannot be beaten for putting health and vim into a woman."—Mrs. JAMES H. MACPHERSON, 309 Greenwich St., Brantford, Ont.

HOW TO SLEEP ON A BARE FLOOR

IT is more a matter of SLEEP, than of bed or board.

Some people can sleep sitting up, standing up, even while walking.

Many people can't sleep in the softest of downy beds; and all of us suffer occasionally from nerve-racking, wearing, tiring wakefulness at night.

There is always a reason for sleeplessness. Usually, it is a "sour" stomach, a liver that has "lain down" on the job, congested bowels, or biliousness.

Then, just before retiring, take Beecham's Pills. They soothe an uneasy stomach, encourage the organs of digestion and elimination to natural activity, and assure restful sleep no matter what!

MATERNAL IMPRESSIONS

One would have supposed that the truth about maternal impressions was now fairly well known. One would have thought that due to much enlightening lifeurature that mothers were conversant with the facts about prenatal influences and had ceased to worry about them. We are astounded to find that a certain well known and reputable magazine in its April number prints an article that for erroneous statements and antiquated ideas cannot be equalled. It seems too bad that all young mothers who read that article are destined to bear the burden of superstitions so old that they have for most of us ceased to exist.

A mother has no power to mark her child either good or ill. She cannot, by reading good literature yearning toward fine paintings, ardent practice at music instill any of these things in her unborn child. Only an heredity rich with ancestors who have these talents can do that for her child.

She cannot at sight of anything frightful thrust her hands to her face and thus produce red marks which upon birth, bear (to the startled eyes of the mother) strange resemblances to the cause of her fright. If there are bearing marks it can only be due to coincidence, a force which can do stranger things than that. If we cannot mark out child for good by any manner of good intentions and wishes, it is for his ultimate good, because neither then can he be harmed by bad thoughts or evil intentions. Nature has wisely taken care that ONE person, even though that person be the mother of the child, cannot be the sole arbiter of its destiny.

The child is the product of all the persons who have come before it. This is right that it should be so. It safeguards the child against temporary ailments that ruin her otherwise good disposition, it makes child bearing something higher and greater than it could be if only one person were to blame for the result of it.

Remember these things when people tell you silly things about being careful not to touch yourself when frightened; when they tell you to think hard about what your child shall be and it will be so—bosh—drivel—The mother can only take care of her physical welfare so that the developing child shall have the proper elements from which to build its body. Her own mental condition will react favorably on herself and anything which makes it easier for her digestion to be right and her physical processes more perfect will react to the benefit of the child. In reality the tiny life intrusted to the mother is almost as separate from her and her influence as is "the egg beneath the setting hen." I put this in quotations though I can't remember the author of this lucid statement. Whenever you become obscessed with fears, remember this. It makes for a calm spirit.

THE MAN WHOSE EYES HYPNOTIZE

Svengali Mussolini, the World's Strongest Dictator, Whose Gaze Spells Forceful and Irresistible Energy.

By William Phillip Simms.

ROME, May 15.—Here is a word picture of "Svengali" Mussolini—the world's strangest dictator—the man who hypnotized a nation as Svengali hypnotized Trilby, and his surroundings as I saw them:

Picture first his ante-chamber—the waiting-room to his office. Large and still rather bare—the building has been occupied as Ministry of Foreign Affairs but a short while—the middle of the room is occupied by a centre-table upon which stands a bronze statue of a Bayardesque figure on a horse, a crusader "without fear and without reproach."

Against one wall stands a plaster reproduction of the "Winged Victory" which I was later to find must be a favorite of Premier Mussolini's.

More Pictures!

About the walls a number of pictures—cherubs and woodland scenes mostly—but most conspicuous of all is one of Mussolini himself so large that it covers half one wall—a heroic picture in oils of the Premier as leader of the Fascisti soldiers—the famous "Black Shirts"—he wearing the distinctive uniform himself and, in the shadowy background, a column of his men swinging past.

A door opened and in it was an attache beckoning to me. I stepped forward and in another second found myself in the world's strangest office.

So large is Mussolini's office I instantly felt myself dwarfed the moment I crossed the threshold. It is like a grand ball-room, the ball-room of a royal palace, with enormously high ceilings and a floor opon which any number of couples might dance with ease.

Has a Star.

About the walls, tapestries mostly, but my impressions flooded in upon me too swiftly to give them more than a glance. In the corner nearest me was an enormous globe, jet black, representing the heavens, and upon it, all over, large stars of gold. Among them somewhere was Mussolini's star, in which he believes with all his heart and soul.

In the corner opposite me was another huge globe, this one of the earth. And in the centre of the room a large marble "Winged Victory." Again! But these, like the tapestries, got only a glance from me for, in the corner diagonally across the room from the door I had entered, I saw as at a great distance, what appeared to me a very small flat-top desk, or table, and moving from behind it a very small man.

This was Mussolini.

Of course he is not small. Only the enormous office made him seem so. He grew larger as I made my way across what seemed like acres of floor, and presently I found myself nearing a man in riding clothes—black coat, drab riding breeches, riding boots, white standing collar with the "ears" turned back, black tie.

Again Those Eyes!

I mention these things in this order but I think the first thing I was conscious of, as I approached Mussolinil, was his eyes—large, unnatural-looking black eyes, piercing and, where not black, very white. Pictures I had seen had not done those eyes justice. From under heavy brows they bored like gimlets. The man's square jaw impressed; so did his high brow and the unusual expression of self-confidence on his face. But his eyes almost instantly absorb his other features and more: They become the centre of even the huge room, that about which even the furniture of the room had been adjusted.

"Howdydo," he said in English, taking a step forward and holding out his hand.

Then he went back to his chair on the other side of his desk and sat down. Putting his elbows on the table he leaned forward until his face rested between his two hands, fingers flat on his temples. He closed his eyes long enough for one to count up to 20 and I had the strange feeling, in this huge room, surrounded by charts of the heavens and the earth, that Italy's Prime Minister was consulting strange gods.

Presently he opened his eyes and turned them full blast on me.

"Eh Bien!" he said—French this time—the two syllables popping like pistol shots.

The interview was on.

Wiesbaden through the gloomy brown hills with their ruined castles, that look exactly like the castles in gold fish bowls, in 14 hours on the river, we only passed 15 loaded coal barges. All were flying the French flag.

Last September, in an express passenger boat, we passed an endless sucession of them moving up the river toward the canal mouth that would take them, by a network of quiet waterways, to feed the Lorraine furnaces. Then France was getting the hundreds of barges of coal as part of German reparation payment. Now the fifteen barges we passed that trickles out of the Ruhr through the mazes of arrested industry and were part of the thin stream of coal which leaves German territory since the military occupation.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,

Would you kindly allow me the privilege of asking some of the pasteurized milk extremists what about the making of cheese. the highest temperature on the making process is from 98 to 100 degrees, the very stage that bacteria develops the fastest and a fine quality of cheese cannot be made from pasteurized milk, is it possible that the whole cheese consuming population is to fall into a tuburcular state and fill a consumptive grave.

CLERGYMAN PRAISES SPLENDID MEDICINE

Rev. J. W. Williams of Keswick, N.B. Suffered Greatly From Stomach Trouble and Constipation—Found Lasting Relief in Dreco—Recommends it Very Highly.

An outstanding testimonial to the merits of Dreco is the case of Rev. J. W. Williams, Clergyman of the United Baptist church of Keswick, N.B., Mrs. Williams who had long and patiently suffered the pangs of indigestion and constipation, says:

"I was troubled for a long time with my stomach and various treatments gave me no result whatever. My appetite was very poor and I was forced to be content with very little food. Even then, it would cause severe pains and gas would form after each meal. My bowels were also very irregular. Then I decided to give Dreco a trial and since taking it feel 100% better in every way. I can eat before and my bowels are very regular. I am also sleeping better. Dreco is the best stomach and general builder that I ever tried and I can honestly recommend it very highly."

Dreco is restoring health and strength to men and women in every walk of life. Indigestion, kidney, liver and intestinal disorders yield quickly to its regulating influence and it tones up an invigorates the whole system.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

BANDITS THREATEN WHOLESALE MURDER

Foreign Diplomats Must Guarantee Chinese Government's Performance to Save Captives.

SHANGHAI, May 15.—(Canadian Press.)—Unless foreign diplomatic representatives in China guarantee by to-night that the Chinese government will carry out all terms fixed by the Chinese bandits in Shantung, the foreigners held captive will all be killed, Father William Lenfers, an aged priest who conferred with the bandit chief Sunday, reported to the United States consul at Lincheng to-day. Father Lenfers described the chieftain, called Wang, as a young man, clean, well dressed, wearing eyeglasses."

The priest persuaded Wang to extend for one day the limit of his ultimatum, which had been fixed for two days from Sunday. Wang told him that the pledges of Chinese officials mean nothing to the bandits, hence word of foreign diplomats must be given.

Commander Wang drafted his terms which did not demand money, but required that the Peking government restore all bandits to a status of regular soldiers with the pledge that they would suffer no reprisals and Father Lenfers, arriving in Lincheng after innumerable hardships, presented Wang's letter to the United States' consul to-day.

The priest said the leader of the outlaws, quiet toned, cordial, friendly and grim, made this comment on the possible failure of the Chinese government and foreign ministers to do his bidding: "Do not deceive yourselves or believe me soft. What I threaten I will carry out exactly as I promise. You are a missionary and you know that what I say is true."

OFFICIAL DOG CATCHER SAYS BUSINESS BRISK

Interviewed today when he was seen leading a stray dog of the mixed breed variety, James Gates, official dog catcher of the city, stated that business is very brisk in his line.

Commenting on the age limit for dogs, he said that any dog born before May 1 must have a tag or suffer the consequences.

In cases like this the consequences are likely to be more than the dog can bear, for police officers are being called upon frequently to draw a gun on the unknown wanderers It is surprising, the official dog catcher reports, how many dogs there are wandering around homeless. Even if a dog has a good home and a loving master he cannot appear on the street without a lead. Anyone taking a dog for a walk without a firm grip on the lead must pay $1 to the dog catcher or appear in court. "If people will only look after the dogs" said the dog catcher, they will save themselves and me a lot of trouble."

CHILDREN'S AID

and would be put in a better condition than it was before. They are also prepared to give us more land on the top of the hill where we would build at any time."

Urged New Quarters.

Dr. King strongly urged removal to new and better quarters. "I feel it would be nothing short of criminal to place the children back in the old Shelter," he said. "The conditions are not ideal for our purposes, and it has been the wish of the society for a long time that we obtain a new home. The subject was brought up a year or two ago about building, but that would cost us in the neighborhood of $30,000 or $40,000."

Dr. King believed that the fire which had broken out in the double roof of the Shelter might have occurred at any time with the possible loss of life to the inmates. The building, he contended, did not commend itself from the standpoint of safety, convenience and modernness.

"The Popham property seems an ideal one to me," he continued. "It is a complete block of land. The house is well built and is spacious It is close to schools and to the Exhibition Park. It is across the street from King Edward Park and only a short distance from the supervised swimming beach. The Irwin property is ideal, but you have to take into consideration what you would be asking the ladies who go there to do sewing and look after the children to walk a very considerable distance It is also quite a way from the nearest school. The Yeotes property is also ideal, and in many respects as suitable as Popham's, but there is no conveyance for the ladies. Very little money would need to be spent on the Popham building, and if you wanted to create some of the land into cash you could sell lots on George street and Lock street and have ample room left."

Had Discussed Building.

"You can go back to the old Shelter," said Mr Dobbin, who opposed that alternative, "and you would be in the same position you were in three months ago when you were discussing whether you would build a $10,000 addition in front of the Shelter or not. It's no place for the children. I never did like the site, and, while it was good enough in a way, you have to remember it's a case of twenty-four souls under that roof in case of fire. If we go ahead and buy we are losing $700 a year revenue from our investments. How are we going to make that up? I think that is a serious matter in itself."

Only Temporary Return

"If we go into debt so much it would be a strain," remarked Mrs. Gibbs, intimating that it would be more than she would undertake. "If we go back it will only be for a few years, until we get money enough for a building we can make to our own liking. Mrs. Fanning and myself also met the Mayor and he said the council would help us in anyway we wanted."

Mrs. Gibbs said that the routine of the visits and work at the Shelter wore upon herself and Mrs. Fanning more than most of the members realized.

Mrs. Knox agreed with Dr. King, and referred to the splendid results that had been gained at Waterloo by the remodelling of a private residence It was now a magnificent place and would cost to-day $50,000." The matron at the old Shelter had no conveniences at all.

Ald. Meyers said he had not sufficient knowledge of the conditions at the Shelter to give a considered opinion, but it appeared to him a wise course to return for a while after the old Shelter had been repaired.

"I think we'd take that attitude in the council," said the Alderman, to the amusement of the members. "Do not spend any money unnecessarily. That's the business principle men follow in their own affairs."

Motion Defeated.

Mrs. Gibbs' motion, seconded by Ald. Meyers, for a temporary return to the Shelter was defeated by seven votes to six.

To Mrs. Gibbs Dr. King said:—"When will be get the $40,000 for a new building?"

"It took twenty years to get $10,000," Mr. Cummer commented.

"Spend what we've got and then we'll have none," Added Ald Meyers.

In the ensuing discussion as to the next step Mr. Edgar reminded the members of the condemnation of the Grand Jury, who declared that the Shelter was not a proper place for wards of the Children's Aid Society. The law required that the city and county should provide for the maintenance of the children, and Mr. Edgar suggested that a deputation might wait upon the County Council at their June session.

Other ideas were advanced, and it was finally agreed to communicate with Mr. Popham, and ask him whether he would sell for $12,000. If the property could be bought for that sum, members said that they would be adverse to disposing of any of the lots into which it could be divided, but would retain it in its form as a complete city block. This would avoid immediate neighbors and backyards looking upon the grounds. The reply from the owners clipping $2000 off their option was regarded as an evidence of a willingness to compromise which encouraged the hope that Mr. and Mrs. Popham would come around to the Society's bid.

SOFTBALLERS CLOSED A SUCCESSFUL SEASON WITH DUE CEREMONY

OVER 80 PER CENT.

The softball season in Peterborough was officially and formally closed last evening with a banquet at the Empress Hotel. Officials of the League, the championship team, and delegates from all other teams in the League were present to the number of over eighty.

The trophies were presented to the winning teams and words of praise were heard for those whose efforts had helped to make the League a success.

Particular tribute was paid to the work of the president, J. E. Sullivan, and the secretary, Walter Fitzgerald, whose untiring efforts had been the chief factors in the highly successful manner in which the difficult schedule had been handled.

Credit was also given the umpires for the ease and despatch with which the games themselves had been handled

Community singing, led by Alex. Dick, enlivened the proceedings throughout the entire evening.

After a bountiful repast, to which one and all did full justice, the president outlined briefly the work of the past season. Softball, he said, though still in its infancy, had come to Peterborough to stay, but he pointed out that the successful operation of the League in the future would necssitate co-operation from all the teams to the same measure that had been experienced in the past. He pointed out that the game itself was a community builder of the best kind for over 300 men had been given an opportunity to play together at various times and to meet one another on a footing which would be impossible under other circumstances.

He voiced the appreciation of the League for the assistance which had been given from various sources, which tended to the smooth running of the League. He particularly thanked Colonel A. W. McPherson and Col. F. Bradburn for the use of the Armouries for the games, Bobby Muir, the press, and others for the assistance which had been rendered in various ways.

The financial statement, he said, would be audited and copies sent to the managers of each team. The League, he said, had paid its way, and after settling all expenses he was able to present a cheque for $100.00 to hte P.A.A.A. This cheque was received by Dr. A. W. McPherson, president of the P.A.A.A., and came as a happy surprise to all those present.

The Lague will have a small surplus on hand with which to start the season next fall.

In the absence of G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., the shield which he had donated for the winning team of the club section, as well as the individual medals for the members of the winning team, donated by Lou LeBarr, were presented by J. Munro to the Belmont Club.

The shield was received by F. Convery, who made a suitable reply, while Al Heckman, captain of the team, received the medals and presented them to the members of the team who were present.

The shield donated by J. Kenneally for winning team of the industrial section was presented to the Canadian Woollens representatives by Mr. Keuneally himself, who complimented the team on the showing it had made.

The trophy was received by Tom Turcott, who made a suitable reply.

Mayor Taylor was also present to present the cup which he had donated as emblematic of the championship. In doing so, he spoke of the hard games the Belmonts had had to play in order to win the trophy, and again emphasised the fact that the games had above all things proved a source of true sportsmanship and a real community builder.

The Macdonald prize, one which had been offered for the team conducting themselves in the most sportsmanlike manner during the playing of schedule was presented to the C.G.E. Tool Room team by G. A. Macdonald, the donor.

In making the presentation, Mr. Macdonald spoke of the closeness of the race for his prize. He pointed out that the conduct of each team as a whole had been considered, and that the conduct of one man might be the cause of his team losing the prize.

Jack Pilling received the trophies for the members of his team.

A box of cigars was presented by the president to the representatives of the Lock Company team, that organisation having made the first triple play of the schedule.

J. M. McHardy, as a member of the executive, and on behalf of the whole League, presented to Alex. Kay and his staff of umpires souvenirs in recognition of their work in helping the League along. In doing so, he thanked them for the interest they had taken in the games and complimented them on the impartiality they had shown in rendering their decisions.

In reply, Alex. Kay thanked the League and the officers for their gifts and stated that he thought this League amply strong enough to enter the Ontario Softball Association, and to give a good account of themselves in the battle for Provincial honours.

Dr. A. W. McPherson, president of the P.A.A.A., thanked the League for the cheque which had been presented to his organisation, and congratulated the teams on the sportsmanship which had been displayed and assured the League that the P.A.A.A. is behind any effort to bring a good, clean sport to Peterborough.

Change in Schedule At Riverside Park

A change has been made in the Riverside Park schedule, as announced yesterday. The practice game announced for 6.15 to-morrow evening between the Adanacs and the C.P.C. will be replaced by the opening game of the Mercantile League, in which The Examiner and the Bankers will figure.

The Adanacs and the C.P.C. will play their practice game at 5.15 on Thursday instead of the Central Ontario practice scheduled for that date.

After this week the Senior team will not be needing the park for practices as often as in the past, and the City League and Mercantile League games will get under way in earnest.

8 RUNS IN FINAL FRAME FOR YANKS

Terrific Rally in the Final Frame Sent Detroit Under — Three Double Plays in the Cleveland Game.

DETROIT, Mich., May 15. — (Canadian Press.)—After having a seven run lead erased, forcing the game into extra innings, New York fell on Sylvester Johnson's offerings in the twelfth, scored eight runs and defeated Detroit 16 to 11 yesterday. Cobb's strategy in removing Cole in the twelfth when two men were on bases and sending Johnson, a right hander, to replace him, proved disastrous. The score:

New York	0	4	0	2	0	1	0	0	8	16	21	0

Cleveland 6, Washington 3.

CLEVELAND, O., May 15.—(Canadian Press.)— The Cleveland Indians hopped on Walter Johnson in the first inning and scored enough runs to beat Washington 6 to 3. Three double plays cut down Cleveland's scoring in the latter innings. Uhle was effective except in the third and fourth innings. Score:

Washington	0	0	1	2	0	0	0	0	0	3	8	2
Cleveland	0	0	3	0	0	1	0	0	0	6	10	1

Johnson and Ruel; Uhle and Myatt.

Philadelphia 9, Chicago 0.

CHICAGO, May 15.— (Canadian Press.)— Philadelphia bunched five hits in the fourth and seventh innings behind erratic fielding on the part of McClellan and Faber, and shut out Chicago, 9 to 0. Chicago was unable to solve Hasty's delivery. Score:

Philadelphia	0	0	0	5	0	0	4	0	0	9	9	0

LAKEFIELD WON OPENING GAME

Defeated Examiner Nine in a Four-Inning Contest — Visitors in Lead Till the Last Frame.

LAKEFIELD, May 15 — The first baseball game of the sason was played here last evening when the local U.F.O. League team defeated the Examiner nine by the score of 5 to 2.

The Examiner had led throughout with a score of 2 to 1 till after two men were out in the final inning. In this frame numerous errors allowed Northey to complete the circuit on a long drive through centre, clearing the bases before him.

The fielding feature of the game was supplied by Bobby Baker, whose one-handed stab of a terrific liner broke up a promising rally on the part of Lakefield in the early part of the game.

The game was late in starting owing to the slowness of the members of the home team in turning up, and they were obliged to borrow one player to fill in the team. The game was called at the end of the fourth frame.

The players were:

Score by innings:

Examiner	0	2	0	0									2
Lakefield	1	0	0	4									5

MANY OF MAJORS LOST TO MINORS

Minor League Teams Walloped the Majors Frequently on the Spring Trips.

NEW YORK, May 15.—One of the remarkable features of the spring training trip of the major league clubs was the unusually large number of defeats suffered at the hands of minor league teams.

On the Pacific coast, the teams of that organization took all kinds of liberties with the Chicago Cubs who trained at Catalina Island, Calif.

The New Orleans club of the Southern Association took the Cleveland, New York and St. Louis clubs of the American League into camp a number of times.

On the showing made by the Pelicans against the major league clubs who have invaded New Orleans, the fans of that city have set their hopes for another pennant.

The Mobile club of the Southern Association as well as a number of other clubs in that circuit have shown great strength in the exhibition games with the majors.

Toronto of the International League twice beat Cleveland, Milwaukee also turned the trick. It's the same story all the way down the line.

Once upon a time when a major league team lost to a "bush" aggregation it was treated in the light of a joke. Those days are over.

Of course all major league clubs try out many recruits in the exhibition games. That is one excuse that could be offered. However, the real reason for the defeats rests in the increased strength of the minors.

Questions

ONE—Has a pitcher the right to get on the rubber without having the ball in his possession?

TWO—If a pitcher step toward first base, and discovers that the runner has such a lead toward second that he has no chance to get him, can he throw the ball to second ahead of the runner?

THREE—Has the base umpire the right to call a balk on the pitcher or is that right confined to the umpire-in-chief?

FOUR—If a batted ball strikes the third base sack on the extreme corner, which is extending into foul territory because the bag has been loosely strapped, is it fair or foul?

FIVE—If a batsman steps into a ball, which the umpire is positive would be a strike had he not done so, and the ball rolls to the stand, would a runner on third have the right to score if he could do so?

Answers

ONE—The pitcher has no right on the rubber without having the ball in his possession. In so doing he commits a balk.

TWO—When a pitcher steps toward first he must go through with the motion or he makes a balk. Throwing the ball to second would be a balk and the runner would be entitled to the base even if caught.

FOUR—It is a fair ball if it strikes the bag. It is the duty of the umpires to see that the bag is properly strapped and always within the limits of fair territory.

FIVE—The umpire should rule the pitch a strike, but suspend play when it hit the batter and allow no runners to advance.

STOMACH TROUBLE
"INDIGESTION"
Relieved By
Burdock Blood Bitters

The sufferers from dyspepsia, indigestion or other stomach troubles who has to pick and choose his food is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little that is eaten causes much torture, and is digested so imperfectly it does but little good.

Mr. Wm. Kruschel, Morden, Man. writes:—"Some time ago I had quite a serious case of stomach trouble, indigestion. I could scarcely eat anything, outside of some light food, and even then I generally had pains after each meal. I tried many different medicines, but without any improvement, and had almost given up hope of ever being well. A neighbor recommended Burdock Blood Bitters, and after using it a short time I felt much better, so I continued to use it until I was completely relieved. I can honestly say that B.B.B. has done wonders for me after all other medicines failed."

To a great extent we are all judged by our appearance, and many of us suffer because of our neglect to make the best of ourselves.

Beggars lay themselves out to excite the sympathy of the benevolent by appearing in tatters, and acquire alms which would not be given but for their forlorn appearance.

That is one effect of dress.

At the other end of the scale—the end which is the aim of all decent men—is dignity and respect.

We may be men of standing, and be entitled to the respect of all we meet, but we shall not command that respect if we neglect to dress our part.

We cannot go through life apologizing for our appearance, nor have we time or opportunity to explain that we are really much better than we look.

Just as a policeman or a postman is recognized for what he is by the dress he wears, so a gentleman is expected to appear dressed as one.

It has been said that "nothing so influences one's success in life as dress; in time a man comes to be what he looks." It is every man's duty to himself to appear as he would wish his acquaintances to think of him.

Should occasions arise when you are in doubt what to wear, call in and see us. We will gladly place our experience and knowledge at your service, without putting you under any obligation to ourselves.

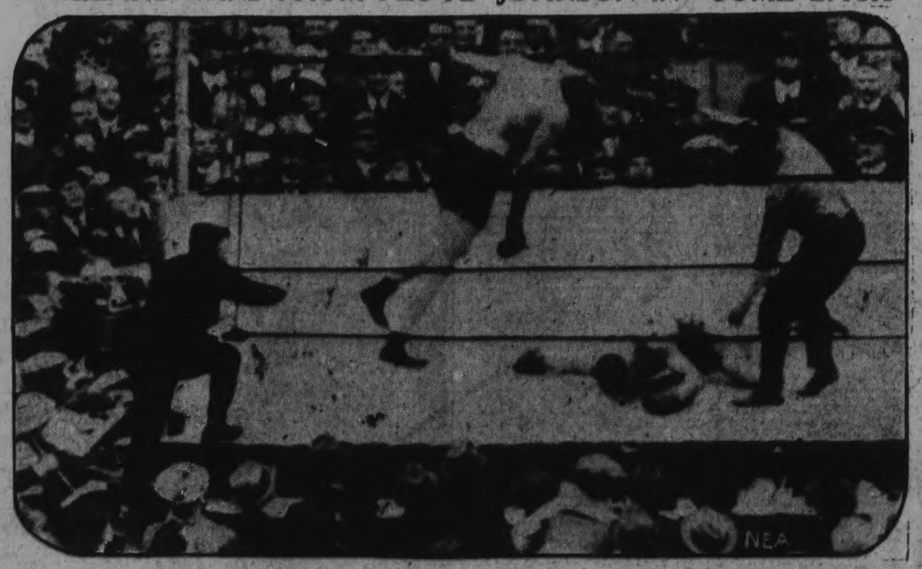
WILLARD WINS FROM FLOYD JOHNSON IN "COME BACK"



Former Champion Jess Willard forced Floyd Johnson to surrender after 11 rounds of fighting before 60,000 people in the new Yankee Stadium at New York. The younger man fought gamely, but the bell saved him in the ninth, and in the eleventh he was flat on his face and out as the gong sounded. His chief second told Referee Jack Appel that Johnson could not continue. Picture shows the scene after the last blow, Johnson on the floor of the ring, and Willard called the winner.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, May 15.—(Special.)—The stock market to-day continued its display of quiet confidence and while trading was not lacking there was an absence of any concerted pressure. News developments had little influence on the market and it was its own good internal position following the drastic shake down on which the advice of the day and yesterday was bared.

Stocks were strong in the early dealings reflecting the improvement in sentiment resulting from the substantial chaarcter of the rally in the previous session. California Petroleum reached a new high on the recovery at 95, while Dupont jumped to 136 1-2, up nearly ten points from last week's close. Pan American issues moved ahead in response to the publication of Mexican Petroleum 1922 report showing net profits of $25,276,164 against $13,540,684 in 1921.

American Can reached a new high on the recovery at 96 1-8, reflecting speculative rumors of a split up of the present shares. Other leading industrials maintained the comeback scored in the previous session.

Sentiment was encouraged by the survey of the National Association of Manufacturers showing a forty per cent. increase in production over 1922 and consumption ahead of production.

An Independent Steel manufacturer who follows prices and shipments closely estimated that the U. S. Steel Corporation in April earned about $16,000,000. This would compare with $14,600,000 in March if the April estimate is correct. It is safe to predict $45,000,000 net in the second quarter against $44,780,000 in the first quarter. Deliveries of steel will be on a higher price basis than in the first quarter, more than offsetting the wage increase. There always is a large short interest in the steel common, but the borrowing demand since the early part of last week indicates the heaviest short interests since January 1st.

Trading was quiet in the late morning and few features of speculative interest were in evidence at the start of the third hour. Some renewal of selling pressure occurred but the volume of transactions diminished as prices sold off, giving bears no encouragement to follow up their attacks. Floor backers reported a short interest in nearly every active stock. Borrowing demands for Steel Common, Baldwin, Studebaker, Pan America, Alcohol, Crucible and other representative Industrials was said to be especially heavy. Oil stocks were not affected by the announcement of reductions in Wyoming crude. On the other hand Sinclair did not respond to the highly favorable news that Mammoth Oil had brought in a ten thousand barrel on the tea pot dome. The well came in naturally in two hand with an initial flow of six thousand barrels which increased to 10,000.

NEW FACES ON LINDSAY LINE-UP

Petes Play Two Games With the Greybirds This Week.

The Petes are billed to play two games with Lindsay this week, a series that should put Manager Solomon's outfit in fairly good shape for the opening of the Central Ontaria League on Victoria Day.

The Lindsay Club which will meet the Petes at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, have invited the local crew to play an exhibition game in Lindsay on Thursday afternoon which has been accepted. The game is billed for 4.30 o'clock and the Petes will leave for Lindsay immediately after dinner. It is expected that Lefty McElroy and Sandy Summerfeldt will do the gunnery for the Petes in the game at Lindsay, while Al. Heckman will be sent in against them at Riverside Park Saturday's game which may be the only appearance of the season of the Lindsay team here will attract a big crowd of fans. Lindsay will have a flock of new players in action and under the piloting of Tubby Williamson, this year's manager, expects to gve the Petes a hard tussle for the honours, both on Thursday and Saturday's game here.

The Lindsay Post says:

Lindsay's pitching staff this year will likely centre down to Sova, Begg, Garlow, Gage and Miles. It is just possible that Charle Allen's bad knee will keep him out of the game or two months or more. It is understood that Allen will shortly undergo an operation which will necessitate him laying up. This will be sad news for baseball fans in Lindsay and the Central League, but is gratifying to know that Manager Williamson has dug up three or four home brews who are shaping up well.

Manager Williamson is on the trail of two other players, of whom little is known, but of whom much is expected. Two of the chief men interested in the oil findings at Downeyville are anxious to sign up, and claim that they have played baseball before. These gentlemen are regular "Babe Ruths" in appearance, and will turn out to practice.

Detroit Street Cars Carry Big Year's Gain.

DETROIT, May 15. — (Canadian Press).—Detroit's united street railway, one year old at midnight last night, is a lusty youngster. During the twelve months of its existence, it has paid one million two hundred thousand dollars on its purchase price, paid all other running expenses, besides four million dollars in sinking fund, and after all this shows a cool million dollars profit, which has been used in the betterment of the system.

LACROSSE

A dozen of the lacrosse squad were out at Central Park yesterday evening in Fred Goodfellow's charge. The executive would like to see two dozen out on Wednesday evening and a regular line up game on Friday evening at Riverside.

Among those out last night were Goodfellow, Brown, Taylor, O'Toole Simms, Foy, Dundas, Lynch, Donovan, Mein and Miller.

Wednesday night's practice is at Central Park. The nets are up and everything ready for the players.

Albert Armstrong of Havelock will likely convene the district meeting here on Friday afternoon of this week. Last night he told the Examiner that Havelock had not definitely decided about a lacrosse tournament for June 4th. Hastings is going ahead with a celebration including a lacrosse game with Campbellford, so that this would shut out two of the district teams from paticipating in the Havelock tourney.

"THE GLORIOUS ADVENTURE"

How New York, Paris, London and other cities received J. Stuart Blackton's super-production, "The Glorious Adventure," the first photo play made in prizma natural colors. Hailed in England, America and on the Continent as a great achievement, marking a milestone in the progress of cinematography.

LLOYD GETS IDEA IN A FLASH FOR NEW COMEDY

The happy thought that led to the making of the spectacled comedian's latest and longest feature, "Safety Last", a seven-reel Pathecomedy, came like a flash out of a sky.

One day, about a year ago, Harold Lloyd and his producer, Hal Roach, were walking on a downtown street in Los Angeles. It so happened that at the Roslyn Hotel that day, "Bill" Strother, known the world over as the "human-fly" was pitting his skill against the intricacies of the Roslyn granite walls.

Immediately the idea hit Harold that it might be a good plan to make a thrill picture, and to fill it with just such daring and hilarious situations as he made in "Never Weaken" and "High and Dizzy" outstanding successes in Lloyd's early achievements.

The idea was not long in the crystallization stage, for it was put into concrete form by Hal Roach, Sam Taylor, Tim Whalem and Harley M. Walker—the last three on the Lloyd scenario staff—and the filming began after the completion of "Dr. Jack." Strother, himself, was engaged to play the part of Lloyd's pal, and to, incidentally, climb one building for the benefit of the camera.

"Safety Last" will be seen Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre, and it is declared to be filled to the brim with thrills. The funny situations are there in abundance, and with Mildred Davis, Harold also demonstrates that he can take his place with the foremost Romeos of the screen.

Hypnotic power, skill in surgery, a vengeful spirit, are the characteristics of Dr. Mohammed Ali in "Dark Secrets" at the Capitol Theatre, yesterday and to-day, a combination of materials that come to his aid in his use of Ruth Rutherford, a crippled American girl, to avenge his hatred of her fiancee, Lord Wallington.

Ruth, the "untamable" American girl, wealthy, beautiful, wilful, is thrown from the fiery Arabian horse she is striving to break, and becomes a helpless cripple. In Cairo, the lover whom she has sent away because of her condition, goes to ruin, and Ruth, to save him, promises herself to his enemy, Dr. Ali, the only man who can restore her to health. The working out of the story, tempestuous and passionate, is well done. Dorothy Dalton is very fine as the wilful girl who attracts the wily Mohammedan and the entire story is attractively staged in luxurious American settings and in the streets and homes of old Egypt.

There is a comical animated cartoon strip, and Percy and Ferdie have a hectic comedy in "Holy Smoke."

AT THE GRAND.

Big added attraction booked for the Grand Opera House, direct from the New York Winter Garden. Owing to an open date, the management of the Grand Opera House has been able to secure for next Thursday, Friday and Saturday one of the most sensational and mystifing high-class acts on the vaudeville stage, the Great Mysterious Martine, world's youngest man of mystery, Martine is a young wonder worker, whose defiance of every means of security is marvellous. He offers $500.00 to anyone who can show how he enters a solid box that has been doubled locked by a committe, tied with 75 feet of rope, then enroped in a heavy canvas covering, and in addition to this 75 feet more of rope will be used. In about one minute's time he will enter the box, leaving the many fastenings the same, thus creating a sensation, mystifying performance. How does he do it?

In addition to this box feat he will escape from the pillorium and steel collar mystery after being securely locked and handcuffed.

That this is really a high-class act is proved by the fact he is scheduled for one of the largest theatres in Montreal next week. Don't fail to see this act. To see it once is to see it again.

Miss Kohen complained that the C.P.R. had gone to the Hospital for Sick Children and to the National Brass Co. a couple of days ago and asked them not to pay her.

"Your affidavit does not say so," remarked Mr. Spence. "It says April 30th."

The presence of thy loving face,
Where absence now cause tears.

IN THE WORLD TO SAVE OUR SOULS

Such Was the Theme of Eloquent Sermon in St. Peter's.

The sermon last evening in St. Peter's Cathedral where the Redemptorist Fathers are conducting a two weeks' mission, was delivered by Rev. J. M. McCandish, C.S.S.R., who addressed the large congregation of women, who filled the Cathedral, on the subject of mortal sin. The reverend gentleman took for his text the following verse from Isaias: "Cry, cease not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their wicked doings and the house of Jacob their sins." Is. lviii.1.

"Last evening,' said the speaker, "there was put before your minds the great fundamental principle of a Christian life, i.e., that you are in the world for one sole purpose—to save your immortal soul. Fail in this one thing and you have made an irreparable mistake—a mistake that you will bewail with meaningless tears throughout an endless eternity of misery and suffering. From this topic one would naturally enquire: What can cause the loss of a soul?

Take those things which the world looks upon as evil—can poverty, or suffering, ignomy or contempt—so-called evils from which the world shrinks—can these hurt the soul? Assuredly not; since Christ, the man of suffering and sorrow experienced these at every turn and blessed those who bore them patiently. The devil himself can not cause the loss of a soul, because the Almighty has promised that He will not allow Satan to assail us beyond our strength. No—there is only one thing that can cause damnation, and that is mortal sin.

Mortal sin is a wilful and conscious transgression of the law of God in a matter of importance. God's law can be broken in five ways: by thought, word, action, desire and omission. We know the definition of mortal sin, and knew it since childhood, but be are far from fully understanding it. The most learned theologian does not fully comprehend it, because it is an infinite offence, since He who is offended is infinite in all His attributes, infinitely powerful, all knowing, good and merciful. No; only God above fully understands the guilt of mortal sin. The guilt of any sin or offence is based not only on the nature of the act but upon the dignity of the person offended, as compared to the offender. Who is man the offender, as compared to Almighty God, the offended One? "Behold," says Isaias xl:15: "The Gentiles are as a drop of a bucket; behold the islands are as a little dust—all nations are before Him as if they had no being at all, and are counted of Him as nothing. The sinner places his own will in opposition to the holy will of God. He cries out with Lucifer—"Non servian"—"I will not serve." Thus speaks the impure man, the unjust man, the detractor and the culminator—those who choose the indulgence of their own wills, their whims and passions rather than the holy will of God.

"For which of these good works do you stone me?" asks our Blessed Lord of the Jews, who after having been befriended and assisted by Him countless times, turned upon Him in bitter persecution. Here was base ingratitude—a disposition detested by God and man. But the same words may be addressed to those who offend God mortally. Life itself, all the faculties of the soul and bodily powers, are gratuitous gifts to man from Almighty God. Yet man when he sins, takes these very gifts as a means with which to offend the Giver. How often in daily life are not the God-given faculties of intellect, of sight, hearing and speech basely perverted and used not to glorify God, but as a means to satisfy base appetites and sinful cravings.

Who would be bold enough to commit even one mortal sin, if he or she considered with a lively faith the terrible punishments God has visited upon it? "I saw Satan," says St. Luke, "like lightning, falling from heaven." "But whither does he fall? "Into everlasting fire, which was prepared for the devil and his angels." For one single act of rebellion against God Heaven was emptied of a third of its angelic inhabitants, who were, for this sin of pride, hurled into the endless fires of hell. Their fall, the punishment visited upon our first parents, the destruction of all earth's inhabitants, save eight, in the deluge, the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah, are terrible warnings of the hideousness and nature of mortal sin. History, both sacred and profane, telling of wars, pestilences and famines, bears up on every page; visitations upon man that are the dread consequences and punishment of his sin. And finally we can judge of its nature in the sight of God, who desired as its atonement, the death of His Divine Son on Calvary's cross.

Being an infinite offence sin demanded infinite atonement. All sufferings, penances, sighs and tears of men and angels combined could not sufficiently atone for one mortal sin. Only a God could do this adequately, and so the Son of God took flesh, lived amid poverty and sufferings and finally died a cruel death to atone for sin. Those who offend God in mortal sin are guilty of the death of Christ.

The reverend speaker concluded with a stirring appeal to avoid sin and to implore pardon for past sin—a pardon for which we can firmly hope through the merits of the crucified Redeemer.

SEDITIOUS LITERATURE SEIZED AT GLACE BAY
SYDNEY, N. S., May 15.—(Canadian Press). — A huge red banner which gained notoriety in the recent May Day parade as well as a large quantity of alleged seditious literature, was seized by a detachment of thirty Provincial police which last night raided the United Mine Workers' headquarters at Glace Bay and the homes and rooms of the executive officers of district No. 26.

It seems but like a troubled dream,
That our dear mother has really gone;
That she has passed the silver stream,
That she has reached the great white throne.

On "Mother's Day" we saw her fade,
And gently close her eyes;
And we knew that God was calling
"Our mother" to the skies.

And the Master, into the garden came,
It was very fair to see.
The apple blossoms filled the air
And the birds sang on bush and tree.

And Jesus led her by the hand
He gave her faith to see.
She listened to the sweet command
The Saviour's "follow me."

She was a mother very dear,
But her mission on earth was done,
When the flowers and trees were at their best
God came and took her home to rest.

And up where the gates are golden,
And beyond that fadeless plain
And near where the flowers are the fairest
"Our mother" lives again.

—"Lovingly remembered each day" by Edna.

EXTOLS FRENCH MILITARY END OF OCCUPATION

But France is Unsuccessful in Attempt to Run the Industrial Heart of Germany.

RUHR SITUATION

By ERNEST M. HEMINGWAY.
Special to The Examiner. Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.

DUSSELDORF, May 16.—Hiking along the road that runs through the dreary brick outskirts of Dusseldorf out into the pleasant open country that rolls in green swells patched with timber between the smoky towns of the Ruhr you pass slow moving French ammunition carts, the horses led by short, blue-uniformed, quiet-faced Chinamen, their tin hats on the back of their backs, ride by. Two broad-faced Westphalian iron puddlers who are sitting under a tree and drawing their unemployment pay, watch the cavalry out of sight around a bend of the road.

I borrowed a match from one of the iron puddlers. They are Westphalians, hard-headed, hard-muscled, uncivil and friendly. They want to go snipe shooting, the snipe have just come with the spring, but they haven't any shot guns. They laugh at the little Indo-Chinamen with their ridiculous big, blue helmets on the back of their heads and they applaud one little Annamite who has gotten way behind the column and is trotting along to catch up, holding his horse's bridle, sweat running down his face, his helmet jogging down over his eyes. The little Annamite smiles happily.

Then at forty miles an hour in a suckling swirl of dust a French staff car goes by. Beside the hunched down driver is a French officer, in the rear I get a glimpse of two civilians holding their hats on in the wind and another French officer. It is one of the personally conducted tours of the Ruhr. The two civilians are American ministers who have come to "investigate" the Ruhr occupation. The French are showing them around.

Personally conducted tours are a great feature of the Ruhr. The two gentlemen in the car are typical of the way it is done. They obtained a letter of introduction to General Degoutte from Paris. They wanted to make a full and impartial investigation of the Ruhr occupation in order that they might return to America and give their churches the facts. It is true they hadn't thought of this when they came to Europe, but the Ruhr was the bigheadline news and to be an authority on Europe when you return to America you must have seen the Ruhr. If the Genoa Conference had been on they would have gone to Genoa and so on.

They arrived at Dusseldorf speaking a very little French and no German. The French were delightful to them. A staff car and two officers were placed at their disposal and they were told they could go anywhere they wanted. They didn't know much where they wanted to go so the French took them. At forty miles an hour they did the Ruhr in an afternoon. They saw towering stocks of coke, they saw great factories, they ascended the water tower and looked out over the valley.

"There," pointed the French officer, "are the steel works of Stinnes, there those of Thyssen. Beyond you see the works of Krupp."

That night one of them said to

Impact With Cow Partially Derailed Train Near Chatham

SARNIA, May 16.—(Canadian Press).—A docile cow which had wandered on the tracks from a nearby pasture was the cause of the partial derailment of an incoming Pere Marquette passenger train from Chatham, about four miles south of this city late last night. The engine and tender, baggage car and front end of one passenger coach left the rails, and Engineer David Burwell, of this city, had a leg broken when the engine turned on its side.

The train carried only a few passengers and they received a slight shake up. The cow was killed.

Crew of Five Took to the Lifeboats and Were Saved.

KINGSTON, May 16.—(Canadian Press).—Battered by a heavy wind and the waves of Monday night, the schooner Jamieson, of Picton, carrying a cargo of coal from Oswego to Picton, sprang a leak at the outer docks, and in attempting to run through the gap to safety went down in forty feet of water in the upper gap, about two miles off Amherst Island.

Captain William Savage, of Picton, was in charge, and he and his crew of three men and one woman took to the life-boats when it was seen that there was no chance of beaching the schooner.

After a terrible trip they made a landing on the island, and were taken to shelter. This is the first marine accident of the season.

FRANCE FEARS A "COME-BACK" FROM GERMANY

Declares Factories She Seized in Ruhr Were Preparing to Manufacture Deadly War Gases

RESEARCH WORK

PARIS, May 16.—(United Press).—France, in time of peace, apparently believes it advisable to stop Germany's attempted war preparations.

Three of the largest chemical factories in Germany were seized by French military authorities Tuesday after the French received reports that deadly gases to be used in the "next war" were about to be manufactured in the plants. The factories seized are Biebdrigs, Hockster and Uringel.

The French announcement stated that the factories were taken over because Germany had defaulted on deliveries of chemicals and fertilizers ordered by the Allied Reparations Commission, but it was later learned that fears of a Germany "come back" were the real cause. Simultaneously it was learned that the scientists of France have started intensive research work to perfect deadly germs and chemicals for use in war. France is now making an effort to improve her own laboratories in order to carry on the research work.

Twenty-five thousand tons of dye stuffs valued at millions of francs were seized. Twenty-five per cent. of the dyes will go to Belgium, and France will get the remainder.

Bonar Law's Friends Are Much Worried Over His Condition

PARIS, May 16. — (United Press)—Premier Bonar Law of Great Britain arrived here today incognito to consult a French specialist regarding his throat.

Bonar Law's condition has not shown much improvement as a result of his vacation at Aix Les Bains, and his friends are worried. He is suffering from a severe throat affliction.

While here it is possible the British Premier will talk with Premier Poincare and endeavor to patch up a re-approachmet.

BANDITS TAKE CHARGE TRAIN

More Evidence of Unstable Government in China — Beat Servants

SHANGHAI, May 16.—(Canadian Press). — Members of the Chinese Government gendarmerie boarded a train bound from Peking to Shanghai to-day, attacked the officials, beat their Chinese servants who resisted, seized everything on the tables, despite the protests of foreigners, and held possession of the train for everal hours, it was learned when the train reached here this afternoon.

Leaders of bandits are said to have met emissaries yesterday afternoon at Dragon Paw Cliff and counter proposals discussed. It is believed that the outlaws' final decision was forwarded to-day. The demands emphasize that foreign diplomats guarantee bandits against reprisals from Chinese or foreign sources, and also that diplomats pledge carrying out of general terms which do not mention ransom.

APPEAL FOR FINANCIAL AID FOR COCHRANE, ONT.

Peterboro Branch of Red Cross Society Has Made a Grant of $500—Citizens Asked to Help

TORONTO, May 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Toronto city treasury to-day handed over to the Canadian Red Cross Society a cheque for $5,000 to apply to the relief of typhoid sufferers of Cochrane, Ont.

The municipality of Cochrane has been and still is suffering from an outbreak of typhoid fever. There are over 800 cases which means that practically one quarter of the population is laid low.

The municipality has done its utmost to keep itself. The town authorities established an emergency typhoid hospital of 80 beds and secured for a considerable time medical an nursing care as well as food for the poorer citizens. But finally they came to the end of their financial desources and appealed to the Ontario Red Cross for help.

Accordingly the Red Cross has taken over and is now maintaining the typhoid hospital with its 80 beds and its staff of 20 nurses as well as the general relief work for the sick and convalescent in their homes. Drugs, hospital and nursing supplies and bedding to the value of $6000 have already been despatched to the afflicted town while on May 3rd a special Red Cross Car, carrying food supplies, visited Cochrane and distributed a three weeks' supply of suitable food to 73 needy families who had suffered from the disease.

To continue this work and to supply the further medical and nursing care that is absolutely necessary as well as to meet the minimum demands for proper food and other needs for those who are convalescing will require $75,000.

The Red Cross is ready to do the work but it is dependent upon the funds placed in its hands by the individuals and municipalities of the Province. Consequently the Provincial Society is now appealing to the people of Ontario for this sum of $75,000 because this second emergency following so closely on the Haileyburv disaster has made an appeal necessary.

The Peterborough Branch has made a contribution of $500 to the Cochrane Relief Fund and at the request of the Provincial Red Cross Society is giving an opportunity to individual citizens to supplement the local Society's contribution. The Examiner has kindly consented to receive and acknowledge all donations which will be forwarded direct ly to Headquarters. All cheques should be made payable to the Honorary Treasurer, Ontario Red Cross

ACTIVE YEAR REPORTED FOR LOCAL Y.W.C.A.

Gratifying Progress is Revealed in Every Department of the Association's Manifold Work

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association was held last evening in the green room and library of the Association, where nearly one hundred and fifty women assembled to hear the reports of various 'Y' activities, to hear an address by Miss Marion Ferguson of Toronto and to spend a social hour at the conclusion of the business session.

Reports, which will be published in detail later, showed a very successful year just finished with gratifying progress in every section of the Association's manifold works, splendid attendance at gymnasium and club classes of different sorts and a filled house in the boarding home during most of the year.

Rev. Mr. Rollins conducted devotional exercises, which were followed by a brief address by Mrs. Cruikshank, who summed up her congratulatory remarks on the year's progress with the words, "It is what one does and what one is that makes one truly worthy."

The Reports

The financial report for year was read by Mrs. A. W. Cressman, Miss Leta Brownscombe gave the general secretary's report, Miss C. L. Littlefield reviewed the progress of the physical department, and Mrs. E. Morrison that of the house section.

Mrs. R. H. Turner read the report of the nominating committee, which was adopted by the meeting Members of the Board for the ensuing year will be: Hon. President: Mrs. Walsh members: Mesdames T. Cruikshank, W. D. Scott, A. W. Cressman, Jas. Wood, W. H. Hill, Robt. Neill, B. Gardiner V. Eastwood, R. H. Turner, Adam Hall, D Carmichael H. R. H. Kenner, Geo. Macdonald, T. N. Greer E. E. Harvey, W. R. Widdiss, E. E. Ingall, D. Drummond, W. R. Cormack, W. D. Buchanan, R. Denne, A. Moir, Thos. Brown G. Porter, Gerald Wood, the Misses M. Dickson, E. Morrow, A. Wood, Walton McVannell.

Miss Ferguson's Address

Miss Marion Ferguson, at present acting National General Secretary for the Y.W.C.A. in Canada, formerly an Association worker in India, gave a short address which outlined the work of the 'Y' in India Miss Ferguson gave an interesting description of the various places in which she had been stationed: of Ceylon, with its green vegetation; its red soil and red foliage and red-tiled roofs, its gorgeous sunsets and of Lucknow in the north with its wonderful ruins and mosques and ancient Mogul palaces. It was in Lucknow that Miss Ferguson heard an old man, a survivor of the famous siege, give "Jessie's Dream," a recitation of the woes of the besieged. She spoke also of Burmah, with its Mongol population: of Rangoon, with its huge golden Buddhist agodas, and its chain of beautiful inland lakes, where Canadian canoes are found.

Miss Ferguson's work in India was mainly among the Eurasians or Anglo-Indians, the people who are half white and half Indian blood, but who refuse to acknowledge their native ancestry; and who are so supersensitive that Miss Ferguson said the 'Y' workers among them had added a further clause to their litany: "From thinnes, of skin, that sits so lightly on those about us, Good Lord, deliver us."

The social work among their Indian charges parallel activities as pursued in our own land. There is an extensive Girl Guide movement, folk dancing classes, which are popular and literary clubs, which are not." Village women are gathered together in clubs, and taught spinning weaving and sewing.

They even hold debates among themselves, on subjects which would be tabooed some years ago, on such things as "Should one's family or one's self choose ones' husband?" They have very successful baby clinics and courses of lectures, and Burmese women nurses have just opened a little hostel or boarding house of their own in Rangoon.

REDS APPEAL TO WORKERS OF THE WORLD TO REVOLT

MOSCOW, May 16.—(Canadian Press.)—The Third International has issued a general appeal to workmen of the world in connection with the assassination of M. Vorovsky, Soviet representative at Lausanne, in which it says: "This bloody challenge must not be left unanswered by you."

The appeal advises stronger organization of a struggle to bring about revolutionary success both east and west. It holds Lord Curzon responsible, as the chief inspiration of the entente effort at Lausanne to prevent a Turkish-British rapproachement.

With reference to the British note it says: "Curzon demands that we shall not support a movement for liberty in India and Egypt, but such propaganda has done more for the east than it would be possible for the Third International to do."

The Ukrainian Government has sent a note to Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, with a copy to Ramsay MacDonald, Opposition leader, expressing the hope that there will be no break in relations between Russia and Britain.

COMMISSION TO MEET COUNCIL

Armed With Considered Opinion of R. R. Hall, K.C., as to Duty Toward Police Department

The Police Commission meets the Council on Thursday night. And their coming appears to be a significant gesture.

Conditions seem to have changed since a conference was first proposed. The Council had clipped nearly $4,000 off the Police Department's estimates in the course of their budgeteering, and adopting the expansive attitude of "We'll show you who's boss around here!" suggested that the Commission could conform to the decrease by dismissing three or four policemen.

The Council was then riding high on the driver's seat, or in another sense, holding all the good cards. When the conference was mentioned members of the Council had a fairly clear and satisfactory vision of the Commissioners sidling in meekly to take their medicine, to hear officially and directly from the Council's lofty place the decree that Chief Newhall must dispense with some of his supernumeraries, and in brief cut the Department to the measure fixed by the Council.

It was a rather delectable situation for the Council to be in a position of dictating to the "high and mighty" commissioners, and telling them where they got off. Too long had they been sending in their annual requisitions to be rubber-stamped by the Council without the slightest right of veto. However, all that had been changed by the Raney amendment, guaranteed by T. Tooms, M.L.A., as having a real sting in its tail.

Police Commissions were to learn to kow-tow and salaam to the elected Municipal representatives of the people They had to walk beneath the yoke of the door to the Council Chamber and if they didn't behave like subordinates their appropriation might be recalled for revision or some other disciplinary restrictions, and curtailments might be meted out to them. The Council seemed at times to be surprised at its own lenience toward its traditional enemies, and so whipped and chastised seemd the Commission that Ald. Joe Crowe ventured the prediction that they would not come around to a conference.

Since then a lot of water has flowed under the Hunter street bridge, and opinions as to the Council's authority over the Police Commission have undergone a very considerable change.

There is a very general feeling that R. R. Hall in his recently published letter has slipped the Commission an ace that materially alters the comparative strength of the hands the two opponents have been holding. Last winter C. R. Widdifield, then city solicitor, counselled the Aldermen about putting too much reliance or too broad an interpretation on the amendment. His advice was that the Council might refuse to sanction items which were not required for the maintenance of an efficient police force, and he believed that in that category might be designated the department's automobile and motorcycle. But Mr. Tooms assurance, followed by opinions from the Attorney-General's deputy and an assistant law clerk, countervailed against the City Solicitor's construction of the effect of the statute, and since then the Council has been resting easily in a sense of righteousness and security until R. R. Hall dropped his bomb into their midst.

Magistrate Langely Determined to Stop Cycling on Sidewalk

The penalty for cycling on the sidewalk is increasing under the necessity for putting a stop to this practice. One offender who appeared in Police Court this week was fined $5 and costs, amounting to $3.25, a total of $8.25, as compared with the old and apparently inadequate fine of $2.

Magistrate O A. Langley announced that he will increase the fine in future cases to $10 or $20 if necessary in order to stop the dangerous and annoying practice.

CLAIMS BOY IS A VICTIM OF POLICE

Toronto Telegram Goes Into Hysterics Over the Police Activity.

TORONTO, May 16.—(Canadian Press).—Under a streamer heading, "Toronto Boy is Victim of United States Police Methods," the Toronto Telegram to-day features the case of Walter Swanton, 16-year-old son of the ex-manager of the Standard Chemical Company, of Bracebridge, who has been missing for several months, following the publication of accusations that he had embezzled approximately $100,000 from the firm. It is claimed by the boy and neighbors that he has been shadowed for three months by detectives of a private agency in the hope of gaining some clue of the whereabouts of the missing man. The boy is described as being on the verge of a nervous breakdown as a result of this surveillance, and the agency is credited with the flouting signal, "We always get our man."

Young Swanton had only to step outside his door and an operative followed him, it is alleged. When he went to bed at night a detective was outside his big apartment house and when he awoke in the morning another was there. It was on account of this that the lad finally, a few days ago, invited him to stay in his apartment. The boy claimed he has absolutely no knowledge of the whereabouts of his father.

THE WEATHER.

The copious showers of yesterday and last night have still further delayed seeding operations with those farmers whose land is not the most favorably situated. Yesterday's rainfall was .46 of an inch, while that of last night was not quite so heavy—namely .38 of an inch. A gentleman (an ex-farmer) told me last evening that he had been out in the surrounding country considerably the last few days, and that he had never seen the fall wheat and clover looking better, but that much seeding remained to be done. Settled and warmer weather is required.—W.P.

PETERBOROUGH CHEESE BOARD TO CARRY ON

PRICE TODAY 17c.

At an enthusiastic meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board this morning, 158 boxes of cheese were sold at 17 cents, the Canadian Packing Company being the buyers.

The meeting was held in the Chamber of Commerce, the President, T. Braden, occupying the chair. A spirit of optimism marked the meeting and grounds for this lay in the report that several new factories will this year link up with the Board, two of them from the Lindsay district—Star and Dunsford. A motion was carried without demur to continue the Peterborough Board

The efficiency and popularity of last year's officers were attested by their re-election en bloc. They are: President, T. Braden; Vice-President, W. D. Robson; Secretary-Treasurer, E. Hawthorne; Auditor, Henry Betten.

Four Buyers

There were four buyers for 158 boxes originating as follows: Warminister 40; Warsaw, 35; Young Point 33 and Killarney 50.

J. Cook represented Cook and Son Belleville; T. Thompson represented A. A. Ayers of Montreal, G. A. Gillespie represented Hodson Bros. and Rowson Montreal, and Gordon Matthews was the successful bidder for the Canadian Packing Company, Peterborough.

The market was brisk, starting at 15 cents and rising rapidly by eighths and sixteenths to 17 cents, closing there with a purchase of the product of the four factories.

The price at to-day's board shows an advance over Belleville of three sixteenths of a cent, the quotation there being 16 13-16.

The next meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board will be held in three weeks.

TORONTO, May 16 (Canadian Press). — For the first time in the history of the world, so far as is known, an aeroplane is to be brought into use as a conveyance to bring voters to the polls at the coming Ontario elections on 25th June.

The far distant polling station of Moose Factory is to use air in this new world record.

It is understood that Premier E. C. Drury and members of his Cabinet yesterday broached negotiations for the engaging of an aeroplane and experienced pilot to go to the northern constituency for the purpose of carrying electors to the polls.

This move on the part of the Government, it is stated, is not made with a view to novelty or for creating a precedent, but was the result of some bright person's suggestion for meeting a difficult situation.

CHANGE NEEDED IN THE FOREIGN POLICY OF U. S.

Lord Robert Cecil Says United States Are Beginning to Recognize the Unity of Mankind.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

LONDON, May 16. Canadian Press. — Lord Robert Cecil, recently returned from the United State, said yesterday at a luncheon here in his honor organized by the League of Nations supporters, that the United States doubted whether Europe was really sincere in its desire for peace.

There was a growing recognition in the United States, said Lord Robert, of the unity of mankind—economically, materially, mo.ally and spiritually.

"The American people," he continued, "recognize that what happens in any part of the world must have a repercussion and effect in the United States as in other parts of the world, and they are trying to see what modifications of their foreign policy ought to be made to meet the situation."

The presence of the United States, Germany, Russia and Turkey in the League was desirable, added Lord Robert, in order that they might contribute their voice to the great chorus of public opinion for the maintenance of peace throughout the world, but he did not believe Great Britain should invite the United States to join the league, as "it would not be dignified for her, nor successful with them."

No Agreement With C.P.R. on Coal Price.

OTTAWA, May 16 (Canadian Press). — That there had been no agreement with the Canadian Pacific in the matter of fixing an early summer rate of $9.00 a ton on coal from points in Alberta to Toronto was stated yesterday afternoon by E. P. Mallory, chief statistician of the Canadian National Railways, giving evid...ce before the Mines and Minerals Standing Committee.

Mr. Mallory said the two systems had exchanged views in the matter, but had eventually agreed to disagree.

W. B. Lanigan, frieght traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, will be the first witness before the committee this morning.

BANK ACT CHANGES STILL UNSETTLED

Question Debated By the Banking Committee of the House But No Action Taken.

OTTAWA, May 16.—(Canadian Press).—The question whether the revision of the Bank Act should be laid over for another year was debated for two hours in the commons' banking and commerce committee yesterday and finally was left quite unsettled.

The discussion was brought about by a motion by Alfred Speakman, Progressive, Red Deer in favor of postponing revision. Just before the time came for a vote. Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative, Centre Vancouver, moved an amendment in favor of proceeding with revision, while referring the question of rural credits to the Minister of Finance. T. W. Caldwell, Progressive, Carleton-Victoria, N.B., claimed that the amendment was out of order.

G. Black, Conservative, Yukon, replied that then so was the original motion.

Hon. A. K. MacLean, chairman of the committee had at the outset stated his view that he original motion was out of orde, and when a ruling was demanded he decided that neither the amendment nor the main motion was propely before the committee and the whole subject then went over to another day. It is understood that an amendment to the bill will be moved later which will bring the matter to an issue again.

APPEAL TO BE TAKEN AGAINST SUGAR BROKERS

U.S. Authorities Will Continue Action to Prevent Dealing in Sugar Futures

IN COURT TO-DAY.

NEW YORK. May 16.—Mystery surrounding a secret meeting on the floor of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange yesterday, was dispelled last night, when it was learned that John W Davis, former Ambassador to Great Britain, now counsel for the Exchange, had appeared on the floor and announced the taking of an appeal by the Attorney General against the refusal of the Federal District Court to grant the Government's petition for an injunction against the trading in sugar futures

The secret meeting which lasted but a few minutes, was called before trading begun when newspapermen, messenger boys and attendants were ordered off the floor. Trading began immediately afterwards.

The meeting was called, it was learned later to permit Mr. Davis to explain the status of the Government's suit unsuccessfully brought recently before the Federal Circuit Court. seeking a temporary injunction to prevent the Exchange and its Clearing Association from dealing in sugar futures.

Mr. Davis stated it was explained that the Attorney-General has given notice of appeal from the decision.

As an outgrowth of the Government's investigation of the high price of sugar, Leopold S. Bache, a member of the Exchange's Board of Governors, and several other individual brokers were subpoenaed to appear this morning before the Federal Grand Jury.

It was learned that books, papers, records, telegraph messages and tele phone messages of the men subpoenaed have also been subpoenaed.

Officials of the Exchange flatly denied a report that a mass meeting would be held in the Wall Street district to-day to protect against continued attacks on the sugar trade by Government officials.

Meanwhile active sugar stocks on the Stock Exchange declined from small fractions to 1 1-4 points below Monday's closing. It was estimated that out of 142 mills grinding sugar in Cuba all but 33 have completed operations with an aggregate production of 17,094,267 bags as compared with 19,465,000 bags, which it had been estimated, would be produced.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—(Canadian Press). — Formal appeal by the Government from the New York Federal Court decision denying an injunction against the New York Sugar Exchange is to be filed to-day in the Supreme Court, and on Monday the Government will move to advance the case for as early a hearing as possible.

It is probable, however, that hearing will not be held until the new session of the court begins in October.

U. S. WILL TAKE ACTION AGAINST 6 BOOTLEGGERS

Authorities Believe They Have Rounded Up the Brains of Big Rum-Running Ring.

PLENTY EVIDENCE.

NEW YORK, May 16. Canadian Press. — A complaint will be filed in the Federal District Court to-day against six men believed to be the brains of the liquor ring which has been operating outside the three mile limit off the New Jersey coast.

Assistant United States Attorney Norman L. Falk in announcing that the complaints would be filed, refused to divulge the names of the sextette, but said that they were resident at the present time in New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

Information on which the complaints will be filed was gained through the crew of the British steamer Yankton, which put into port on Monday, with empty bunkers and larders after a long stay on Rum Row.

Mr. Falk estimated that the ring had landed at least 60,000 cases from Scotland and the Bahamas, operating from Miami to Boston.

The charges against the sextette will be conspiracy to violate the Volstead Act and to attempt to defraud the Government out of Customs duties. Mr. Falk added that the government in its massed attack on the rum fleet, which has included patrolling the three mile limit with coast guard cutters and cutting off the fuel and the food supplies supplies from shore, has issued orders to six collection districts to seize 12 craft with which the ring was believed to have been communicating ashore.

Included in the craft to be seized were said to be tugs, a submarine chaser and high powered launches. Two of the tugs have been identified as those which a few weeks ago went to the Yangton loaded with armed men and took off what was left of that hapless rum runner's cargo of 8000 cases of alcohol which she loaded at Havana.

The submarine chaser has been used principally off the New England coast, it was said.

The 19 men of the Yankton's crew were said to have given the Federal officials a mass of valuable information particularly concerning the principals and the agents of the rum ring; and also of the men who at various times visited the Yankton during her cruise along the coast.

Major John A. Holley Clark, Chief Assistant United States Attorney, said last night that the evidence obtained from the Yankton Crew assured the government of a powerful lead in smashing the bootleggers' ring.

NEWBOLD SUSPENDED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

Scenes of Wild Excitement Prevail When Communist Member is Temporarily Ousted — Used Disrespectful Language to Chairman of Committee

LONDON, May 16.— (Canadian Press.)—An unusual scene occurred in the House of Commons last night which ended in the suspension of the Communist member, John T. W. Newbolt. The vote suspending him was 300 to 88.

Newbold had spoken disrespectfully of the chairman of a committee, Captain Edward Algernon Fitzroy, Conservative Member for Northamptonshire. Captain Fitzroy called upon Newbold to withdraw and this led to angry recriminations between the Laborites and the chair.

The Laborites reproached the chair for not allowing Newbold to apologize. Fitzroy persisted in his ruling for the withdrawal of Newbold and called upon the sergeant-at-arms to remove Newbold, who declined to move from his seat. Thereupon the chairman sent for the Speaker, who upheld the action of Captain Fitzroy. This provoked fresh scenes of acrimony.

The Speaker seemingly thought Catpain Fitzroy had acted hastily, but said he could only abide by the rules of the House. He suggested that Newobld could make a communictaion to the House to-day and that he believevd the House would take a considerate and generous view of the situation.

Finally, amid protests from the Opposition, the Speaker put the motion for the suspension of the member, which was carried amid great excitement. Newbold then withdrew.

No vote was taken on the Russian debate. The Labor Party, in view of the Government's offer to discuss the situation with Leonid Krasin, the Bolshevik Commissar of Commerce and Trade, agreeing not to press for a division on Labor Leader MacDonald's motion for a reduction in the Foreign Office appropriation as a protest against the Governments' policy.

Epworth League.

There was a good attendance of young people at the Epworth League Monday evening, the programme being in charge of Miss Verna Sanders, 2nd Vice-President. A missionary reading dealing with Chinese ideas of sanitation was given by Miss Edith Bowen, following which Mr. Walter Lowe rendered a solo, "Don't Forget the Old Folks," in very fine voice. The topic was ably taken by Mrs. W. H. Ashton, who gave an excellent paper on "World Brotherhood Incorporated." from the Study Book, showing the great need of missions and what the missionaries are doing for the people of Asia, not only fitting them to live here, but for eternity.

Girls in Training.

Following the league meeting the Canadian Girls in Training met, with the President, Miss .Verna Sanders, presiding. Papers on "God's Habits" and on John Howard Payne, the author of "Home, Sweet, Home" were given by Miss A. Arnold and Mrs. C. W. Turner, respectively. At the conclusion it was decided to entertain the Tuxis Square Boys next Monday evening. The meeting closed by all quoting in unison the 23rd Psalm.

USE AN AEROPLANE FOR POLLING VOTES

TORONTO, May 16 (Canadian Press). — For the first time in the history of the world, so far as is known, an aeroplane is to be brought into use as a conveyance to bring voters to the polls at the coming Ontario elections on 25th June.

The far distant polling station of Moose Factory is to use air in this new world record.

It is understood that Premier E. C. Drury and members of his Cabinet yesterday broached negotiations for the engaging of an aeroplane and an experienced pilot to go to the northern constituency for the purpose of carrying electors to the polls.

This move on the part of the Government, it is stated, is not made with a view to novelty or for creating a precedent, but was the result of some bright person's suggestion for meeting a difficult situation.

What roads there are in the exterme north of the riding are now impassable, and are not expected to be in a passable condition when election day rolls round.

Furthermore, ice will be late in going out of streams and lakes, so that travel by canoe to the polls, it is feared, would be out of the question.

Automotive industry uses about four per cent of the output of iron and steel annually.

CHINESE BANDITS ARE ON THE MOVE

Robbers Have Repudiated Their Agreement to Release Foreign Prisoners.

SHANGHAI, May 16.—(Canadian Press).—The Suchow bandits have moved their foreign captives ten miles farther back into the mountains behind Lincheng, according to advices received here early this morning.

This action in carrying their prisoners still farther into the hills is taken as a stragetic move by the brigands to impress the Peking Government on the eve of negotiations for the release of the foreigners.

Dr. Mertens, who has been attending the captives, has been refused permission by the bandit chief to make further trips into the mountain stronghold.

LONDON, May 16.—(Canadian Press).— Despatches from Peking say the Chinese bandits have repudiated their agreement to release the prisoners they hold captive. It is believed here this is the construction Peking puts upon the demands of the bandits, reported from Shanghai that the foreign diplomatic representatives guarantee the carrying out by the Chinese Government of the terms the bandits fixed.

SEVERAL DEAD IN RACE RIOTS AGAINST JAPS

MANY INJURED.

SHANGHAI, May 16. — Canadian Press. — Several persons were killed yesterday and a large number of others were injured in anti-Japanese riots at Shanii, province of Bupehe, when the anti-Japanese demonstrators boarded a Joss River steamer. A Japanese armoured gunboat has been sent at full speed from Hankow to the scene of the trouble.

Advices indicate that the riots at Shasi, which is a port on the Yangtze River, above Hankow, where the foreign gunboat that patrols the Yangtze, are based, is the culmination of a long series of disturbances in central and west China growing out of the boycott instituted against Japan when Tokio refused to abrogate the "21 demands treaty."

Crowds of students and others at Shasi enforcing the boycott boarded the Japanese river mail steamer Taigen Maru, to ascertain the names of Chinese merchants who had goods aboard from Japa...se shippers.

The Taigen Marus flashed a distress signal and the Japanese gunboat Fushimi put ashore a landing party. A series of riots followed in which some are believed to have been killed and many injured.

Subsequently communication lines were cut and passengers on board river steamers were not permitted to land.

WELCOMING OUR VISITORS.

The tourist season on the Trent waterways will be commencing before long, and soon, it is hoped, trim motor boats, many of them American owned, will be mooring at the Peterborough wharf and their owners and passengers will be our guests for a while.

The question of welcoming such visitors should be more or less a matter of community concern.

The Trent Waterway Development Association, through its Secretary, Mr. Leon Frazer, does its part in receiving motor boat tourists and supplies them with information and charts of the upper waters.

The work should not be left to one organization, however.

The suggestion of Mayor Taylor that the Chairman of the city's Reception Committee join with the Secretary of the Waterway Development Association in looking after these visitors, is a sensible one.

So, too, is the further suggestion that the local branch of the Motor League might consider the matter of conveying visitors around the city. Such a courtesy would be greatly appreciated and would send tourists away with a good impression of Peterborough, and incidentally secure some valuable publicity.

Down at Campbellford they have a very pretty practice of presenting a bouquet of flowers to the ladies in every party of motor tourists who pass through the town. This gift has been widely commented on, and there is a reference to it in almost every published story in regard to the Trent waterway.

A simple act of courtesy such as this often proves a splendid advertisement.

IGNORING THE PREMIER.

The most significant development of the Ontario campaign up to the present has been the failure of J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the U. F. O., to say anything in commendation of Premier Drury, or in favour of the record of his Government.

In his address at Guelph the other day Mr. Morrison completely ignored the head of the Government.

The significance of such an omission will impress itself upon electors generally.

It was announced not long ago that the Premier and the U. F. O. Secretary had buried the hatchet, had come to terms and that an entente had been established between the two conflicting schools of opinion in the U. F. O. camp.

Yet Mr. Morrison in his first important address of the campaign chooses to say nothing about Premier Drury and to remain silent about the record of the administration.

A contemporary declares that "the soul of Morrison has not been knit to the soul of Drury, neither can it be nor will it be."

Certainly the conduct of the U. F. O. Secretary has been so peculiar in the studied neglect of Mr. Drury that it has revealed that it is not to be wondered at if the public has doubts of the genuineness of the reconciliation.

The suspicion that Mr. Morrison does not care very much what becomes of the Premier so long as he himself can continue to be the power behind the throne in the Farmers' movement is intensified by speeches such as the U. F. O. Secretary delivered at Guelph.

At its meeting on Monday the Board of Health ordered the owners of six local houses to have their property connected with the city sewerage system as soon as possible.

A good many orders of the same kind will be necessary before Peterborough can pride herself upon being completely modernized so far as sanitary conveniences are concerned.

Plumbing Inspector Metheral declares that this city is much worse off in this respect than most other Canadian centres.

Two years ago there were as many as 1,350 houses in Peterborough without modern sanitary conveniences, whereas at the same time Toronto had, it is reported, only 300 and Winnipeg 400.

Last year some progress was made towards remedying the situation, for conveniences were installed in 128 houses, and so far this year 38 more dwellings have been connected with the sewer.

The drive should not stop until every house in Peterborough where sewer facilities are possible has been linked up to the system.

An easy method of paying for the work has been devised and in the interest of the community generally the Board of Health should insist upon these very necessary improvements being adopted wherever there is need of them.

Property owners who, after due notice, ignore the commands of the board should be checkmated by a declaration that their houses are unfit for habitation.

Public opinion will support the health authorities in any action of that kind they may be called upon to take.

A clean city in every respect should be the community aim, and there is no more essential step than to have the sewerage system as completely efficient as possible.

THE MOTOR CAR MENACE.

Not long ago the Examiner quoted a contemporary's definition of a "jay-walker" as a person who would just as soon be killed in the middle of the block as on a crossing.

Figures issued by the New York Bureau of Public Safety, giving particulars of the street accidents in the American metropolis during the month of April, indicate that this cynical definition is more or less founded on truth.

Motorist organizations are inclined to blame "jay-walking" for the majority of traffic accidents, and undoubtedly the practice of cutting across a street in the middle of a block is responsible for many fatalities.

There were 89 people killed and 2,727 injured in New York last month in street accidents.

Thirty-five persons met death and 779 were hurt through being hit by vehicles as they attempted to walk across a street in the middle of a block.

The crossing casualties were almost as heavy.

No fewer than 27 people were killed and 549 injured by motor cars at street intersections where pedestrian traffic is supposed to be safest.

The largest percentage of casualties was among children. The death roll shows that in the thirty days of last month 47 New York children under 11 years of age were slaughtered by automobiles and that 1,104 were more or less badly hurt.

Other statistics show that carelessness on the part of children contributed to the list of fatalities.

Three youngsters met death in attempting to steal a ride on vehicles, seven were killed because when playing on the sidewalk, they suddenly darted out into the road, and six others were run down while playing on the roadway itself.

The figures are graphic evidence of the menace of the motor car, and the necessity of impressing safety first principles not only upon drivers but upon pedestrians, and more especially upon children.

AN AMERICAN VIEW.

Mr. Fielding may be called the Canadian father of reciprocity, says the New York Times in discussing the Budget disposals. It was he who negotiated the treaty in 1911, which, owing to internal political complications in Canada, was finally defeated. Ever since that time the cause of reciprocity has been dear to him, and a year ago he went to Washington to inform the American Government that Canada was still desirous of entering into reciprocal trade agreements.

The internal political conditions in Canada today seem to indicate that a majority in the Canadian Parliament might be obtained for such a proposal. There is approval of it among the members of the Liberal Party, and in general the agricultural people in the East are reported in opposition, on the ground that, even though the present proposal covers only agricultural products and fish, it would make it easier to introduce reciprocity on manufactured articles, which, of course, would be unacceptable to many Canadian industrialists.

There is every reason why it would be absurd for Canada and the United States to embark upon a tariff war. There is no geographical barrier between the United States and Canada, and the facility of intercommunication is such that the free and uninterrupted interchange of products between these two nations is to the advantage of both.

America needs Canada, and Canada needs the United States. During the year 1922 nearly 40 per cent. of Canada's exports went to the United States, and more than 65 per cent. of her imports came from this country. Canada can well absorb more American goods, and the United States can offer Canada a much greater market for certain of her products.

THE SAMENESS OF LIFE.

By holding up the mirror of "Babbitt" to the American people Sinclair Lewis has caused considerable alarm in the United States over the increasing standardization of life in their country, says the Ottawa Journal. Americans have noticed how common are the George F. Babbitts in every American town and city. And they have remarked the deadly sameness and monotony of so many conditions of life. Their communities, their streets, their homes, their furniture and household equipment, their manners and morals, their interests and aspirations, their ideals and ethics, all the things that make up their lives seem more and more being cut to pattern. Is it inevitable, or is it a tendency that can or should be corrected? Certain influences are held largely responsible for it, among them national advertising. From books to bath-tubs, the same wares are glorified in the advertisements from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Magazines present plans for standardized homes and streets and garden suburbs. And from Maine to California the newspapers become more and more alike, readers in Topeka, Kansas, absorbing the ideals and inspirations of the same syndicated sermons and talks and picture strips as engage the intellectual interest of New Yorkers. The movies do their part.

But this condition is not peculiar to the United States. The same thing is taking place elsewhere. Mr. C. F. C. Masterman, in his book "England After the War," observes it in the Old Country. He gives a picture of Richford, a typical middle-class London suburb, that shows a growing standardization:

"All the streets are the same. All the little villas with front and back gardens are the same. The furniture and the cultivation outside are the same. And the same also the mental furniture and cultivation, alike in the residence and the front and back gardens of the mind. All the pleasant, affable little men and women who live there have the same manner of life, the same attitude toward life, the same combined cowardice and courage in contact with life, the same fundamental refusal to face life itself."

The world is becoming smaller, more compact. New York is connected with San Francisco by air line. There is talk of an Empire-encircling British air service. It is, perhaps, but natural, therefore, that not only places but people should become more and more alike. And it may be that the increasing similarity carries benefits with it.

Japan Replies to German Offer.

BERLIN, May 16. — (Canadian Press.)—The reply of the Japanese government to the recent German reparations offer was delivered to the German Foreign Office yesterday. It declares that "both on account of the total figures mentioned, as well as the methods of payments thereof and guarantees, the Japanese Government finds it is impossible to give its adhesion to the German reparations project."

The note adds that inasmuch as her interests are not as great or as vital as those of the other Allied Powers, Jaapn will refrain from expressing an opinion on the details of the proposals, but is hopeful that the German Government will do everything necessary to facilitate a prompt and friendly settlement of the problem as a whole.

REGAINS 18 POUNDS LOST WEIGHT

Taking WINCARNIS

"I was very sick; lost almost 18 pounds in weight; was extremely weak and nervous, and could not get a single night's sound sleep. I had constant medical attention and the best of wholesome foods, but my condition grew more alarming until I began taking Wincarnis, which helped me from the first few doses.

I have completely regained my former weight and strength, sleep soundly every night, eat most heartily and have an abundance of energy. My husband and my mother were so amazed at the effect of Wincarnis in my case that they both began taking it as a tonic. Today, they are just as loud in praise of Wincarnis as I am, and we do wish it were known to every weak, nervous or run-down person."

MOTHERS HONORED IN CAVAN DISTRICT

Touching Services Featured Worship on Sunday—Peterborough Pastor Delivered An Eloquent Address.

A most successful "Mother's Day" service was held by the Cavanville Sunday School on Sunday afternoon, the Fairmount School uniting with them for the gathering, and the church being quite filled when the hour for opening arrived. Mr. Reginald Cuffe, of Peterboro, was the speaker for the occasion, and gave a most appropriate address, stressing the fact that the future destiny of the child depends largely upon the mother, that to reform the world from its vices, the work must be begun by enlisting the mothers and that every one is under obligation to think and speak well of the relationship of motherhood, to honor its station, and have a spirit for gratitude for the gratuitous, never-failing and loving attentions of a mother.

Solos suitable to the theme of the day were sung by Miss Marie McBain, of Fairmount, Miss Muriel Houston, of Cavan, and a reading by Mr. B. F. Carley, was also much enjoyed. Mr. James Douglas is the capable superintendent of the Cavan Sunday School and had charge of the service, the pastor, Rev. S. G. Rorke, being also present and taking some part.

At Millbrook.

Appropriate "Mother's Day" services were held in the Presbyterian and Methodist churches on Sunday, the choirs preparing special music for the day, and the sermons emphasizing the value to the home, and to the prosperity and stability of the nation, of true motherhood. A union service of church and Sunday School was held in Grace Presbyterian church in the morning, an enjoyable feature being the singing of two choruses by five of the junior girls, Jean and Edna Gervan, Ruth Thorndyke, Margaret Armstrong and Vanita Ingram.

The pastor, Rev. G. S. Gervan, gave a five minute talk to the children previous to the sermon, which carries its message especially to the adults, this being his usual custom, for the children have a real interest in the church service when they know that a part of it is particularly their own. In the evening, Mr. Gervan's subject was, "Religion in the Home" and the discourse carried out still further the theme of the entire day.

Rev. Benjamin Greatrix of Peterboro, had charge of the services in the Methodist church in the absence of the pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, who has been called away through a double bereavement in his family.

Men's Choir.

A men's choir of about twenty-five voices furnished excellent music both morning and evening, their selections, which included solos, duets and quartettes, taken by Messrs. G. A. Duncan, F. N. Alcorn, W. Coombe and J. L. Byam, being much enjoyed by the congregations. A large number of communicants remained for the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at the conclusion of the morning service which was conducted by Rev. Mr. Greatrix, assisted by Rev. J. Wilks whose many friends were much pleased to have him again able to be in attendance at the church services. Mr. Wilks stated, during the Love Feast, that Sunday marked the fiftieth anniversary of the occasion when he first entered the ministry. In the Port Credit district, on May 13, 1873, he assumed his first charge, and while retired for the last six years from the regular pastorate, has been supplying in different pulpits ever since.

Remember Ye!

Mr. Greatrix spoke in the morning from Isaiah 43: 18, 19: "Remember yet not the former things, neither consider the things of old. Behold, I will do a new thing; I will even make way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert." The "way" spoken of foreshadows the "New and Living Way," of the New Testament provided in Christ who bridged the chasm, caused by sin, between man and God. Two facts are brought out in the text, namely, man's wandering from God, and God's way to return to Himself. Just as the fine roads which now run across our land were built at a great cost of labor, treasure and even blood, so the "Way of the Cross" leading home to the Father, and made possible through Jesus Christ, was built at an infinite cost of obedient service, treasure, which "almost bankrupt Heaven" since it demanded God's only Son, and blood "He poured out His soul unto death."

There is no other way than this which is reddened with the blood of the world's Redeemer. Had there been, as men sometimes claim today, then the death and sufferings of Christ are a reflection upon the wisdom of God, a crime, and a fearful waste. But the word explicitly states, "There is none other Name under heaven, given among men, whereby ye must be saved," and to insist that a moral character and upright living, constitute a sufficient guarantee of salvation is merely begging the question of personal response to God's plan.

There are no favorites on this road—all men, rich and poor, young and old, learned and ignorant, must enter by 'the strait and narrow gate' of faith, repentance and consecration, for all have the same needs, and however hard some find it to accept this truth yet the same privilege and same door of access are offered to one and all regardless of worldy position or wealth.

Is it a safe road? Surely, since it was built by the All Powerful Father, and is guarded by Omnipotent Love. And pleasant? Yes, "the redeemed of the Lord walk there." Is the terminus desirable? Yea ,verily, "an igheritance, incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away." Can I go therein? Like a great bell swung in mid-heaven peal out the "whosoevers" of the Bible, with that comforting word of the Saviour, "Him that cometh unto Me, I will in no wise cast out."

In the evening the sermon has especial reference to "Mother's Day" the congregation being somewhat larger than usual, and the men's choir adding greatly to the attractiveness of the service.

Personal Mention.

Rev. Canon and Mrs. Allen were in Perry Town on Sunday evening, the rector taking for the service in the chrucuh at 7 p.m., a larger congregation gathering for the service. Rev. Dr. Meyer of Peterboro, took the work of the parish here in Canon Allens' absence. Mr. Madley, the student from Toronto who assisted Rev. Canon Allen last summer, is taking the parish of Perry Town, Gore's Landing and Harwood for the summer months.

Mrs. J. D. Fair of Toronto, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Eakins and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Doak over the week-end.

Miss M. McKim of Peterboro was the guest of her cousin, Miss Phyllis Richards, over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Burnham of Peterboro, were guest of his mother Mrs. E. S. Burnham and also of Mrs. J. Staples, Cavan on Sunday.

Rev. B. Greatrix of Peterboro, who had charge of the services in the Methodist church on Sunday, was a guest at the pasonage during his stay here.

An interesting set of slides on the life of "David" was used in the Methodist Sunday School on Sunday afternoon, the talk outlining the events illustrated being given by the superintendent, Mr. F. W. Fallis, in a very capable manner. The main events of the Sunday School lessons are more firmly fixed in the minds of teachers and scholars by this method than by the usual review at the close of the teaching period.

Mr. E. Hansman of Port Hope, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston, on Sunday.

Russia Awaiting Action of British.

MOSCOW, May 16.—(Canadian Press).—The Russian Soviet Government is awaiting Great Britain's action on the Litvinoff note with intense interest, most of the Bolshevik leaders expressing the feeling that a break with Great Britain would bring war sooner or later, even though they do not look for a hostile attack from Great Britain herself.

Maintenance of the agreement with the British, to the Russian official mind, acts as a check to any warlike intentions on the part of Poland, Rumania or the other border States, and if this check were withdrawn, they fear hostilities might ensue at any moment.

Death May Result From Storm in South.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 16.—(Canadian Press.) — Hot Springs, swept by flood and flame, last night was slowly recovering from the effects of the storm which late Monday sent a torrent sweeping down from the mountainside, leaving in its wake a trail of destruction which in monetary loss is estimated well in excess of a million dollars.

While the property loss will be heavy, only one person was reported eeriously hurt, Mrs. Katie Christianson, caught in an automobile when the flood swept down from the mountains and engulfed Central avenue, the principal business street, is in a hospital, her skull crushed. Physicians said her chances for recovery were slight.

The Marquette hotel and nearly a score of business buildings were in ruins as a result of a fire which came after the torrent.

The address was read by Mrs. Ballagh, the Honorary President, and the presentation was made by Miss Margaret Saunders on behalf of the class. RENNIE NOMINATED BY BRUCE LIBERALS

Liberal Choice at Formosa Convention—Wellington Hay Scores the Drury Administration

FORMOSA, May 16.— (Canadian Press). — Wellington Hay, Liberal leader was chief speaker, at South Bruce Liberal Convention here yesterday when Frank Rennie was again nominated, Mr Hay emphasized the crying need of business administration. Administration of Drury Government had not been satisfactory, he said nor had it measured up to expectations, accordingly Liberal party had no wish to continue measure of cooperation which they had given during past four years. "Fair, honest criticism of that group," he continued, "is no reflection upon ability of farmers, but I challenge claim of any group to govern this province of Ontario." Referring to Shevlin Clarke Timber deal, Mr. Hay stated that as result of findings of Latchford Commission and legal action taken, province would recover some $1,500,000, that should be conclusive evidence, he said to people of province, if there were any shadow of doubt as to whether they should entrust entire administration of province to Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and his friends in next legislature.

MILLBROOK CADETS CONGRATULATED

Excellent Training in Physical Culture Was Especially Noted.

MILLBROOK, May 16.—Forty-five cadets turned out for the annual inspection on Monday morning, the wet weather compelling the use of the armouries instead of the agricultural grounds as had been anticipated. Captain V. W. S. Heron, of Kingston, was the inspecting officer and expressed himself as being much pleased with the manner in which the work was done. He especially noted the excellent training shown by the physical culture class and warmly congratulated the instruction officer, Earl Doxsee, upon what he had accomplished in the short time during which he has had charge of the cadets here.

Captain Heron gave a brief address at the close of inspection, urging the boys to be regular in attendance at the drill periods, and loyal to their instructor who had done, and would still do, all that was possible in their best interests. For some reason, neither the reeve, officials of the school board, nor members of the council were present also to address the cadets before dismissal. Probably as the event had not been advertised for the armouries, not many knew that inspection was taking place there.

It was announced that Millbrook has an allotment of ten cadets for the Barriefield camp.

Many Candidates Are Already in the Field.

TORONTO, May 16.—(Canadian Press.)— Fifty Conservative candidates have already been nominated in connection with the forthcoming Provincial election, as against 41 Liberals, 26 U.F.O. and four Independents, or a total of 121, with only 111 heads to the ground. With official nominations not taking place until June 14, it is estimtaed that at least another 150 candidates will be placed in the field by the various parties.

42 Mills Tax Rate For Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, May 16.—Campbellford's tax rate for 1923, will be 42 mills on the dollar, two mills higher than one year ago. The rate was struck at a special meeting of the council held last night after a discussion which lasted until nearly midnight. At first the rate worked out at 44 mills, but the estimates of the various departments were pared wherever possible to reduce this figure. The strictest economy will be necessary, some of the councillors contend, to prevent an overdraft at the end of the year.

PREMIER DEFENDS HIS EXPENDITURES

Good Value For Every Dollar Spent, He Tells Georgetown Electors.

GEORGETOWN, May 16—(Canadian Press).—Claiming vast and widespread improvements in the province of Ontario since coming in to power, Premier Drury addressed a large audience in the town hall here last night.

In alluding to economic policy of the government Premier Drury said that there was prevalent an erroneous impression that expenditures had been unnecessarily extravagant. This he said was not by any means correct, as good value had been received for every dollar of money expended. Many enterprises under taken by the present government had been work of capable business men and not of decayed politicians. Regarding the Government's road-building policy, which had been severely criticized, he said roads being built were permanent and would last for five hundred years.

Considerable money he said, was being spent on development of Northern Ontario. This he considered a wise investment.

Charges that his administration had appointed commissions for everything were answered by the Premier, who declared that only three such commissions had been formed and these in pursuance of a forward policy directed toward wise economy. He had not come to preach a sermon on temperance, he said, in approaching the subject of the O.T.A. Conservatives, he stated would, if returned, take the "rough edges off their act." A ripple of laughter greeted the Premier's reference to Mr. Ferguson's policy of "educative enforcement."

FARMING FORMS THEME OF TALK BY MOTHERWELL

Minister of Agriculture Declares Canada Must Speed Up Dairy Products or Lose British Market—Specialized Farming Condemned.

BUDGET DEBATE.

OTTAWA, May 16. Canadian Press. — The proceedings of the special parliamentary committees on Banking and Agriculture foreshadowed importance yesterday's programme in the House of Commons, where the budget debate was dull and devoid of color. A vigorous onslaught upon the two old parties by T. W. Bird (Progressive, Neepawa), was a lively incident of the evening sitting. He declared that the only difference between the Conservative and Liberal budget lay in "literary style" and warned both parties that shafts of ridicule never could stem the advancing hosts of progressive thought the Forke Phalanx in Parliament there stood a movement the strength of which as yet was but foreshadowed.

That criticism of the budget by honorable members for West York (Sir Henry Drayton) was good ground for satisfaction in any follower of the government, was the contention of W. G. Raymond (Liberal, Brantford), who said that living costs in Canada would be directly lowered by Fielding policy.

"The high cost of manufacturing and distributing goods in this country is standing in the way of real progress and prosperity," said Hon. Dr. Manion, who named retention of the home market for products development of interprovincial trade, lowered selling prices of manufactured commodities to the agriculturists, a widened immigration policy and decreased taxation as prime essentials to progress.

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, devoted the better part of an hour to a review of agricultural conditions in Canada with the object of showing that there was little real ground for "lamentations."

"Who said this was the last word?" queried Hon. W. R. Motherwell, during the debate. His reference was to Progressive criticisms that in his budget speech Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, has declared finality in tariff reductions.

"Who said it was the last word?" Mr. Motherwell pressed.

"Nobody said it was the last word," retorted Mr. Motherwell. The Minister of Finance said distinctly there was no finality, that what parliament did to-day it might undo to-morrow. Mr. Motherwell drew a distinction between stability (as the word was used by Mr. Fielding) and finality. "We have had stability during the last two years, but not necessarily finality," Mr. Motherwell declared. From the left of Mr. Speaker then came a request that Mr. Motherwell should define stability, but Mr. Motherwell, amid laughter, declined to constitute himself the "interpretation clause of the act."

He added that one would need an X-ray at some places to see where the Progressive amendment differed from the Budget. He urged that we should have to "speed up" or be left behind in the British market for dairy products and suggested that the west might learn something from the farmers of the Maritime provinces where debt was something to be abhorred.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Many Unable to Gain Admission to Repeat Performance of Two Plays—Personals.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 16. — So many people were unable to gain admittance to the Parish Hall last night to witness the presentation of two plays that the willing workers, under whose auspices the entertainment was held, decided to repeat the performance this evening. The hall was filled from stage to vestibule before the hour announced for the rise of the curtain, and fully one hundred disappointed people were obliged to return home in the rain. It was absolutely impossible to find space for any more.

Rev. Rural Dean Clarke acted as chairman, and as usual entertained the audience with timely remarks and amusing stories, which were thoroughly enjoyed.

Clegg's Orchestra furnished music before the curtain went up, and at intervals during the evening. Mrs. G. Nicol, who had been advertised to sing, was unfortunately prevented from filling the engagement on account of illness, and the only soloist of the evening was Herb. Leonard. For some years after coming to Campbellford Mr. Leonard kept his musical talent hidden under a bushel, but it was uncovered by accident, and now no entertainment in town is considered complete unless his name appears on the programme. His offering last night sustained his reputation as a vocalist, and he was enthusiastically encored. Mrs. C. H. Harris accompanied him on the piano.

"The Scheme That Failed."

The first play, "The Scheme That Failed," was put on by a cast of six. It was a mirth-provoking little comedy, cleverly presented. The story is that of an ambitious, newly-married couple, anxious to make a good showing to their friends, and who receive unexpectedly a letter announcing a visit from a college chum of the young husband, and who, to complicate matters further, is to be accompanid by his aristacratic mother. How to fittingly entertain these distinguished guests is the problem that confronts the young couple. There is the financial aspect to be considered and their only servant, an excellent cook, is not to be thought of as a maid to wait upon the expected company. A sister of the husband, however, pays them a surprise visit, and hearing of her dilemma, and unknown to his wife, whom the sister has never seen, volunteers to act the role of maid for the duration of the visit, knowing nothing of the identity of the guests. When the latter arrives, it turns out that the young man and the sister are engaged lovers. Meeting each other alone the sister explains the situation and the young man agrees to become a party to the plot.

Many complications arise. The cook is shocked when she discovers the supposed maid with her arms around the neck of the master of the house, and she has to be let into the secret. Then the mother faints when told that her son is engaged to the "maid" after she had surprised them in a lover-like situation. When everything is explained to her she welcomes the girl as a daughter.

The husband declares war when he comes upon the young guest kissing his sister, but with him the explanation is easy. Last of all is the surprise of the wife when she returns from her room, resplendent in a handsome dinner gown, to find the "maid" on terms of equality with the guests.

William Bailey tok the part of the young husband, Mrs. C. H. Harris was the gracious and accomplished hostess, Mrs F. Linton the aristocratic guest, George Goffin the engaged lover, Miss Eva Runions the bright and vivacious "maid," whose acting of a difficult role was excellent, winning enthusiastic applause from the audience, while Mrs. E. E. Cassan as Bridget was the typical Irish cook, temperamental, devoted to her art, loyal to her employer, and jealous of her prerogatives.

The costumes of the ladies in the cast fitted every scene in the play.

"French Spoken Here."

The second play tells the story of a thrifty householder who proposes to add to her income by taking in lodgers, and in order to secure her share of the foreigners in the city, puts in his window a placard bearing in the original the inscription, "French Spoken Here." His leading illusion is that he is master of that language, but he realises his mistake when a gentleman from Paris applies for a room.

There was some clever acting by the seven who took part in this play. A. Wood and Mrs. J. Malin, as Mr. and Mrs. Spriggins, owner of the lodging-house, were overwhelmed with trouble as soon as the first application was made for a room.

A. J. Jenkins, the French gentleman who applied for a room, again proved himself no ordinary amateur actor by the skill with which he spoke the French language, and the broken English to which he resorted when the landlord plainly showed himself a tyro in the foreign tongue.

Miss Alta Smith, in the role of the daughter of the house and the matrimonial choice of the French lodger, made the most of her part.

Miss Elsie Smith was the bride who was merely lost, but whose husband believed she had eloped.

Miss Gertrude Maynard had the difficult role of the servant, and her admirable interpretation of the part was enthusiastically applauded by the audience.

O. H. Gledhill had the role of the irascible retired army officer who became separated by accident from his bride on the first stage of their wedding trip, and who, consumed with jealousy and bursting with fury, converts the Spriggins home into a rough house, going there in a general search for his missing bride, and who encounters there the Frenchman who he believes has carried her off.

Mr. Gledhill, who directed the plays, added to his dramatic reputation by his performance last night.

Will Go To Havelock.

These plays will be presented by the same cast at Havelock on Thursday evening.

"French Spoken Here" will be on the programme at the entertainment to be given on the evening of 24th May in Cole's Opera House, under the auspices of the Agricultural Society.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Bullen and Mr. and Mrs. R. Dunk motored to Springbrook on Sunday to attend the annual church services of the Oddfellows.

Mrs. J. A. Anderson was taken seriously ill on Monday, but her friends will be pleased to learn that she has entirely recovered.

The Doctor Was Right

When the good old family doctor was asked about baking powders, he said:

"Use Royal. It is made from Cream of Tartar and is absolutely pure. You could dissolve a couple of teaspoons of Royal in water and drink it with benefit. That's a health test mighty few baking powders can meet."

The doctor was right.

YOUTHFUL GANG ENTERED STORE

Ringleader Held for Trial—Juveniles Out on Suspended Sentence.

WARKWORTH, May 16.—Three boys have been arrested in connection with the burglary in the hardware store of C. J. Boyce last week and their cases were disposed of in the Magistarte's court here yesterday, County Magistrate Floyd came from Cobourg for the hearing, accompanied by Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, who appeared for the people. The council room in which the cases were investigtaed, were crowded by residents of the village and the district.

One of the boys is only 12 years old, another is 14 and the eldest, supposed to be the ringleader, is 18. Two are brothers, the sons of parents who moved here from Toronto about a month ago, the father entering business.

The two younger boys, when the magistrate learned their ages, were taken from the court room and given a private hearing. The result was that they were released on suspended sentence after listening to a severe lecture from the bench. In the case of the third boy no evidence was taken, he being held to a higher court for trial.

The robbery of the store was a startling instance of juvenile waywardness. On Thursday night the place was first entered by prying the lock on the front door. Among the articles stolen was a gun, the use of which later by the young burglars aided in their detection.

Store Entered Again.

As soon as Constable Phillips heard of the burglars he got into communication with the Provincial police and two officers from Belleville arrived here Friday. On the evening of that day the boys again broke into the store, this time by way of the back door. The stolen property was concealed at the home of one of the burglars, two of whom were arrested Saturday. The third boy disappeared from his home and after Officer Phillips had followed him to Hastings and back, was taken into custody on Monday.

No Minister Chosen.

Members and adherents of the Warkworth Presbyterian church met here for the purpose of selecting a pastor in succession to Rev. Mr. McGillivray, who recently accepted a call to Burlington. Rev. D. A. Thompson, of Hastings, who has acted as moderator during the vacancy, presided. A number of candidates had been heard but the congregatiton was unable to agree upon a selection and it was decided to postpone the choice of a pastor until others had been given an opportunity to occupy the pulpit.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

AUSTRIA ON VERGE OF COMPLETE FALL SAVED BY LEAGUE

Austrian Government and Finances Require Doctoring and the League of Nations Handles Case.

COURAGE NEEDED.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS

VIENNA, May 16.—Perhaps a better way to begin this would be "On the Beautifully Blooie Danube." For old Austria is still trudging through mighty dismal, days and Vienna-the-Once-Scintillant is looking somewhat run down at the heel.

The League of Nations, watch in hand, finger on pulse, still sits by the bedside of the republic. And though a terrific battle lies ahead if the life of the patient is to be saved, and though the result is still in doubt, I believe the signs are favorable and the league will win.

Six months ago, reduced by the war from a country of 50,000,000 to one of 6,500,000; her money worthless; her credit gone; her printing presses unable to grind out paper fast enough to anything like keep track of her deficits, Austria was plainly dying.

Doctor on Job.

Today, after heroic first aid by the league, Austria is able to open her eyes. A foreign doctor, or manager, or commissioner general, is in charge and she has promised to try to get well, follow the doctor's orders, institute a lot of reforms and show a clean tongue in the shape of a nicely balanced budget by 1924.

Then the league and its commissioner general at Vienna will retire.

There are signs, however, that Austria may not take her medicine sometimes as she should. Politics threaten to interfere. The high commissioner, Dr. A. R. Zimmerman, former burgomaster of Rotterdam, Holland, has felt obliged to call this to the attention of the league, rather emphatically.

Opposition Busy.

"The opposition," he said, "has already made use of obstructive tactics and has not even shrunk from acts of violence against the temporary head of the government when he was presiding at a meeting."

This stormy behavior took place in the Extraordinary Cabinet Council, made up of leaders of parliament and charged with aiding the government to carry out the reforms necessary if Austria is to survive.

One of the main difficulties now besetting the Austrian government —and there is where the violence came in—lies in firing the tens of thousands excess government officials and employes.

With her reduced population—about equal to that of New York City—Austria still has about as many employes as she had when she was a great empire with 10 times the population.

Many Face Layoff.

Between now and Dec. 31, this year some 75,000 people must be laid off. Something like 30,000 have already got the sack—with an indemnity for summary dismissal or a bonus for "voluntary" resignation.

Ask any city hall politician how he would feel were he told to fire half his force point-blank. He'd be sore. And he'd be scared, too. Afraid for his hold as a political leader. Of course.

The city hall politician can sympathize with the rough-house faction in the Extraordinary Cabinet Council. Austrian politicians are scared. They do not want to be rushed. They want to make the indemnities heavier and use a club with a bit more padidng. Also they objected to the plan to suspend pension payments to retired officials now working and earning considerable pay in private life.

Courage Needed.

Dr. Zimmerman insists the government must take its courage in both hands "if it really hopes to put into effect the essential economies."

A deficit of $150,000,000 is expected during the next two years. This will have to be met with foreign loans. After that the league expects Austria to balance her budget without borrowing, or even show a surplus.

The loan and the reforms—these will be the test if Austria is to survive. The alternative—the quotation came from Geneva, seat of the league—is her complete collapse "into a chaos of destitution and starvation to which there is no modern analogy outside Russia."

LIVING CHURCH WAITS ON GOD

Greatest Need of Church is Solitary Meditation, Says Rev. Wesley Megaw.

The special Anniversary service in St. Paul's Church was well attended on Sunday morning, when a deeply spiritual and practical address was given by the telented young Irishman, Rev. Wesley Megaw, of Ottawa.

Basing his sermon on the text inLuke 9, dealing with the Transfigration of Christ, the speaker developed the following lessons.

Jesus and his three closest comrades of Galilee had just passed through days of great excitement. The feeding of the multitude and his other mighty works of wonder had stirred up no small commotion in the sensation loving crowd. These were days of feverish mental and physical activity for James and John and Peter,and Jesus knowing the deepest needs of their souls brings them apart. They withdraw from the noise and jostle of the crowd that in the silent wind swept slopes of the holy hills they might celebrate the Sacrament of solitude, and, deaf to the discordant notes of the multitude, listen for the sweet accents of the voice of God.

Now if these three men who lived in the very presence of the Christ needed their hours of retirement and solitary meditation, how much more do we, in this age of headlong, rush and tremendous speed!

It is the great need of the Church today We are cluttered up with so many organisations we are so desperately anxious to have a Live Church that we organise it to death.

A Living Church comes from a ferquent sense of waiting on the Living Lord.

We must needs have a Live Wire of a minister and by that we mean—a man always on the hop at every meeting of his own Church, and at every possible gathering in the city.

Let us bear in mind that we have to "bide a wee and dinna fret."

The sure way to success is to take time for taking breath for the race is a stiff one ahead of us—stop to fit ourselves out for the fray. For the fight is to be a fierce one.

It is in the solitude we discover the utter poverty of our own qeuipment and by that discovery find the colossal niches of the resources of Christ.

The pracitcal business man cannot afford to pray—not to call a halt at times and in the silent hush of the mount of Transfiguration whose atmosphere of restfulness falls as a benediction on a worried mind—equips himself with the moral and spiritual factors that are esential to his real business prosperity.

The dreamers preceed the doers.

Ye must dream if you ever wish to do big things,

Ye must see before you say.

But this is one side and only one side of the story They did not remain up in these lofty maountain peaks of exalted experience.

Peter—the ever impetuous one felt that Sabbath rest and the calm of hills above where Jesus knelt to share with God the silence of eternity, interpreted by love, and he decided to stay up here. He would have originated then and there the Monastic system and becomne a recluse. Here with those he loved he would have lingered for ever and a day and let the rest of the world go by.

But says the Sacred Record—Peter did not know what he was talking about.

Not so Jesus—breaking in upon their beauteous silence came the claimant call of the needy. Down in the valley of work and weeping, there were those who needed Him. In the vale of Toil and Tears a tender word was needed to be spoken — Man's hardened toil, woman's heart broken grief—tender childhoods helplessness constituted an imperious call that Christ would not but respond.

So down from the mount of God they came to visit and mingle with their fellow men—to bind up the broken hearted and fill up the cracks of Life and thus glorify God.

And thus the Church has not been called upon to live in any quarantined seclusion.

She must have the vision of the Beauty of the Face of her Lord, and with that living vision she must descend from her place of worship to the valley of sorrow and sin and suffering.

To none other must she surrender her Leadership in the work of Christ—in the moral and spiritual regeneration of the children of men.

The music was of a special nature in keeping with the occasion, and included two solos by Mr. Frank Oldfield—"Jesus Lover of my Soul." and "Nearer my God to Thee." A solo by Miss Agnes Adie, "Come Thou Blessed" and an anthem "Soldiers of Christ Arise" (Miller).

HAPPIER, HEALTHIER WOMEN

by thousands are known to exist in this country because they have been relieved from pain and suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Science in surgery and electricity have advanced greatly during the past fifty years, but treatment of disease by old-fashioned root and herb medicines has never been improved upon. The leader of them all is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which after which after fifty years of success is today recognized as the standard remedy for female ills and sold everywhere for that purpose. Replies to a questionnaire recently sent out to 50,000 women by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Cobourg, Ont., proved that it benfits 98 out of every 100 women who try it. Isn't this a marvelous record for any medicine to hold?

A SURPRISE FOR PROGRESSIVES OF NORTH VICTORIA

Edgar Watson, ex-M.P., Secured Nomination at Fenelon Falls Convention Over U.F.O. County Director.

LINDSAY, May 16.—Quite a surprise was sprung at the Convention of the Progressives of North Victoria at Fenelon Falls yesterday when Edgar Watson, ex-M.P.P. secured the nomination over Jasper Forman, U.F.O. County Director.

Owing to the strong sentiment prevailing in the riding against the chairman of the Hotel Commission it was felt that Mr. Forman would have a walk-over, and the surprise manifested as a result of his defeat can better be imagined than described.

The convention was one of the largest ever held in the riding. Hon. Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer, was present at the morning session but did not remain for the nominatiin proceedings The consensus of independent opinion is that the Conservatives stand a splendid chance of redeeming the riding.

EXTEND LIMIT FOR RUSSIANS

Russian Situation Debated in the British House Yesterday.

LONDON, May 16.— (Canadian Press.)—Listening to the debate on the Russian situation Ronald McNeill announced on behalf of the Government that Foreign Secretary Curzon was prepared to enter into discussions with M. Krassin and that, in order to enable the latter to communicate with his Government in Moscow, the time limit mentioned in the British ultimatum to the Soviets would be reasonably extended. But, he added, this should not be taken to mean that the British would be satisfied with anything less than compliance with their demands.

Former Premier Lloyd George expressed satisfaction with the announcement and said he thought the Government had taken a wise decision. Gossip around the lobbies had it that the time limit would be extended another ten days.

J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Opposition, opened the debate with a strong attack upon the Government's policy in which he attributed all the troubles between Russia and Great Britain to failure to recognize the Soviet Government. He invited the Government to produce documentary proofs of his charges against the Soviet, and maintained that the Russian reply opened the way for a settlement through an international conference.

Mr. MacNeill, in replying, strongly repudiated the suggestion of hostile intentions toward Russia. He declared that the Government might have made a casus belli of its grievances, but that such an idea had never for a moment been entertained. The Government did not desire to destroy the trading agreement between the two countries but simply to insure its proper observance.

Except on the single point relating to the rights of British fishermen, the Russian reply was entirely unsatisfactory and the Government could not admit that the invasion of British rights in this matter could not be met by holding an international conference on the much larger question of settling disputes with regard to territorial water limits all over the world.

The Governments' concession took a deal of the sting out of the subsequent debate, in which Mr. Lloyd George provoked hearty laughter by declaring that M. Tchitcherin, the Soviet Foreign Minister, was not a revolutionary in the commonly accepted use of the term, but was really "as great an aristocrat as Curzon."

The former Premier maintained that Bolshevsim was a passing phase and that the Government ought to realize that there was something much more permanent than Bolshevism that they were up against. They should, therefore, take advantage of the present opportunity for conversations.

Former Premier Asquith expressed a desire to associate himself with everything Mr. Lloyd George had said.

GOOD SHOWING BY LAKEFIELD CADETS

LAKEFIELD, May 16.—The annual inspection of the Public and High School Cadets took place on Monday morning at 10 o'clock on the grounds of the school. Capt. Heron of Kingston, inspected the boys who, were very smart in their neat uniforms and new service caps. After the inspection Capt. Heron addressed the cadets for a few minutes complimenting them on the neatness of their appearance and their silence in the ranks. These things go a long way in improving the spirit of the corps. The cadet camp at Barriefield this year will be open only to the larger boys and Lakefield may send ten. This will be a great opportunity for those who can go. The camp will last two weeks; one week will be work, lots of real work and the next will be play. There will be competition in all things and the boys can be sure of a delightful week. The cadet corps is a national institution and in Canada there are 110,000 cadets. In closing the inspector asked for a half holiday for the school which the principal kindly granted.

Mr. J. M. Simpson, principal of the school, briefly addressed the boys, complimenting them on the good showing they had made and expressing his confidence in the future of the corps. Mrs. W. M. Graham the lady member of the school board spoke to the corps from a woman's point of view. She was impressed with the prompt obedience to orders and the good behaviour in the ranks. She hoped the same spirit was carried into the school room as only pupils who give their best to the teacher can receive the best the teacher has to give. The boy who is honorable and fair in his school life bids fair to become a man of whom the community is proud, but the boy who doesn't care is shaping into the man who is no use to the country and no use to himself. Mrs. Graham complimented the officers on their good work.

Capt. T. B. Marling, secretary of the school board, said a few kindly words to the corps.

Capt. Heron paid a special tribute to Cadet Capt. Jack Ridpath to whom great credit was due for the creditable showing made at the inspection.

The other officers were Cadet Lieuts. Russel Brooks and William Harvey and section commanders, Elwood Given and Harry Hill. After three hearty cheers and a tiger for His Majesty, the King, and the same for Capt. Heron, the entire corps marched to the village for their annual treat of ice cream cones which some kindly disposed fairy provides This was the ninth annual inspection.

The weather was ideal and the inspection well worth while and it seems too bad that more of the citizens, especially the parents, do not make it a point to be present as it would greatly help the morale of the corps, and would encourage the teachers who are working every day with the children to have the outward sign of the parent's interest.

The Grove Inspection

At two o'clock Capt. Heron inspected the cadet corps at "The Grove." The boys were all dressed in spotless white and presented a splendid appearance and went through their drill like soldiers, their physical drill was remarkably good, each boy doing his part admirably Capt. T. B. Marling, the drill master was highly commended by Capt. Heron for his work, Captain Heron who is an "old boy" of Ashbury College, Ottawa, was especially interested in the work of these cadets from a similar school. He made a request for a half holiday for the boys which Mr. Mackenzie kindly granted. Needless to say, Capt. Heron's popularity was assured as a half holiday never loses its value to the school boy.

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, head master of the school, said a few words to the boys commending their work as cadets and hoping to see the same devotion to duty into the schoolroom and on into life itself.

Mr. J. M. Simpson, principal of the High School, complimented "The Grove" cadets on their work. After three cheers and a tiger for the King, the corps marched off the field leaving behind in the minds of the spectators a pleasant memory of bright happy faces and alert obedient boys Massie is the cadet captain with Gray I and Little I as lieutenants and Loosemore I and Gray II as section commanders.

Sell Ice Cream Toward Upkeep of Street Lights —Preparing For Spring Rally.

BETHANY, May 16.—On account of the cold and stormy weather on Friday evening, the annual meeting of the Women's Institute was postponed. The ice cream, however, met with ready sale on Saturday evening. Ice cream will be on sale in the Town Hall every Saturday evening. The proceeds goes to the upkeep of the street lights and should be well patronized.

Mother's Day was fittingly commemorated by the Methodist Sunday School on Sunday, May 13. In connection with the regular lesson period the following programme was given: The Scripture lesson, "A Shunmite Mother," found in I Kings, chapter 17, was read by the superintendent, Mr. Monk; a quartette of four mothers, Mrs. H. H. Ryley, Mrs. (Rev.) Beckel, Mrs. A. H. Monk and Mrs. Geo. Spencer, sang the song entitled "Our Mother's Way"; four junior boys, Karl Porteous, Mansel Wright, Eric Porteous and Vincent Jackson, gave a recitation, entitled "Nobody Knows But Mother"; Mr. Monk gave a brief outline of why this second Sunday in May had been set apart as an anniversary to mothers; a very appropriate duet was sung by Mr. P. C. Brown and Mr. Ed. Bray, entitled "My Mother's Prayer"; Betty Salisbury, one of the junior girls, also gave a recitation on "Mother." One hundred and fifty-nine were present at this Sunday School session, the largest ever known to gather here under this growing organization of the Methodist Church. Through the kindness of three men deeply interested in Sunday School work, a present was made possible of two beautiful blooming rose plants, one to the oldest mother and the other to the youngest mother present. The plants were presented to Mrs. Jos. Weatheriet and Mrs. Bert Rae. The Mother's Day programme was continued at the evening service, when the pastor, Rev. Beckel, spoke on "Faith, Hope and Love," for, he said, no love like mother's love was ever known. The choir sang two anthems well in keeping with the occasion. At both services wild flowers were used as decorations, and the beautiful bloom which adorned the coats of most people present helped to create a cheerful atmosphere.

WAR DECLARED ON BORDER BANDITS.

West Will Endeavor Prevent Repetition of Last Year's Visitations.

WINNIPEG, May 16.—(Canadian Press)—Active measures designed to prevent a repitition of last year's border banditry when banks, stores and post offices were entered, many thousands of dollars stolen, and towns and villages terrorized by gunmen, have been taken by the provincial police departments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Picked for their knowledge of border patrol duty, a strong force of men will guard the international boundary day and night during the coming summer. The three prairie provinces have re-organized their patrols, and they will co-operate with each other in preventing lawlessness along the boundary.

Powerful motor cars, equipped with searchlights, and machine guns will be used along the southern border of Manitoba, Commissioner H. J. Martin, of the provincial police announced here recently. Each car will be manned by an expert driver and mechanic, a crack shot and a machine-gunner with practical experience in the war.

The men will be armed with sawed-off shotguns, Lewis guns, revolvers and tear bombs. In addition to the motor cars, motorcycles with side cars also will be used to intercept possible raiders. In Alberta machine guns are mounted on the handle bars of the machines, fixed so that the motorcycle may be steered by the grip stock of the guns. Tests carried out by a motorcycle machine gunner of the Alberta provincial police resulted in 62 hits being registered out of 70 shots fired while the machine was travelling 60 miles an hour.

A Clear, Beautiful Skin

There are millions of tiny openings or pores in the skin and these must be kept open and clean if the beauty of the skin is to be maintained.

Because it cleanses these pores and encourages the healthful action of the skin, Dr. Chase's Ointment is most effective as a skin beautifier. Roughness, redness, pimples and all sorts of skin blemishes disappear by its use, and the skin is left clear, smooth and velvety.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

BREAST MILK

As far a food is concerned there is just one food for the baby—and that is his own mothers milk. No matter how much trouble he may have to digest it—and some babies to have trouble—one may be sure that he would have more trouble with a substitute milk. That is logical isn't it?—because if his digestion finds difficulty in taking care of a food which nature has provided for him how much greater difficulty will he have in getting used to a milk which was not made for him. We try to make modified milk as much like mothers milk as possible and when we cannot have mothers milk the next best thing must be used—but it does not give the child all that it should have—because it was not intended for the infant but for the calf.

Children who are nursed are almost immune to disease. This is a well known fact. The breast milk provides the baby with sufficient anti bodies so that germs are harmless to him in almost every case.

If the mother's milk does not agree there is no reason why the mother's diet cannot be altered, her daily living changed so that it will agree. We can test breast milk the same as cow's milk and it is as amenable to treatment as any other kind of food.

If there were as much time spent on trying to get mother's milk to agree with babies as there is on trying out complicated and expensive formulas there would be few mothers who could not nurse their babies. But there seems to be a concerted opinion among mothers that as soon as the baby cries and acts dissatisfied that her only hope is to wean it. Then—if she only knew it—is when all her troubles really begin.

WORK AND PLAY.

In the great scheme of Life, work and play are interchangeably related. Man must work in order that he may have leisure and means to play. Man must play in order that he may have strength and ability to work. Mother Nature, neglectful of nothing for her children's welfare, has amply provided for both. The big, busy cities of the continent present unlimited opportunities for labour of hand and brain. Within a few hundred miles of the very centres of civilisation lie boundless areas of hill and lake and virgin forest where the tired worker may find rest and recreation for body and soul. To many a woodland paradise in the favored Province of Ontario will the Canadian Nationals Railways carry you. This great Railway system has just issued a very comprehensive booklet entitled "Playgrounds of Ontario" which includes descriptive matter regarding the Ontario Summer resort districts, and also has a very comprehensive map, list of hotels and boarding houses, golf links in the Province of Ontario, etc. A copy may be secured free on application to any Canadian National Ticket Agent.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S. MONTHLY MEETING

The mothly meeting the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's, held last evening, was well attended. The meeting was in charge of Mission Circle Three, with Mrs. William Stevens president. Mrs. John and Mrs. Stevens gave very interesting reports of the convention which they attended recently in Windsor. The large work carried on by missionaries throughout the world is very gratifying and encourages us to greater effort. A solo by Mrs. Zeihr was much appreciated, and a paper by Mrs. Nevin on 'Missionary Pioneers,' and a talk on the very interesting stories in the "Messenger" by Miss Craw, were pleasing features. The meeting closed with prayer and a welcome to the new members.

Circle Four will be in charge of the next meeting on June 19th.

YOUNG SILVER MEDAL SOLOIST

To Miss Mathilde Masson, the young Peterboro girl who won the first prize, a silver medal in a group of eighteen singers competing in soprano solo work at the recent Ontario Musical Competition Festival in Toronto, belongs the honor of capturing this award after a course of vocal study which has extended over a period of less than two years in length. Although Miss Masson's musical education has been progressing since she was a small girl, she was not allowed to take vocal instruction until quite recently, her mother and teachers considering a sound background of pianoforte instruction as the essential foundation of a vocal career. Miss Masson's recent success probably justifies the theory.

French Parentage

Miss Mathilde Masson, who was born in Toronto, of French parentage her father being the late Professor Masson, teacher of French at the University of Toronto, was placed in St. Joseph's Academy, Toronto at the age of five years, when her musical education commenced. For nearly eleven years, she continued under the tuition of the Sisters of St Joseph, going later for a four year finishing term to the Convent of Sicllery, near the city of Quebec, a convent conducted by the Sisters of Jesu-Marie. Here she studied languages and pianoforte music taking vocal instruction from the sisters during the last two years of her stay Miss Masson has obtained the degree of A.T.C.M. from the Toronto Conservatory for vocal proficiency and has also passed successfully her intermediate piano examination.

Highly Complimented

Of Miss Masson's voice, the adjudicator, Mr. H. Plunkett Greene of London, England, said some very complimentary things. He described her singing as charming, laying stress on the excellence of her French diction, style and phrasing, also the quality of interpretation which held her audience. He remarked on the splendid operatic style which marked the rendition of the "Air de Salome," sung in French.

Miss Mathilde Masson.

This selection "Je est doux, ie est hon," ("He is kind, He is good"), (Herodiade), from Massenet's opera, was the second number, in Grade A for soprano solos, designed for singers of the coloratura type Handel's "Skylark, Pretty Rover,' in Key of F, was the first song, a pretty, gay thing of light, airy melody.

Commendable Ambition

Miss Masson's ambition is to train her voice for concert work. She intends to continue her vocal study immediately under Professor J. A. Carboni of Toronto, formerly instructor at the Hambourg Conservatory of Music in Toronto, now conducting an independent studio. Prof Carboni is described in the syllabus of the Festival as "Maestro J. A. Carboni, O. A., O. I. P., Paris, France, M.S.A.C.M., conductor Operatic Chorus, Toronto."

At present, Miss Masson is one of the staff of music teachers at the local Conservatory of Music, there she has had splendid success in imparting musical instruction to children through the Myers method.

GOOD PLAYS COMMENDED.

LONDON, May 16.—(Associated Press). — There was a time when zealous pastors in London were wont to denounce theatres as anterooms to hell, and their flocks applauded them for it. But nowadays the minister of the gospel who talks that way is regarded as narrow-minded. Few, however, have made such a complete right-about-face as the Rev. E. J. Saxton. Addressing the Durham, Yorkshire and Northumberland Congregational Union at Leeds recently, he said:

"I should like to see our religious papers give every week a list of plays worth seeing. Some plays are as good as a sermon, and there is certainly a ministry of laughter as well as of song."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE HUMANE SOCIETY

To the Editor THE EXAMINER:

As a Frenchman would say "is it permitted to me to say a kind word for the Humane Society?

Of course we know that some men are lovers of animals, and are kind to them. For instance, I have known men who were so fond of their horses that they would give the animals nice pure, clear spring water to drink, while they were content to drink nasty old whisky themselves. But then all men are not kind to animals, and it is necessary to have this society to protect them. The society is fortunate in having Mr. Stapleton as Inspector, and excellent work is being done. But I regret to learn that to date there are only thirty-eight members enrolled. In a city of churches this does not look well. I fear the animals will not think much of our religion.

And some long eared animal may ask the now familiar question "what is the matter with the church?" Only in this instance the animal may appear to have more foundation for his query, than his friends usually have who are continually ringing the changes with this question. To put the society on a proper financial basis there should be at least five hundred members at one dollar each.

Yes, I know how busy we are and now on top of everything else there comes along this old provincial election. And I know how hard we are all working to aid those three excellent gent'emen, Drury, Hay and Ferguson, to save Ontario. Far be it from me to hinder such a noble work, but would it not be nice if we could spare a few minutes from this work of saving Ontario send in our dollar to this deserving society, and have the honor of having our names enrolled. I appeal to our kind hearted citizens to join at once, an remove this cause of reproach, and I hope that during the ensuing week so many applications will be sent in to the society that the Post office people will think it is Christmas.

WOMAN'S DUTY TOWARD GOD

Two Sermons of Interest Dealing With Obligations of Married and Single Women.

Last evening two sermons were delivered by the Redemptorist Missionaries, one to the unmarried, while the other was addressed to the married women. In St. Alphonsus' Lyceum Rev. J. O'Brien, C.S.S.R., spoke to the unmarried women, who completely filled the spacious hall, on their three-fold duty—to God, to themselves and to their neighbor—while at the same time in the Cathedral Rev. F. Kenzel, C.S.S.R., spoke to the married women. Father Kenzel addressed those in the Cathedral on the duties of married people, peculiar to their state in life.

"Matrimony," he said, "is a sacrament which gives to a man and woman the grace to live happily together as husband and wife and to bring up their children in the fear and love of God." Those who do not hold this ideal before their minds upon entering married life and during it are bound to meet with unhappiness, dissension and misery. It is not a mere civil contract that can be dissolved by earthly powers, so that husband and wife are free to re-marry, but it is a holy union between man and wife made indissolvable by God Himself, and is not broken save by the death of either party. "What God hath joined together," says the holy writer, "let no man put asunder."

There is a dignity and a sanctity in the privilege of maternity in which the Almighty entrusts his little ones to the care of parents, who are bound in His sight to do their part by word and example to lead those children back to Him. In speaking of the duties of married people, one to the other, the reverend speaker denounced in no uncertain terms the various grave crimes that are committed against the holiness and very purpose and aim of matrimony—crimes that cry to heaven for the punishment that is bound to come, not only in the supernatural order, but even in the natural course of things.

The love that should exist between husband and wife is symbolized by Christ's love for his church. It must be, therefore, a lasting love, sweet, holy and exclusive. If there is no spirituality in their mutual affection, it is but a form of selfishness and as such will soon wear away. Sometimes it happens that the young wife cannot quite understand why she is now to shut herself away from the attentions of other men friends before her marriage; why parties of certain kinds, appointments, motor drives and the like with old friends, which might be harmless in themselves, are frequently not only imprudent and dangerous, but absolutely wrong. If she is to live up to the sacred promises made at the altar, she will receive from no man, save her husband, attentions beyond those ordinarily accorded by gentlemen in the true sense.

Upon the advent of children, the husband and wife occupy a new role in the sight of heaven. Those children, let them remember, have been created for eternal happiness, and woe to the parents who by their own wilful negligence and bad example rob the Almighty of those little souls. Parents should bear in mind that whatever influences there are that will later leave their mark on the child's soul and character, there is one place that is supreme in this respect, and that is the home; there are lessons that sink the most deeply of all into the plastic minds and hearts of the young, and they are those taught by the parents—the really natural guardians and teachers of their offspring. To foster, above all else, in their young a knowledge and a love of God and obedience to authority, parents who realize their obligations will use means best adapted to further this end. In this connection the reverend speaker showed the great value and necessity of schools for the young in whose class-rooms Christian doctrine was taught, and looked upon as an important subject in the curriculum of studies.

In concluding, Father Kenzel urged his hearers to always live and act in keeping with the dignity and sacred obligations of their calling as wives and mothers. They have for their example the blessed Mother of God herself. Burdens which are attendant upon their duties are, if patiently borne, but an additional means of pleasing the Almighty and acquiring merit in the life to come.

HELD UP COURT WITH FAKE GUN

North Bay Agog Over Sensational Escape of Former Convict-Commandeered Automobile.

NORTH BAY, May 16.— (Canadian Press.)—Brandishing a revolver and crying "hands up," Leo Rogers aged 21, a former convict, set North Bay agog to-day with one of the most sensational escapes from custody in the history of this town.

The getaway was made about eleven o'clock this morning, from the court room partially filled with people, just as district court was about to open. Reaching the street Rogers halted an automobile and threatening the driver, forced him to take him to the outskirts of the town, where he leaped from the rear seat of the car and disappeared in the direction of Trout lake. He left his "revolver" in the rear seat of the automobile. It was made of cardboard covered with black paper and had an imitation trigger.

Rogers was facing a charge of carrying weapons dangerous to public safety. He was arrested three weeks ago, and the police found two loaded automatic revolvers in his possession. He is the same man who three years ago made a desperate attack on the guard at Portsmouth penitentiary, when undergoing sentence for burglary and shop breaking.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Editor: In reply to Mr. W. H. Merrel's letter in your paper last night, raising the question of tuberculosis in cheese, milk being treated for cheese making purposes is only heated to normally 100 degrees, but it is held at that temperature for from two to three hours, and this has the effect of destroying the tubercular germ. By heating milk to 170 degrees for one minute it will kill any disease germ but this high temperature has been found to be unnecessary where milk is held at a certain temperature for a longer period; in the pasteurization of milk for city purposes a t mperature of 140 degrees for 30 minutes is the general practice. Heating the milk to 100 degrees and holding it for two hours or more will have the same effect on the tubercular or disease germ but not in stopping the growth of other bacteria, which in many cases produces a bad flavor in cheese Mr. Merrel also points out that pasteurized milk will not make satisfactory cheese, which is quite correct, but on the other hand the curdy matter from pasteurized milk is soft and more easily digested than milk in the raw state; and dairy research work has demonstrated the fact that the pasteurized milk when taken into the stomach of a child is almost identical with the mother's milk, and is easily digested, and for this reason the child can digest pasteurized milk where it may not be able to digest raw milk. Yours truly

G. A. GILLESPIE.

AUSTRALIAN GOLD SURPLUS.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 16.—(Associated Press).—Gold coinage is likely to be in circulation again in Australia within 12 months, according to financial experts, when exchange will reach parity again. The embargo on the export of gold still is operative, and it is pointed out that Australia could not allow free shipment of her gold if Great Britain did not do the same.

It is believed here that the agreement for funding the British debt to the United States will hasten the resumption of gold payments in the United Kingdom, and it is understood that as soon as the example is set in England, it will be followed immediately in Australia.

Gold production has declined heavily in Australia, but the gold reserve against paper circulation stands among the highest in the world. The latest note issue returns show that the value of notes in circulation is 52,651,000 pounds, with 24,426,000 in gold, or 46.4 per cent., held against it.

ATTENDANCE GROWS AT MARK STREET

Excellent Choir Numbers and Solo Featured Sunday's Services.

Each Sabbath finds the attendance larger, and the services more powerful and inspiring. Notwithstanding the unusual attractions in other parts of the city, Mark Street congregations were far beyond the average on Sunday.

The choir did most excellent service, and the solo by Miss Beavis in the morning was greatly enjoyed. Twenty-five voices composed the choir at the evening meeting, and the solo by Mr. Gaul was well received. Mr. V. Boowman is to be congratulated on the music of the day.

"The hand that Guides the World," was the subject of the morning sermon, and was based on the scripture found in John 19, 27, "Behold thy Mother." The following is an outline of the address.

Christ has enriched millions of the human family, tho' He Himself was was very poor. He left niether houses, lands, stocks, bonds, or money. He never signed a deed or wrote a letter, but when the nickle-plated pharisees brought before him a poor, weary, sinful woman, and accused her of a sin of which they themselves were equally guilty; He bowed his glorious form down, and wrote her pardon in the sand. Certainly He read her heart and knew her repentance.

But although Jesus was poor, He was rich in that which money could not buy, even the unspeakable wealth of a holy mother. Just before he bowed his dying head, with the nails through his hands and feet, he made his will. It contained only three words, viz, "Behold thy Mother." Oh happy happy disciple, to be entrusted by thy Lord with such a charge.

First "Mothers' Day

Who shall measure the weight of sorrow and agony borne by that stricken heart, as she hears the dying words of her Son in reference to her future. She knows now that He shall not descend from the cross, but shall die. As the weary, throne-crowned head of the Son of God sinks upon his silent breast, and the heart-torn disciples steal away to weep, and the black apostacy of hell hiss about Calvary; that is the the day of Hell's jubilee.

But when Easter glory chases away the gloom of death, and the world's long night is past; and the mighty bars of bondage have been shattered by the power of the risen Christ; It is then Mary, looking upon her glorious Son, alive forever more beholds the first and greatest "Mothers' Day."

Mother, Home, and Heaven.

It has been said that the heart never ceases to vibrate to the music of these three words. The first two are so connected in thought, that we can hardly separate them. However, we shall confine our re marks this morning more particularly to the first, and should we, at this time, leave "Father" out of the discussion, we shall not deem it necessary to offer an opology. This is "Mothers' Day," and Father expects no roses thrown at him.

Mother rules, a joint sovereign, in the kingdom of the home. Homes may be made in houses; tents, forests ,but houses are not necessarily homes. The Christian home is an institution, a royal commonwealth. It is founded on love. Certsinly its head is "King by the grace of God," yet he rules by the will of his subjects; whose government is "of the people, and for the people". It is older than any human institution, but can hold its court anywhere. Here mother is queen.

The Hand of Mother Guides

How careful mother was of our food, clothing, sleep, exercise, habits of life, invironment, and the sights and sounds that greeted our eye and ear from day to day. What holy impression she made upon the plastic character or mind of our early youth, and these have never been effaced. Our spiritual life and its developement was her constant care. To us her Bible was the sacred, living, and inspired Book of God, and we never for amoment dobuted the reality of its beautiful stories. What she did and said was always right and true. Mothers' God and mothers' praywer ere, to us, stupendous realities. And what was the meaning of all this? Why, she was building men for the stage of the world; men and women that would exalt the nation through t e principles taught by her. Next to that of the Spirit of God, there is no power so mighty for good as the influence of a Christian mother.

Mother was a Mediator

As the mother bird protects her nestlings, even with her life, so mother ever stands between her child and danger. Her manoeuvers in the home have a patheite humor about them. When we failed to perform a duty imposed by father she did it, gave us the credit, and received no reward. Did father bid us doff the jacket and prepare for punishment? Then she gently came between, sent us up stairs, looked in father's eyes and said "let me flog him." And ,Oh! what a punishment she gave, laughed outright before she was half through with the job. But what she failed to accomplish with the rod, she made up by love and prayer. Then when we went away she packed our trunk—nobody could ever pack a trunk just like she—and sent us away with the kiss of undying love on our cheek, and followed us with her love her letters and her prayers.

Red and the White Flower

Mother speaks from two worlds. The life, example, counsel, and admnitions of Christian mothers' are being lived over again by countless thousands of men and women; while these mothers have gone home to heaven. Multitudes moreare kept steady by the holy life of mothers still alive. The red flower tell s she's with me still. The white flower tells me she's at home with God.

WILLARD SIGNED TO MEET FIRPO

Winner of This Bout Will Probably Have a Crack at Jack Dempsey or Tommy Gibbons.

NEW YORK, May 16.— (Canadian Press.)—The preliminary move toward another contest for the world's heavyweight championship was made yesterday by Tex Rickard, promoter, in the signing of Jess Willard, former titleholder, and Luis Firpo, Argentine giant, for a contest to be held in New York or vicinity, not later than July 7.

The winner of this proposed engagement will be matched with Jack Dempsey in a title contest which probably will be held next Labor Day.

Rickard declined to reveal terms for the Firpo-Willard match, except that they will fight on a percentage basis. Experts, however, figure that the bout will draw a gate of at least a half million dollars, and that the share of each principal would be at least $100,000.

The contest will be staged either at Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City or the Yankee Stadium.

Willard, satisfied that his victory over Johnson at the Yankee Stadium last Saturday proved his physical fitness and ended the talk about him being too old, left last night for Los Angeles to visit his family. The South American has made arrangements to meet three lesser lights among the heavyweights before July 1. He will resume training to-day for a match at Grand Rapids, Mich. with Harry Foley, on May 22. He has signed to meet Joe White, of New York, in Havana, Cuba, June 3, and Jim Hibbard, of Buffalo, in Mexico City, June 22.

BASEBALL NEWS

There is so much "bunk" being published in some of the papers around the Central Ontario circuit that it is difficult to guess what will appear next. In Saturday's issue of the Lindsay Post it was stated that Al Heckman in applying for an amateur card had given his former residence as Ingersoll, Ontario. The item has been copied by most of the district papers. As a matter of fact, the Petes' pitcher declared in his statement that he had formerly played with the Ingersoll-Rand Company of Phillipsburg, N.J., and there was of course no mention whatever of the Western Ontario town of Ingersoll. Last year the district papers had Heckman's former home town listed as Cleveland. What the next guess will be time alone can tell.

Two—If the third strike is a wild pitch that the catcher is unable to hold, the batsman reaching first, is the catcher charged with an error?

Three—If a player tries to steal easily Beats him to the bag, is the runner credited with a stolen base if the infielder drops the ball in making the touch?

Four—When the umpire rules infield fly how is the advancement of the runners determined?

Five—Batted ball clears the fence but strikes an advertising board erected about a yard back of the fence. It falls back on playing territory, and runner is retired at third. What about it?

Answers.

One—The fielder is exempted from an error on a dropped fly is able to force a runner at another base.

Two—The catcher is not charged with an error for his failure to handle the third strike, same being a wild pitch.

Three—No stolen base is allowed. The infielder handling the ball is charged with an error if it is apparent he had the runner attempting the steal.

Four—Runners can advance on an infield fly the same as on any other fly ball that is caught or dropped.

Five—It is a home run The moment it passed out of playing territory, that ended it. There was no longer a chance for a play on the runner.

MERCANTILE WILL OPEN THE SEASON

First Game Will Be Played This Evening Between the Examiner and the Bankers.

Bad baseball weather has held up the opening of the season for the city teams for some time, but the Mercantile Leaguers expect to get under way this evening at Riverside Park for the first battle of the year.

If the weather man allows The Examiner and Bankers' teams will clash at 6.15 for the opener, with Alex. Kay calling the balls and the strikes.

These two teams are both unknown quantities in the local baseball world, for both have been keeping very quiet as regards their playing material. Both are, however, expected to put strong teams in the field, and the opening game of the season should be a good one.

The second game will be played to-morrow, when the Westclox and C.P.C. will meet at 5.15 This also should be a first-class game.

C.P.C. AND SCOTS AGAIN PLAY DRAW

Gordon Cup Semi-Final Last Evening Ended With the Score 1 to 1.

The replay of the Gordon Cup Semi-Final between the Thistles and the C. P. C. again ended in a draw with the score standing 1 to 1. The game was played last evening at King Edward Park, before a good crowd.

The Scots won the toss and elected to kick down the field. The ground was rather wet from the recent rain, but in spite of this fact, it was soon evident that the game would be a real battle. Richmond got away but sent his final effort wide. Mann and Oxley were in fine form and held off the invasion of the Scots while Anson, the Packers right wing made good use of his speed in a counter attack. Anson got a good shot but missed by inches. Rae from the goal kick, sent well down the field and Burgess forced a corner which he placed in the mouth of the goal but Richmond headed wide. Oxley sent Wag Hotston away, but McMillan spoiled his final effort by kicking out. Richmond then took a nice overhead kick and sent in a terrific shot Curtis caught the ball, but owing to the slippery ground, he fell and was unable to hold it. Young got the ball and sent it in for the opening score.

The Packers returned to the fray with a will and Shaw who was playing a great game at center half, kept his forwards well supplied. The defence of the Scots was too good for them and when half time was called, the Packers failed to score.

On resuming play, the Packers took the game in hand, and Fenner was given a busy time but cleared his goal in fine style. Anson on the right for the Packers, was very prominent in the attack and his efforts met with success when he took the return from one of his centers and slammed it through to even up the count. The Packers pressed the attack and again kept Fenner busy for a while. The Scots defence however, proved good and the game travelled up and down the field for some time. Richmond took a foul kick from near the Packer's goal but sent wide of the mark and Curtis later made a brilliant save from a corner which the Scots had forced.

In the Packer's attack, Wag and Ted Hotston nearly beat Fenner with a good cross shot but the Scot's defence again proved too much for them.

Give and take was the order of the day and with both defence lines working there was no further scoring.

The teams were:

C. P. C. — Goal. Curtis; backs, Oxley and Mann; halves, Underwood, Shaw and Bradbury; forwards Ted Hotston, Fenton, Wag Hotston, Fallis and Anson.

Thistles— goal, Fenner; backs, Rae and Anderson; halves, Rickards, McMillan and Jackson; forwards, Shaun, Young, Richmond, Reid and Burgess.

Referee, J. Clarke.

MODERN GOLF

By—W. J. & Frank Thompson

NOTED CANADIAN GOLFERS

No. 3

FUNDAMENTALS

There are a number of points about the golf swing which the player need not know anything of in order to play excellent golf. Indeed, one might go further and say that the knowledge of some points is detrimental to good golf, and especially is this the case if the player is conscious of them during the execution of a stroke.

The golf swing may be likened to the processes of life. The average person is entirely ignorant of the chemical action that goes on during digestion, the circulation of the blood, or the action of the lungs, but this lack of knowledge does not interfere with the enjoyment of life. These processes are all revealed by analysis. Golf is very much the same. There are numerous points which are revealed by study, and of which the good player is often ignorant. Several examples suggest themselves such as the transference of the weight, what starts the club down, and what one thinks of while hitting the ball. These are all interesting studies, but are more academic than practical.

The stars of the game in the past were professionals, who, although fine fellows with good horse-sense were for the most part illiterate men incapable of making any sustained mental application. Their mental deficiencies, as such, did not interefere with their playing fine golf. Those of us who must reflect should remember there are a goodly number whose games are ruined by too much theorizing, or perhaps I should say too little, for as some one has said, it is not a little learning that is a dangerous thing, but being satisfied with a little. The man who plays a good game and knows how he plays, is in my opinion vastly superior to the person who just plays a good game. The latter's game is more easily demoralized. With the above qualification most goifers would make quicker progress if they concerned themselves with the fundamentals only of the game.

The beginner should always remember that the driving of a golf ball is first and last subject to certain laws. It is a question of mechanics. Determined by the formula ½ M.V. 2, which is half the mass by the velocity squared. That is if one player can swing a thirteen-ounce club twice as fast as another player, four times the amount of energy is put into the shot by the swifter swing. It is not the weight then that drives the ball so much as the speed of the blow. If one can swing a fourteen-ounce club as fast as a thirteen-ounce one, by all means use the heavier club. The practical problem for the golfer is to use the heaviest club which will give the maximum of speed.

The golf swing may be considered as made up of two parts, the swing of the arms and the twist of the body, and these two are not casually dependent on each other. One may have a faulty pivot and a fine wrist action—or vice versa. Success at golf depends on how well the golfer can make these two movements blend so that they appear to the spectator one movement and feel that way to the player. It is when one of these movements works in opposition to the other that the game becomes such a labored effort to the player, and appears so awkward to the spectator. In watching the star players, the movements are so smooth and harmonious that no jerk or section is apparent. The golf swing is not made up of sections as some would have us believe, but commences as a complexity. Although the swing is complex for its inception, it is also unified. At different points we are able to say that the movements are fuller and more vigorous, but never can we say that one ends here while another starts some place else. This is important for practical golf, for if one builds up the swing in parts sooner or late it must be unified. So why not start this way, and the chances are the swing will remain so. A good tip given me by an international player, is to start the swing with the hands, left knee, and left shoulder working together. The motion pictures show this to be the case with good players.

One cannot drive a ball far by the employment only of the arms and hands with the body restricted. The body must twist or pivot, and the way the body pivots is very essential. This will be taken up when "balance" is discussed, in a future article. The swing should form an arc more in the nature of the ellipse than a circle, and the plane of the arc will depend on the build of the player.

As has been pointed out before, players in addition to being stout, medium or slim, differ greatly in the nature and character of their ankle, wrist, hip and other joints, and to expect everyone to swing a club the same way is ridiculous. The arc of the swing should always be smooth and free, without any jerk. Every swing will be more or less flat and should be (assuming the stance is square) inside the direction line both on the back swing and follow through, except for a few inches before and after impact, which will be along the direction line. From experiment it has been found that the hardest blow can be delivered when the arms are in pretty close to the body, but not when they are tucked in so close as to be uncomfortable. In any event one should not reach for the ball too much. When the blow is struck it is surprising how similar is the position of the body to that of the address. Whenever the right elbow is allowed to slip away too far from the body in the up swing, a certain amount of power is lost. Players who find a decrease in the length of their drives will be well advised to examine the right elbow in regard to this point. One should not go to the other extreme of cramping the movements, for freedom is never to be sacrificed.

It is a good working principle for the golfer to remember that the left arm and the club should form straight lines, although not continuous ones. The player, of course can only approximate this. There should not, however, be any pronounced bending at the left elbow in the nature of a hinge, for then a jerk is introduced into the swing resulting in a loss of power. Rigidity of the left arm should be avoided. It is quite possible to have the left arm practically straight without tautening the muscles.

HERD HAS MADE 17 HOLES IN ONE SHOT

Leads All Golfers in the Thrill Which Many Players Never Experience.

There is a thrill in such a performance that goes with nothing else in baseball.

Playing a hole-in-one in golf is on a par with pitching a no-hit game as far as thrills are concerned.

Any golfer will tell you that nothing compares with getting a long ball from the tee, and upon reaching the green discover that the ball has obligingly rolled into the cup.

Many of the game's greatest golf professionals have never experienced the thrill of holing out in one. Likewise many of the star pitchers of the majors have failed to break into the no-hit class.

Perhaps no golfer in the history of the sport has a record that can compare with that of Sandy Herd, the former British open champion, in this respect. On 17 different occasions during his long career on the links, Herd has enjoyed the thrill of holing out in one.

"An accurate ball from the tee plus plenty of good luck is the way to dot it," explains Herd.

SCOTT HAS MADE A GREAT RECORD

One Thousand Consecutive Games is a Mark That Will Stand For Some Time.

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, May 16 (United Press). — When most every athletic record of importance set up in the past has been made to look easy by the advancement and improvement in modern sports, it is not safe to assume that the marks of the present day will be any less breakproof in front of the assault of the next generation of stars.

If there is one modern achievement of sport that has a chance to remain on the books for a long time it is the record of Everett Scott, the champion marathon man of baseball, who has passed the 1,000 mark for participation in consecutive games.

Scotty's mark is bound to remain for five more years because no other player now in the major leagues has enough behind him to equal the record without playing in every game for the next five years.

Numerous theories have been advanced in figuring the secret of the Deacon's phenomenal exhibition of endurance and dependability and the pet theory is that he has been the little side-kick of a lot of luck.

Scotty admits that he has been helped by luck in reaching a mark more than twice as good as that accomplished by any other player and some of the experiences he has been through bear out that the fates kept a watchful hand and eye over him.

It is well known how he was spiked, knocked out with balls, dropped by bats, and held up by train wrecks, but the tightest pinch from which he escaped came when he was laid up with a boil on his eye and was unable to go to the park. His record looked shot until a rainstorm came along before the game and caused a postponement.

That was pure luck, of course.

With all the luck in the world, Scotty could not have made his record, however, if he didn't have the heart and habits of a conscientious worker and the spirit of subserviance to the interests of the team.

Scotty is just a natural plugger, and he is there all the time. He says he never missed a day at school and he apparently developed at a tender age the habit of "being there."

Even before he had thought of the possibility of making a record, he was following his policy of "being there," and his great record is the result.

* * * * *

Scotty is one of the most popular players on the Yankee team, and all around the American League circuit The players on the club say he is the only one in their family who can call Babe Ruth "Tarzan" and get away with it.

Modesty is the Deacon's most pleasing virtue. In discussing his game recently he said he couldn't hit and never could hit, and that he had to specialise on fielding to cinch a job that would put him in the game every day.

GIRLS WILL WEAR RUNNING TRUNKS

Whether girl track stars of the Pennsylvania Railroad System should wear old fashioned bloomers or should adopt the modern, although abbrevated, running trunks has apparently been settled in favor of the trunks.

At least this is the word from Pittsburgh, Chicago and St. Louis, the big Pennsy regional centers whose girl sprinters blamed their defeat in the last Pennsy athletic meet to wind-catching bloomers.

The Philadelphia girls, appearing for the first time in the slightly and almost weightless running trunks, captured first places with alarming regularity. Especially was Betty Schenkel, the most famous girl athlete on the Pennsylvania Railroad, a consistent winner. Pennsy's future athletc indoor meets are almost certain to present the spectacle of a solid delegation of girl track event entries clad in running trunks.

Miss Rose Zarobsky, the Pittsburg girl who lost the system cup and championship by a step in the last meet, attributed her losing the 75-yard dash to her heavy bloomers. She has adopted running trunks.

In reply to possible adverse comment on girl employees wearing the running tnurks, there is cited the word of hundreds who attended the last athletic meet that in the vast crow of 40,000 spectators not one remark was heard indicative that the Philadelphia girls' attire was unsuited or immodest.

On the contrary, wives and sisters of railroad men who composed a great section of the crowd were enthusiastic over the girls' adoption of running trunks and said that verve and grace has been added to the athletic meet.

Smuts Treated Proposal as Joke.

CAPETOWN, May 16.— (Canadian Press.)—The House of Assembly yesterday debated the motion recently made by Labor Leader Cresswell requesting the King to refrain from conferring titles on residents of the Union of South Africa. The Laborites and Nationalists supported the motion, which was opposed by the Government. Premier Smuts treated the proposals as a joke. On division the motion was rejected by a vote of 54 to 42.

BAILIEBORO BAZAAR WAS HUGE SUCCESS

Willing Workers Provided Pleasant and Profitable Affair—News of Interest

BAILIEBORO, May 16.—On Saturday evening the Willing Workers' Mission Band of the Methodist Church here held a bazaar in the Tuxis Boys' Hall. Supper was served from 5 o'clock until 7 o'clock. At 7 o'clock Rev. R. M. Patterson opened the proceedings with a short address, congratulating the Mission Band on their excellent work during the past two years since they organized their band.

A large number of buyers were present, and soon purchased nearly every article offered for sale at a very reasonable price.

A surprise box, operated by Mrs. N. Jewison, afforded good fun for both young and old. Packages were placed in a large box with a string attached to each, and five and ten cents was charged for a draw. A candy and ice cream booth found ready patrons, and everything was disposed of.

A guessing contest, operated by Mrs. F. Jewison and Mrs. J. Jewison, also added wonderfully to the enjoyment of the evening. A jar of beans was placed on a table, and the one who guessed the nearest to the number of beans the receptacle contained received a prize. Mr. P. Barnard guessed the nearest, his number being 700—the exact count was 695—and he was awarded a box of Laura Secord chocolates.

The Mission Band are certainly to be congratulated on the success of their bazaar. The proceeds of the evening amounted to nearly $70.

Special Services.

Special services were conducted in the churches on Mother's Day. A male voice choir provided special music in the Methodist Church, where Rev. R. M. Patterson preached a very impressive sermon. Rev. A. H. McConnachie was also present and spoke briefly at the close of the service.

On May 27 the men will have their holiday from the choir, and the ladies will provide the music for the evening service at 7.30.

THE PETES PLAY IN LINDSAY TOMORROW

The Peterborough Central Ontario League team will journey to Lindsay tomorrow afternoon for an exhibition game with the Greybirds. The cars will leave the Water St. Bowling Alleys at 1.15 sharp, and the following players are expected to be on hand: Swanston, Heckman, Summerfeldt, McElroy, Comolli, Johnston, Ansaldo, Collins, Helson, Legon, Wolfe, Lowe, Shaughnessy and Manager Solomon. Any player in this list who is unable to make the trip is asked to report to Manager Solomon at Wright's cigar store this evening.

LINDSAY TRYING RAFT OF PLAYERS

Two Portly Gentlemen From Rochester Among the Aspirants For a Position.

The Lindsay Central Ontario League team, who will meet the Petes at Riverside Park on Saturday, have evidently a raft of players from which to pick a line-up, including two Rochester artistes who are built on Babe Ruth lines. They expect to surprise the Petes in the game at Lindsay to-morrow and to repeat the dose here on Saturday when they tie into Manager Solomon's crew.

Saturday's game should be an interesting exhibition, as well as a splendid workout for the Petes for the opening League fixture of the season at Cobourg a week from to-morrow.

It will be called at 3 'clock sharp, and Al Heckman is billed to do the heaving for the Petes, while Begg, Garlow, and Sova will start for Lindsay.

In the practice last night there were enough players on hand to pick up two teams, which was done, and a scrap game took place, with Milt. Dedman calling the balls and strikes. The line-up for Thursday's game will be picked from the following players:

Pitcher: C. Begg of Lindsay, Andy Garlow of Lindsay, and Dan Sova of Lindsay.

2nd Base: Orville Ashton of Lindsay.

Shortstop. Bruce of Lindsay, McDonald and McMahon of Lindsay.

3rd Base: Dawson of Lindsay.

Outfield: Wiliamson, N. Starr, McDonald, Richman, McMahon, W. Hutton, McBrien, Ryley, W. Weldon, W. Mark, A. Gage, G. Workman, Miles, Dr. Shier, and Abbs.

Fans are urged to turn out to see the opening game on Thursday and see the Birds in action. It will also give the fans a chance to see the Peterborough crew at work.

In last night's practice game the two big men from Rochester showed up well. Both of them weigh considerably over 200 pounds each.

Beggs, Garlow, Gage, and Sova were tried out on the mound, while Murchinson and Meyers performed behind the bat. The pitchers did well, considering they have not been in training. They possess speed and some of them are curve artistes as well.

The catchers also showed up well, Murchinson pegging well, and Meyers got them wide and high

It is hoped and it is possible, that the Lindsay Birds may spring a surprise on Jake Solomon's fast aggregation on Thursday next.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

They crossed at Tecarte next day and in the somnolent little border town Don Mike made sundry purchases and proceeded south on the road toward Ensenada.

Meanwhile, John Parker, his wife and daughter and Danny Leighton had motored to San Diego and taken rooms at a hotel there. Each day they attended the races at Tia Juana, and as often as they appeared there they looked long and anxiously for Don Miguel Jose Federico Noriaga Farrel. But in vain.

Three days before Thanksgiving the entries for the Thanksgiving handicap were announced, and when Danny Leighton read them in the morning paper he at once sought his employer.

"That fellow Farrel has spoiled everything," he complained furiously. "He's entered Panchito in the Thanksgiving Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth, for a ten thousand dollar purse. There he is!"

Parker read the list and sighed. "Well, Panchito is his horse, Danny. He has a right to enter him if he pleases—hello! Katie! Kay! Here's news for you. Listen!"

He read aloud:

DON QUIXOTE AND SANCHO PANZA, JR.

ARRIVE AT TIA JUANA—THEY ENTER PANCHITO IN THE THANKSGIVING HANDICAP

By the Rail Bird.

Considerable interest having developed among the followers of the sport of kings at Tia Juana race-track anent the entry of Panchito in the Thanksgiving Handicap, and the dope yielding nothing, your correspondent hied him to the office of the secretary of the Lower California Jockey Club; whereupon he was regaled with the following extraordinary tale:

Two days ago a Mexican rode into Tia Juana from the south. He was riding Panchito and his outfit was the last word in Mexican magnificence. His saddle had cost him not a real less than five hundred dollars gold; his silver spurs could have been pawned in any Tia Juana loan office for twenty-five dollars and many a longing glance was cast on a magnificent bridle that would have cost any bricklayer a month's pay. Panchito, a splendid big chestnut with two white stockings and a blazed face, was gray with sweat and alkali dust and shod like a plow horse. He wore cactus burrs in his tail and mane and had evidently traveled far.

His rider claimed to have been on the road a week, and his soiled clothing and unshaven face gave ample testimony of that fact. He was arrayed in the traditional costume of the Mexican ranchero of means and spoke nothing but Spanish, despite which handicap the racing secretary gleaned that his name was Don Miguel Jose Maria Federico Noriaga Farrelle. Following Don Miguel came Sancho Panza, Juior, a stringy Indian youth of fourteen summers, mounted on an ancient flea-bitten mule. The food and clothing of these two adventurers was carried behind them on their saddle

An interpreter informed the secretary that Don Miguel was desirous of entering his horse, Panchito, in Thanksgiving Handicap. The horse's registration papers being in order, the entry was accepted, Don Quixote and Sancho Panza, Junior, were each given a badge, and a stall was assigne to Panchito. At the same time Don Quixote made application for an apprentice license for young Sancho Panza, who answers to the name of Allesandro Trujillo, when the cuchiladas are ready.

Panchito, it appears, is a five-year-old, bred by Michael J. Farrel, whose post-office address is El Toro, San Marcos County, California. He is bred in the purple, being a descendant of Duke of Norfolk and, according to his present owner, Don Quixote, he can run circles around an antelope and has proved it in a number of scrub races at various fiestas and cebra tions. According to Don Quixote, his horse has never hitherto appeared on a public race-track. Panchito knows far more about herding and roping steers than he does about professional racing, and enters the list with no preparation other than the daily exercise afforded in bearing his owner under a forty-pound stock saddle and scrambling through the cactus after longhorns. Evidently Don Quixote knows it all. He brushed aside with characteristic Castilian grace some well-meant advice tendered him by his countrymen, who have accumulated much racing wisdom since the bangtails have come to Tia Juana.

me: "We've seen it all and I want to tell you right now that France is absolutely in the right. I tell you I never saw anything like it in my life before. I never saw such mines and factories in all my life. France did absolutely and un-ex-ceptionally right to seize them. And let me tell you that this thing is running like clockwork."

Next in point of amusement to the personally conducted tours in the Ruhr are the rival German and French press bureaus at the Hotel Kaiserchof in Essen. The French press officer is a large blonde man who looks the living picture of the conventional caricature of the German. On the other hand the German press officer who arrived at the Kaiserhof to give his thirty minutes of propaganda immediately after the French press officer had functioned, looks almost exactly like the caricatured Frenchman. Small, dark, concentrated looking. Both sides freely distorted facts and furnished false news.

Sir Percival Phillips of the Daily Mail, after he had been badly let down by a piece of French news he used and which proved false the next day, said he would use no more of either press bureau's news without labeling it as from the press bureau. "My paper is pro-French," he said, "but it might not always be my paper, and I have a reputation as a journalist to sustain."

The French have a genius for love, war, making wine, farming, painting, writing and cooking. None of these accomplishments are particularly applicable to the Ruhr, except making war. The military end of the occupation has been carried out admirably. But to run the industrial heart of Germany, which has been pinched out and cut off by the military, at a profit, requires business genius. Business genius is required to run it at all.

At the customs cordon which was designed to separate occupied from unoccupied Germany and yield a tremendous revenue on taxes and duties you see this spectacle. A long column of trucks on the occupied Germany side of the imaginary line chained together, piled high with packages and goods, covered with tarpaulins, some of which have blown off. They have been standing there for weeks. The five douaniers or customs men have been too up. At the railroad siding there is a busy intercepting all goods to have time to search those they have held huge warehouse jammed to the rafters with held-up merchandise.

A fat movie operator comes up in a motor car, taking propaganda pictures to show the people of France how well the occupation is going. He gets out of the car, sets up his camera and shouts instructions to the douaniers who have been sitting against the side of the shed smoking their pipes. They stir into action. The movie man shoots the long line of trucks, then the five douaniers each climb up the side of a truck and begin to pull packages out, rip them open, haul out the contents, stuff it back, put a chalk mark on the package and jam it back into the trunk.

When he has enough footage the operator makes a note in his book, "Our Douaniers At Work In The Ruhr," shoves the book into his pocket, gets into the car, waves adieu to the long suffering douaniers who relapse back with their pipes against the wall of the shed.

I watched movies taken of coal being loaded The same fat operator. An enormous pile of coal. Six workmen tore into the pile of coal. "Get a move on,' said the operator. "Show some action. You're not on strike. You're working." They worked at top speed.

"C'est fini," said the operator stopping cranking.

The workman straightened up. The movie man moved off. One workman looked up at the enormous mountain of coal.

Reaching down the first workman pulled out of his musette a bottle of good, red French wine. They had a long drink.

The movie man was writing in his notebook, "Our Workers Loading Coal In The Ruhr."

and Calcutta, Lahore, Delhi and Bombay, there are many women students. Miss Ferguson related the experience of a 'Y' secretary in one of the southern native states, who was visited one evening by a number of young women students, carrying their own bedding, as is the custom there, and looking for night shelter. From this, sprang the campaign that resulted in the procuring of a residential home under 'Y' auspices.

Need For Unity.

Miss Ferguson, who hopes to return to Indian work, and whose experience has led her to many parts of the world, considered that the Y.W.C.A. did a splendid work in India, especially by bringing together in a common cause the Anglicans and Methodists and Baptists. "The Indian Christian,' 'she said, "seems to have an innate sense of the necessity for unity in religion. It doesn't make any difference to him if certain ancestors of ours over here drew up a set of thirty-nine articles, or if they believe in infant or adult baptism. Our only justification in going to these people and selling them that our religion is better than theirs is our belief that Jesus Christ is the great revelation of all time, and differences in our beliefs are not vital to them in any way. The Y.W.C.A. as well as the Y.M.C.A. is doing something very real in making the church in India one."

Presentation of Prizes.

Presentation of basketball trophies followed. Mrs. E. E. Harvey gave two silver cups, presenting one to the Peterborough L.O.B.A. team, complimenting them on being chosen to represent Peterborough. Miss Gertrude Kirn, captain of the team, received this with a suitable acknowledgment.

The second Harvey cup goes to the C.G.E. team as runners up in the League.

The silver cup donated by G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., was presented by Mrs. T. Cruikshank, in the absence of the president of the City League, F. Gandy, to the Normal school team, represented by Miss Minnie Luther.

A very enjoyable instrumental solo was given by Miss Olga Fowler, and the special dancing class of the gymnasium gave five pretty numbers in costume, "Youth,' 'the "Moonbeam" dance, "Saucy Sue," "Roseatte," and "'Autumn Flowers." The library was prettily decorated for the occasion with ferns, loaned by the Jordan Brothers and the Peterborough Floral Company.

Refreshments were served from a large central table in the hall, decorated effectively with bronze marigolds, and presided over by Mrs. E. E. Harvey and Mrs. E. E. Ingall. Miss M .McVannell acted as convenor of the social committee, assisted by various Board members.

COMMISSION

Council and furthermore that in default of that duty they shall be held personally liable. Since then the vision of a humbled and humiliated Commission has dissolved into another in which the Aldermen are pictured behind locks, bolts and bars, Joe Crowe in one, Nagle Phelan in another, Dr. Holloway down in a dungeon, Ald. Maher in the stocks, and so on with Mayor Taylor on suspended sentence in view of the saving grace of his association with the Commission offsetting his culpability as a member of the Council. One year's imprisonment is the maximum penalty, but a merciful court might be willing to let the Council down with a month or at least ten days.

At any rate, the boot seems to be on the other foot for to-morrow night's caucus. And if it isn't it has at least been eased from the place where it was pinching the commission.

Mr. Tooms himself has recommended that because of the doubt surorunding the amendment and also in view of the fact that it generally affects all the cities in Ontario, the Municipal Association of this Province assume the cost of a test case, instead of having the expense fall upon one city, Peterboro, for instance, or any other.

DETROIT BOOM PAST ITS PEAK

Demand For Labor Shows Decided Abatement — Post - War Prosperity Ebbs Back to Normal.

DETROIT, May 15.—Belief that Detroit's remarkable post-war prosperity that has broken automobile production records and centered the attention of the industrial world upon the motor city, has reached its peak, is expressed by persons here in close touch with the situation.

Chester M. Culver, general manager of the Employer's Association of Detroit, admittedly the best informed person in the city in matters of this kind, says employment figures evidently have about reached their highest mark and that for the next few months a gradual decrease may result.

In a letter to all members of the association he urges employers to stop their scramble for men and to let the situation adjust itself. He says that if his advice is followed greater efficiency can be obtained and that the wage level gradually will come nearer to normal.

"Keep your feet on the ground," is the terse advice of Mr. Culver to the employers.

Fewer Workers Arriving

That the influx of workers into Detroit from other parts of the state and from other states has ceased is reported by storage and railroad companies here. That does not mean that new men are not coming, but the arrivals are not nearly as great in number as they have been.

Up until recently Detroit's population was increasing at a rate of about 2,000 a week. Today, according to the railroads, more household goods are being moved out of the city than are being moved it. The movement of household goods is accepted as a fairly accurate barometer of the growth of the city in population.

Mr. Culver's letter to members of his association declares that the demand for men on the part of industrial concerns here is showing decided abatement and that while the supply of common labor probably will be nowhere equal to the demand for many months, the situation is improving. Curtailment of the building program here has been necessary, it is explained, because of high wages.

Canadian Stock Exchange And Mines — New York Stock Exchange And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, May 16, (Special to The Examiner). — Prices of stocks sagged again to-day when bears continued to exert pressure on the leading issues encouraged by the success of their manoeuvres in yesterday's closing hours.

Prices were decidedly irregular at the opening of the stock market to-day, with most of the activity being confined to U. S. Steel, which again sold down to 71 to 1-4. Duplicating the low price made in the reaction last Saturday. As a result of this tendency in steel, numerous other leading issues lost ground from their opening prices, which were in many cases better than Tuesday's closing level. In no case, however, including Steel Common, were early transactions in heavy volume. Overnight developments included a strong earnings statement of Standard Oil of New Jersey, Vacuum Oil, and Cosden, all of which showed substantial improvement in last year's returns over those of 1921.

Stocks developed a somewhat firmer tone shortly after the opening, Steel selling above 97 1-2 and Studebaker crossing 111. But a definite trend was lacking. Weakness in Steel Common was attributed to rumours circulated on Tuesday that structural prices had been cut $3.00 a ton. Steel men vigorously deny any likelihood of a cut. It is pointed out that steel mills are booked far ahead. The tendency of wages is upwards, and this means higher costs. Finally the halt in construction does not affect business already on the books, but only prospective new orders.

Studebaker was under pressure recently. The heaviest seller has been a leading professional. Insiders seem to be giving little support to the stock. Paying $10.00 a share annually and earning a the rate of $30.00, Studebaker looks attractive around 110, besides there are good prospects of extra dividends.

United Drug was firm, and it would not surprise the Street if the directors put the stock on a substantial dividend basis. Reports have it that $6.00 earnings are as high as at any time in history and the financial condition excellent.

OBITUARY

The death took place yesterday afternoon at 3.30 at her residence 658 George street, of Louise Sarah Adams, wife of George Baird. Mrs. Baird was born near Enniskillen, Ireland, and came to Peterborough about forty years ago when a young girl. She was a prominent workey in George street church, being a member of the Ladies' Aid and the Co-workers Bible Class.

There are left to mourn her loss: her husband, two daughters, Myra H. and Isabel D., and two sons, John and Alexander. A brother and four sisters also survive—Mrs. William Little and Mrs. J. Johnston, Winnipeg; Mrs. W. McGee in Ireland, and Mrs. C. Cochrane, Esterhazy, Saskatchewan.

The funeral will take place on Friday, May 18, from the family residence to Little Lake Cemetery. Services will be conducted by Rev. W. Harold Young assisted by Rev. S. Crookshanks.

NEW DEPARTURE IN WESTERN CANADA.

Corn Will Be Raised Extensively For First Time —An Experiment.

CALGARY, Alta., May 16.—Corn raising will be fairly general on the prairies of the Canadian west this year, for the first time in the agricultural history of the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and British Columbia, with more than 430 farmers engaged in raising what was formerly regarded as a product of more torrid regions. W. D. Trego, of Calgary and Gleichen, one of the leading farmers of the province, and president of the Alberta Corn Growers' Association, is distributing two carloads of corn seed to farmers from as far south as Coutts, Alberta, to the Peace River country, and from as far west as Victoria, B.C., to Manitoba, in the east.

About 27,000 acres will be planted this year, it is expected.

Although the plan is being taken by many farmers as more or less of an experiment, it has been demonstrated that corn can be profitably raised for the feeding of cattle in Alberta. Mr. Trego is a strong advocate of raising a mixed crop of corn and peas for the purpose of winter feeding cattle, and has carried out the raising of these products successfully in recent years.

The Alberta Corn Association also will distribute a carload of pea seed and 12,000 pounds of sunflower seed. Under Mr. Trego's plan of growing peas and corn for silage and dry fodder for cattle, corn and peas are gorwn together, and it is expected that approximately 11,000 or 12,000 acres of the combined corn and peas crop will be planted.

KILLED BY DEAD FOX.

PARIS, (United Press.)— Blood-poisoning resulting from a slight scratch inflicted by a fox caused the death at Bourges, of Ernestine Latille, 21. At a dance one of her friends pulled the fur from her shoulders and playfully putting the fox's head on her arm, said, "Be careful or he will bite you." Dragging it away, the fox's teeth grazed Ernestine's skin, blood-poisoning set in, the girl dying two days later after terrible suffering.

COLORED LIGHTING MAY TAKE PLACE WALLPAPER

CLEVELAND, May 16.—(Associated Press.)—A method by which the mistress of the house may completely change the mural decorations of the entire domicile in less than five minutes is being devised here in the Nela Park research laboratories of the General Electric Company.

The new device, operated entirely by electric lighting, is capable of throwing as many as fifty distinct wall paper designs on the walls of the room in less than sixty seconds, with practically no human effort save the movement of a tinted glass slide on which are arranged various colored daubings.

The effect is obtained by the use of a specially made magic lantern box, which, when completed, may be concealed in the rooms and arranged so that the wall designs will be focused perfectly and changed at will. The colors, as well as the designs of the decorations, may be varied according to the effect desired. One may brighten the home to the stage of absolute gaiety through a play of brilliantly colored designs or change to quiet and sombre tones at will.

MONUMENT TO FRIEND.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., May 16. — Standing in the Holy Name Cemetery here is a glistening new shaft bearing the epitaph "Efficient, Faithful and Honest."

It has been erected by Elbert H. Gary, executive head of the United States Steel Corporation, in memory of Thomas Murray, one of Mr. Gary's friends, who went into the corporation a small cog, and died two years ago assistant treasurer.

Mr. Gary has reared many monuments to departed friends. Dotting the village church yard in Wheaton, Ill., near the farm on which the steel magnate was born, are many stones bearing te inscript: a "Erected by Elbert H. Gary."

The creation of the automobile happened by accident. This was brought about by the many explosions of the kerosene lamp due to gasoline, which the imperfect distillation processes in the early days of experiments left in the kerosene. To prevent these explosions, the oil was more carefully rectified.

ANOTHER CLAIM THAT AMBROSE J. SMALL IS STILL AMONG LIVING

Letters Received in Toronto Purporting to Come From the Missing Theatrical Magnate, Say Small is in Hospital at Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

WHY HE DISAPPEARED

TORONTO, May 17. (Special to the Examiner.) — Purporting to be from Ambrose J. Small, a letter has been received from Ohkosh, Wis., a town about 75 miles north of Milwaukee, and about 40 miles west of Lake Michigan. This letter was received by Mr. A. Macdonnell, Director of Colonization for the Department of Agriculture, in the Province of Ontario, who knew the missing Toronto millionaire, Ambrose J. Small, well.

The letter consists of three sections, one of four pages, the second of two, and the third, a small slip of paper. One and two are in different handwriting, and both state that Ambrose Small is in northern street Hospital, Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

The third slip has written on it: "Elevlyn M. Hagen, daughter of A. J. Small, A. J. Small, 55 age. Toronto, Canada, December 29, 1919. Ambrose J. Small, daughter. Please write to her. Evelyn S. Hagen."

This is written in indelible pencil on a slip which has been torn off another letter. Written on this slip and having th appearance of having been the original letter is "1658 N. Harding avenue, Chicago, Ill.— Please write and give me a few pointers; I sure will write and give you all the im——" The main part of the letter received by Mr. Macdonnel is: "Dear Friend, H. A. Macdonnel: I will write you a letter and tell you that I wish that you would do me a favor and see my sisters and tell them that I am still living, and that they can visit me and my friends."

Among the Living.

"Now, I wish to tell you that I have been in this hospital almost years. I wish to say that Mrs. Small and Austin Mitchell have been trying to prove me dead and get what property I have. Now I wish to tell you that I am still among the living. Now, you see I am in bed most of the time, and will soon be able to come home. I want you to tell my friends all about where I am and what I disappeared over. I had some trouble with Mrs. Small several times, so I left her, and I don't expect to live with her any more; so you will see that I went away. You notify the bank and the court that I am not dead, and that I wish to say that Austin Mitchell has done all he could to prove me dead so that he and Mrs. Small could get my property, and have a good time together. So I have retained these two lawyers to defend my property from them, and to keep them from getting it.

"Now, I will ask you as a friend to help me in my trouble, as I am in the hospital at the present time, and not able to write my own letters, as I am having my nurse to write for me. Now I will tell you that I have been here a long time waiting to get word to you and my friends. I will send you the names of some of my friends whom I have met, and I will you I wish to state to you that I have had some trouble with Mrs. Small over a young lady whom I had working for me. Now I will say that I left home the 27th of December, 1919, with this young lady, and you will see why I disappeared. Now my lawyers are Barbor & Keepe, Oshkosh, Wisconsin, so you can write them. I am in ward 11, Northern street hospital, Wisconsin. Yours vry truly, your friend, Ambrose Joseph Small, Northern street Hospital, Oshkosh, Wis."

Another Script.

On another sheet of paper of different texture and written in a different handwriting, and both the following:

"Ambrose J. Small, left Toronto, Canada, 1919, December 29th, at 7.30 p.m. His age is 55 years; his height is 5 feet and 9 inches. This man is not dead. Please write to his friend, Mr. J. Allen, of 2816 English ave., Indianapolis, Ind. Also write E. O. B. Churchill, 117 North Froscoscios avenue, Chicago; also write to Jas. A. Alexander, Vancouver B.C. Chief of Police office." "P.S. Write to Mrs. Charles Edgar Morris, CR., E. C. Wray, R.F.D., No. 2, Benton Harbor, Mich.; Mrs. Harvey D. Hayes, Wauyeke, Wis.; Dr. J. A. Reed, 117 Mo. Friscoscos avenue, Chicago. These parties know that Ambrose J. Small is not among the dead. James A. Morris, Chief of Police Office, Vancouver, B.C., Canada. A. J. Small is not dead, but is in this hospital — Northern Street Hospital.'

BANDITS ROB BANK IN MANITOBA TO-DAY

WINNIPEG, May 17.—(Special.) —(Special.)—Brank of Bank of Toronto at Mather, Man., was robbed early this morning. After seizing the teller, who was sleeping in the building, the bandits secured approximately three thousand and made their escape.

WILL WELCOME THE PRESIDENT

Sir Henry Thornton Will Be Dinner Guest of G. N. Gordon — City Will Help in Reception.

Plans for the reception of Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, on the occasion of his first visit to Peterborough next Tuesday, were drafted by Ald. Holloway's committee last night, and will be enlarged upon by the Chamber of Commerce at their meeting on Monday.

Mr. G. N. Gordon's invitation to the President-Knight to a luncheon at the Empress has deprived the Council of that privilege and also relieved them of any expense connected with the reception.

It was proposed last night that Sir Henry Thornton should be given an opportunity of seeing Peterborough's industrial resources, and it was virtually decided to take him on a motor drive around the city showing him the factories and perhaps going on to Lakefield.

It was believed that the stub line to the northern village might have a special interest for the President from the standpoint of the traffic to Kawartha Lakes, the C.P.R.'s increasing efforts in that direction, and also because of the requests for a gasoline-motor car service between Port Hope to Lakefield.

The divisional executive of the C. N.R. are said to have recommended this service to the management.

SEEKING COVER FROM REVENGE OF DEPORTEES

But Imperial Government's Efforts in Protection of Home Secretary Bridgeman Opposed

MEASURE DENOUNCED

(By H. N. Moore.)

LONDON, May 17.—(Special to the United Press.)—Liberal and Labor leaders, as well as of the Progressive Unionists, are combining on the eve of the Parliamentary recess to present strong opposition to Government efforts to incorporate, with the indemnity measure protecting Home Secretary Bridgeman and his law officers from the wrath of the Irish deportees, clauses giving the Home Secretary power to arrest citizens without trial.

The Government has not announced the details of the indemnity measure, but intends to endeavor to secure special powers exercisable in England if and when required. Such a clause will undoubtedly raise a terrific storm in the country, except among the hard-boiled Tories, especially if introduced before full details of the extent of the Irish conspiracy are revealed at the trial of O'Brien. Indications of the reception of such a measure were demonstrated in the House of Lords last night when several members vigorously denounced it as a conspiracy to rob Englishmen of their immemorial and fundamental right to trial after arrest.

The full release of a majority of the deportees will undoubtedly mean a renewal of Republican activities in England. The authorities, however, are in a better position to deal with the situation in future. The growth of Communism recruited by a large army of unemployed is giving the Government serious concern. The authorities will consider the matter seriously during the recess and possibly come to the conclusion that it will be a better policy to meet emergency conditions with emergency measures.

An indemnity bill for protection of Hon. Secretary Bridgeman named in a suit entered by Art O'Brien, one of those deported to Ireland recently for damages for alleged false imprisonment was read the first time in the House of Commons to-day. The bill merely prohibits any civil or criminal proceedings being taken against Home Secretary or others concerned in the Irish deportations.

HOLYHEAD, Eng., May 17.—(Special.)— A new "convict ship" carrying about a hundred men and women prisoners arrived here secretly from Dublin this morning. The prisoners were arrested in England and have been interned in Mount Joy jail, Dublin, since March. They were placed aboard a destroyer and conveyed secretly across the channel arriving here at five-thirty a.m. A heavy guard of troops with armoured cars greeted them.

SUGAR BEET MEN LODGE COMPLAINT

Declare Canadian Sugar Refiners Had Not Treated Them Fairly.

OTTAWA, May 17. —(Canadian Press).—Canadian sugar refineries may again be summoned before the agriculture committee of the House of Commons to answer complaints of unfair treatment by sugar beet growers of Ontario.

When the committee met this morning Wm. Elliott, Waterloo, member of the committee, referred to complaints which had been made by growers. He said that growers received unfair treatment in the handling and testing of beets and that the concensus of opinion among sugar beet producers was that refiners were "a pack of scoundrels".

Chairman McMaster said that he wished the matter had been placed before him when the refiners were here.

The chairman requested Mr. Elliott to confer with representatives of beet growers and ascertain whether complaints were such as to necessitate summoning the refiners to appear again.

A man can be a self-starter and not get where he is going unless he is a self-stopper.

RAINS FILLING LAKES WITH POWER FOR THE FACTORIES

Trent Canal System Entirely Open for Navigation and Northern Rivers Are Afloat With Logs Bound For the Sawmills in Peterboro and Lindsay

Heavy rainfall over northern and western sections of the Trent canal system this week have swollen rivers and creeks some of which have overflowed washing out culverts and doing other minor damage.

These reports come from the Lake Simcoe district and also from the territory of the Burnt and Gull Rivers, where the recent rains have been more excessive than in the lower and eastern reaches of the Trent. A general survey of the water storage system indicates that the present content is normal for this season of the year except for one of two lakes to the north-east of Peterboro county which have been affected by the unusual conditions which have prevailed since last Fall.

The exceptions are not regarded as serious but they may be sufficient interest to be mentioned. Jack's Lake for instance is at present registring about half its capacity. This is partly due to the fact that its watershed, the territory it drains, is comparatively small compared with the lake's reservoir; another cause was the slight precipitation of rain from the first of November throughout the winter months and up to a few weeks ago.

This lack of moisture has been generally experienced especially by farmers many of whom had to draw water for their stock during the winter because their wells had gone dry Others expressed the belief that the reason for the absence of frost at the usual depth in the ground was because there had been practically no moisture in it to freeze, just as dry sand shows no reaction to the cold. Hence with the first brief period of warmth the ground quickly dried up enabling the farmers to proceed with their plowing and seeding and to complete the work without any interruption and in quick order. Thus the ground and the marshes have absorbed a large proportion of the first rains without any signs of saturation.

Lift Lock Open

In the meantime the Trent system is open to navigation and lumbering industries that have first claim on the water according to Federal regulations and traditions. The Lift Lock was opened for the season on Tuesday after the annual unbolting and overhauling and the first boat registering through or rather over it was expected to be Joe Lajeunesse's tug which was expected to make the trip up the canal this afternoon.

On most of the river, and smaller streams in the northern parts of Peterboro and Victoria counties the lumberman have their drives of wood afloat and under convoy for their destinies at the sawmills in Peterboro, Lindsay and Lakefield. In spite of this obstacle to the prompt filling of the storage lakes the condition in the Trent are said to be shaping up favorably under the repleting effects of these May rains which may not be cordially welcomed by the dwellers of the city but which are regarded with satisfaction by those who keep the records of the levels of the Trent and who also know their future effect on the continuous supply of electric power for local industries, and finally the maintenance of employment in Peterboro factories.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS ENFORCEMENT O. T. A.

Issued by Attorney-General Raney for Ontario Province-County Crown Attorneys' Duties Clearly Defined.

It may be of interest for the citizens of Peterborough to know that special instructions were given by the Hon. W. E. Raney, Attorney General for the Province of Ontario, on the 28th of July, 1920, respecting the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act, and wherein the duties of the County Crown Attorney are very clearly pointed out as follows:

"Reports to this Department indicate a laxity of enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act in certain counties which can only be accounted for by failure of the officials, provincial or local or both, to do their duty. No special responsibility for this condition of things has heretofore attached to the Crown Attorneys, because in the past they have only been called upon to act in cases that have been committed to them by an inspector or police officer.

"It is not the desire of the Government to unify the responsibility for the administration of the law in the different counties and to put the Ontario Temperance Act on the same footing as the other laws for whose enforcement the Crown Attorneys are now responsible, and for the future Crown Attorneys will therefore be expected to take an active interest in the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act within their respective counties, to keep this Department advised from time to time as to conditions and to conduct prosecutions, not only for ordinary violations of the law, but against officials who may be derelict in their duty.

"In this connection attention is called to Section 64 of the Ontario Temperance Act, which provides that it shall be the duty of every policeman and constable to carry out and enforce the law, and that every inspector, policeman or constable neglecting or refusing to carry out and enforce the Act shall incur a penalty of $10, and may be summarily dismissed from office. In some localities this section has lately been violated to the degree that it is being publicly said, and with some appearance of truth, that the sworn guardians of the law have become the guardians of the lawbreakers. This condition of things can no longer be tolerated.

"It would not be fair to ask Crown Attorneys to take on added responsibilities under the existing tariff as to costs.

"Indeed, it is recognized that at present the tariff is wholly inadequate even for their present duties, and for the future the fee of $5.00 allowed in liquor cases will be regarded as a minimum fee. Until further notice, Crown Attorneys will render accounts for their services in temperance cases, as in other cases.

"I sent you on the 13th July a copy of a circular letter sent from this Department on the 30th of June last to the Police Magistrates of the Province, and I now send you a copy of a further circular letter to the Magistrates of this date.

"Will you please make a report to me at once of conditions in your county, and if conditions are not now what they might fairly be expected to be under a proper administration of the law, please indicate where, in your opinion, the defect lies. If there is anything requiring to be done at once to improve conditions, go ahead and do it. Do not wait for instructions."

From these instructions it is apparent that I am specially charged by the Attorney-General himself with the duty of prosecuting all offences under the Ontario Temperance Act. In the course of my reply to the Attorney-General, among other things, I pointed out as follows:

"There is one matter in connection with the prosecution of charges under the Ontario Temperance Act that I think particular attention should be paid to, and that is the remission of fines. In many cases in this city where charges have been laid and fines collected by the City Police and paid over to the city, the Board of License Commissioners has instructed and demanded that the same be remitted and paid back to the offenders. The City Clerk issued one cheque for over $700.00 last summer, and in one case where a returned man was fined $200.00, the G.W.V.A. took the matter up with the Board, and that sum also was returned to the offender. The city force quite rightly felt that their services in connection with the work done in obtaining prosecutions was thrown away and their efforts completely nullified."

In view of certain discussions that have taken place in the City

LOCAL CADETS ARE EXTOLLED BY INSPECTOR

Capt. Heron Was Not Disappointed in Expecting a High Standard of Excellence.

BUGLE BAND PRAISED

Cadets of Peterborough excelled themselves in the annual inspection of No. 13 Cadet Battalion yesterday afternoon, when Captain V. W. S. Heron, R.C.R., inspecting officer, praised their work in high terms.

On account of the inclement weather the inspection was held in the cramped space of the Armouries, which rendered difficult the display of battalion manoeuvres. Despite this, Captain Heron pronounced the inspection extremely satisfactory. "I came here," he said, "expecting a very high standard of excellence, and I have not been disappointed." He was especially pleased with the march past, a difficult feature at any time, and especially so under the conditions prevailing yesterday.

Among the military arts displayed were signalling, machine gun, ambulance, battalion, company, platoon and extended order drill, and physical training.

The bugle band received high commendation, and while there were some improvements which could be made in some branches—as there are in every undertaking—Captain Heron said that No. 13 is a very efficient corps in all its branches.

A great deal of the credit is due to the instructor, Captain C. E. Jamieson, who, however, passed it on to the officers and N.C.O.'s of the battalion.

H. R. H. Kenner, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, and Mrs. W. R. Morris, representing the Board of Education, regretted the inadequate quarters provided for drilling and training purposes, and the lack of uniforms. They stated that these needs may be met at an early date. Major W. G. Hall, 57th Regiment, also extolled the work of the Cadets.

Battalion Commander—Cadet Lt.-Col. E. Legon.

Adjutant—Cadet Captain D. Sanderson.

Quartermaster—Cadet Captain K. MacDuffee.

Ambulance Officers—Cadet Captain R. Fowler and Cadet Lieut. W. Breyfogle.

Musketry Officer—Cadet Captain C. MacDonald.

Physical Training Instructor — Cadet Captain H. Young.

KINGSTON KIWANIANS STAGE GALA FUNCTION FOR CHARTER NIGHT

Brethren From Far and Near Make Merry on Auspicious Occasion — Peterboro Kiwanians Fined For Boasting of Ball Team's Prospects

AMUSING STUNTS

BELLEVILLE, May 17.—(Special). — Kiwanians from Kingston, Ottawa, Toronto, Peterboro, Montreal, Brantford and Riverdale attended the gala function held here last night when the charter was presented to the local club by their sponsors, the Kingston Club.

The local Kiwanians, fifty in strength decked with badges, pins and unique blue and white peanut scoops, met all trains, their Ku Klux Klan brass band in full uniform of the Klan, playing the welcome numbers. A long parade was formed led by the band, and all clubs the sponsor club in the lead, and the Belleville club taking up the rear.

The parade led to Hotel Quinte where a turkey dinner was served and a real good time was held.

Stunts of all Kinds

Hugh Nickle, president of the Kingston club presided over the program, and fined every person a quarter who opened their mouth. Numerous visitors were present, stunts of all kinds were worked, and the Belleville Symphony Orchestra supplied excellent music.

One feature of the evening was the song of the Kingston Smoking Room Quartette, when each of the 180 guests were given tobacco, chocolate and soft drinks by the manufacturers.

Peterboro Delegates

Thirty Kiwanians were present from Peterboro and their speaking delegate designated himself as a gentleman of leisure. All Peterboro representatives were severely fined for boasting that the Peterboro ball team would cop the C.O.B.L. honors this season.

Hugh Nickle, in his address, told the history of Kiwanis since its inception of 1915, when during the war years men were judged by their service and not by their pocket books, and since that time the Kiwanis clubs have lived up to their "service motto" religiously.

In an inspiring address, Rev. Dr. R. J. Wilson of Kingston, referred to the opportunities of comradeship afforded by Kiwanis.

"We must have play and amusements, not only for our youth, but for the older Canadians," exclaimed the speaker, "to make up for that which has been taken away and all effort towards social service must necessarily be co-ordinated.

Kiwanian Kenneth McIver, Lieut.-Governor of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, presented the charter with greetings to the Belleville club, explaining the mission and ethics of Kiwanis. Next month there will have been 1,040 clubs organized with a total membership of 87,000 and they have yet to have a charter surrendered. Pres. Tom Collister of the local club accepted the charter, with appropriate remarks.

The Ottawa club, on behalf of District Trustee Brown, presented the Belleville Club with a huge and beautiful Union Jack and staff, and the Kingston club presented the local club with a magnificent gavel of authority. President Nickle made the presentation. Bill Moore, of Kingston, then presented and read the club commandments to the locals and Frank Hoag of Kingston, also presented the Kiwanis Club Shield, a beautiful emblem, to the Belleville club.

A miniature piano in a huge piano box startled the local Kiwanians, they believing that the Kingstonians had gone to the expense of presenting them with a real life-size piano.

Representatives of other city organizations made representative speeches and the speeches of welcome to the visitors were made by Kiwanian P. C. McLaurin and Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., each making a wonderful speech.

Kiwanian Elmer Davies of Kingston, concluded the speech-making when he responded, and the party concluded at midnight.

WOMAN WANTED TO SUBSTITUTE

Extraordinary Story of Devotion and Love in the West.

EDMONTON, May 17 (Special to The Examiner). — An extraordinary story of spiritual devotion and love in connection with the execution of Florence Lassandra at Fort Saskatchewan this month, has just been revealed by Rev. O. D. Priddle, pastor of the First Baptist Church, South Side, here.

The day before the execution of Mrs. Lassandra, a young woman knocked at the door of Mr. Priddle's home, and asked to see him She was a member of Mr. Priddle's congregation, and the pastor knows her well.

In his study the caller, in a quiet, even voice, betraying no excitement or emotion, asked Mr. Priddle, "Do you know if it is possible for a person to take the place of another condemned to die?"

"I don't," replied the minister. "Why?"

"Mrs. Lassandra is to be executed," the young woman continued, "but they say she is not ready to die. I feel that I am ready to die, that I am ready to meet God, and I would like to give her another chance."

"I was absolutely convinced of the sincerity of the young woman's offer," said Mr. Priddle. "She meant just what she said. So I communicated at once with the authorities, and discovered that there was absolutely no provision in the criminal code whereby such a substitution could be made, and I informed her of this fact. She took this information quietly, and went on to say that she believed that a woman who had committed murder should pay the death penalty, but in this case she felt the woman was not spiritually ready to die. The young woman who visited me was normal in every way. She felt it her duty to make the offer that she did. Surely it was the voice of heaven that spoke through her. Such great love is rarely encountered in these days."

MURRAY STILL HOLDS TO STRANGE BELIEFS

ST. CATHARINES, May 17. — (Canadian Press.)—"I still hold the idea of being Saviour," declared "Marvellous Murray" when he appeared before Magistrate Campbell here this morning. Murray's statement was in reply to the query of the magistrate if he felt better and if he had still got the idea of who he was.

"It was just enthusiasm that made me feel like that," Murray added. Murray was remanded for a week so that further inquiries could be made.

Murray is the man who last week startled the congregation in a church here when he declared that he was going to ascend into heaven ,he being "King of King and Ruler of Rulers."

MORE POLITICAL ACTIVITY AMONG WOMEN DESIRED

International Convention of Women Urges That More of Their Sex Be Elected to Parliament.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

ROME, May 17. — (Canadian Press).—An increase in the number of women in national parliaments was demanded by practically all the speakers at yesterday moring's session of the congress of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance It was a sitting devoted to enfranchised women, many of the speakers being members of the parliament of their nation.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt's resolution, urging that every effort be made by the suffragists to increase the number of the members of their sex holding parliament seats, was presented and unanimously passed while the chair was occupied by Miss Anne Furuhjelm member of the Finnish parliament. A committee composed of British, Germans Scandinavians and United States delegates, all of who have votes will be appointed to further the campaign for more legislators.

Mrs. Catt when re-nominated yesterday for the presidency, declined the honor. Electioneering for the various other candidates has been exceedingly brisk about the exposition hall. The most likely candidate is Mrs. Corbett Ashby of Great Britain who has already been offered support from various delegations. Miss Anne Furuhjelm is also prominently mentioned for the office.

Dame Rachel Crowder, a member of the secretariat of the League of Nations, addressed the convention yesterday on the work of the league. She dealt especially with the branches of the league's work devoted to women; she urged enfranchised women to use the vote to insist that more women be sent to the league as delegates.

Mrs. Anna Wicksell, Swedish member of the permanent mandate commission of the league, also addressed the convention, discoursing on the work of that commission.

The election of the next president will take place this morning.

FRANCE SEEMS CROWDED WITH NATIVES OF MOROCCO

PARIS, May 17.—(Associated Press).—Mahommedben-Ahmed, an irascible Moroccan of Argenteuil, a suburb of Paris, shot and severely wounded a former sweetheart the other day and then made his escape.

His description was sent throughout France, and no less than seven Moroccans, responding to the name of Mohammed-ben-Ahmed and corresponding to the description of the wanted man, were arrested. Not one of them, however, was the fugitive.

Inquiries at the Ministry of the Interior brought the statement that there are 13,122 Mahommed-ben-Ahmeds in France.

GERMANY WILL NOT DEBATE ON ENTENTE NOTES

No Public Discussions Will Be Held But Negotiations Will Be Continued With the Powers.

SOCIALIST DEMANDS.

BERLIN, May 17 (Canadian Press). — Baron von Rosenberg, the Foreign Minister, yesterday informed the Reichstag that the government was unable at present to embark upon a public discussion of the German attitude towards the replies of the Entente Powers on the subject of reparations, inasmuch as the last of these had only been received on Tuesday, and the subject demanded the careful consideration of the Cabinet.

This declaration was prompted by the effort of the united Socialists and Nationalists to force a discussion before the chief Whitsuntide recess. The attempt failed to gain the support of the Coalition Party, and the debate was only brief and perfunctory, its chief feature was the demand by the United Socialist leader, Herman Mueller, that the Government forthwith enact a positive agreement for the mobilisation of the nation's economic and productive assets with a view to giving the concrete proposals demanded by the Entente.

Earlier in the day Chancellor Cuno convened the Reichstag leaders and informed them of the Government's intention to continue the reparations discussions with the creditor Powers.

The demand voiced by Herr Mueller is commonly interpreted as the opening gun in the Radicals' campaign for the exploitation of "big business" in connection with internal reparations assesments. Their programme calls for the mobilisation of every productive unit in the nation's economic organism in the shape of capital or a tax levy on production. It means a rigorous process of hypothecation, comprehending big and small industries, commerce, banking, shipping, farming and realty, and will also provide for compulsory taxation of the private propertied classes.

In the case of realty and farm holdings the Government's levy will be in the nature of first mortgages on a gold basis. Other producing agencies will be taxed on the volume of their production, the Government's aim being to fix the levies on a gold basis.

This "squaring of accounts" between capital and labour is regarded as compensation for the valour and perseverance shown by the Ruhr workers in their passive resistance.

"It's labour's pound of flesh," said a leading Radical.

ONE KILLED IN WRECK

LIMA, Ohio, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—One man was killed and a score of persons were injured at Oakland, Ohio half way between Coldwater and Fort Recovery, when Lake Erie and Western passenger train No. 2 collided head on with a freight yesterday afternoon.

The dead man is George J. Bassler, 61 of Lima, engineer on the passenger train.

W. H. BRADBURN WAS CHOSEN TO HEAD CONSERVATIVE FORCES FOR THE PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

Was Nominated at Mass Meeting of Conservatives of West Peterborough Last Night—Choice Was Unanimous—W. F. Nickle, K.C., M.P.P., Told of Shortcomings of Drury Government—J. H. Burnham and Mrs. Howard Follis Also Spoke.

W. H. Bradburn, ex-Mayor of Peterborough, at present a member of the Utilities Commission, and the Managing Director of Bradburn's Ltd., was nominated as the candidate of the Liberal-Conservative party for West Peterborough at the convention held in Victoria Hall last night. There was a good attendance, and keen interest was shown in the proceedings in view of the fact that several names had been prominently mentioned during the last two or there weeks. Roland Denne, President of the Liberal-Conservative Association for West Peterborough, presided.

The nominee was the first candidate proposed, and his name was brought before the gathering by J. F. Strickland ,seconded by P. McQuaig. J. H. Burnham, Mrs. Howard Follis and J. F. Strickland were proposed in the order given, but withdrew their names, Mr. Strickland proposing that Mr. Bradburn be nomintaed unanimously.

In thanking the convention for his nomination, Mr. Bradburn said it was a great honor to be called upon to carry the Conservative standard in the coming election. Engaging to do his part between now and election day, he said that if the Conservative electors will do their best "there is no doubt that we of West Peterborough will be back of the next Prime Minister who will be the Hon. W. G. Ferguson."

Mr. Burnham's Views.

J. H. Burnham was the first speaker called upon, and he expressed his views very pointedly on the Drury administration, charging Mr. Drury, among other things, with having sold the prohibitionists of the province for the votes of the grape growers of Western Ontario. These grape growers, Mr. Burnham said, furnish grapes to wine factories in Western Ontario, which are permitted by the provisions of the O.T.A. to sell to the people of Ontario a highly-intoxicating wine which has proven in the samples analyzed to have an alcoholic content of from 14 to 33 per cent. of proof spirits. This wine is sold at $8 a dozen bottles, laid down at the purchasers' doors.

The speaker next drew attention to the fact that Mr. Drury and Mr. Raney voted down and suppressed an investigation of the Last Night Party in the Parliament Buildings, thus conniving at the debauch and suppressing the right of others to have an investigation. Other charges brought against Mr. Drury by the speaker were an attempt to sell out the farmers of the province by a scheme of political trickery which was thwarted by J. J. Morrison; holding power without reference to the will of the people; shirking the responsibilities of responsible government; and holding back progress in the province by demanding that his every whim be obeyed. Reverting to the question of prohibition, Mr. Burnham said: "The people demanded prohibition; let us give it true, loyal, support."

The Women's Leader.

Mrs. Howard Follis of North Monaghan, President of the Women's Liberal-Conservative Association of West Peterborough, in an able address, reviewed the record of the Drury government and pointed out the advantages of conservatism. Referring to the entrance of women into the political arena, she said that women should make a closer study of the problems concerning the province and the country with a view to understanding the issues thoroughly. The greatest hope for the Conservative party in the coming election is to win the allegiance of the young electorate, showing them that the Conservative policy is built on stable conditions. The Conservative policy does not appeal to the revolutionary element in this or any other country. "If you will take the trouble to search the records of the country since Confederation," Mrs. Follis said, "you will find that the best legislation was fathered by the Conservative Party."

Referring to the entry of the United Farmers' organization into politics, the speaker called attention to the need of the farmers for a strong organization, but said that the farmers' organization had no more right to seize the reins of government and make the laws of the province than an organization of dentists or retail traders has.

"Some people say the farmers are slow," said Mrs. Follis, "but the present government in four years has piled up a provincial debt of more than the two old parties had piled up in 52 years. That cannot be called slow." The Conservative party is not asking the people of Ontario to support it on the strength of their election promises, but on their past record.

Conservative History.

W. F. Nickle, K.C., M.P.P. for Kingston, the speaker of the evening ,opened his speech with a short history of the Conservative party since 1914. In August, 1914, when war was declared, the Conservative party then in power found itself faced with problems that were more than any one could be expected to carry, In 1917 it was realized that the two parties should unite for the prosecution of the war, and the leaders of the Conservative party and the then leaders of the Liberal party threw themselves into the question and combined in a Union government. The Conservative party realized that the cause of the world was greater than the cause of the Conservative party, and in merging itself in the common cause it lost its local organized strength. In the 1921 Federal election the remnant of the Conservative party went down to defeat, and the Liberal party, with the Progressives, have had control of the government ever since.

When the U.F.O. party came into power in Ontario it was on the plank of economic and domestic reform. We are plainly told by J. J. Morrison through the Farmers' Sun, that he was opposed to the Agrarian party assuming responsibility of office. The farmers should enact such legislation as would be beneficial to them as farmers without reference to those who are not farmers.

"Drury announced that class government was a failure, enunciating the principle that government must exist for all the people and not for one group. For a time there was peace between these two men, but on August last Drury again began to sound the electorate on the broadening out policy and made a speech saying that it was impracticable for any group Government to carry on successfully in this province.

"We have not had group government in its broad sense," the speaker said. "What we have had is a class coalition carried on along group lines."

After a survey of the long-drawn-out disagreement between Mr. Morrison and Mr. Drury, the speaker stated that if there was not a working arrangement there was at least a tacit understanding between certain Liberals and the Agrarians that support would be given to the Agrarians. In a speech at Bowmanville on March 23, Wellington Hay, Liberal leader, said he did not think it advisable that the Liberals should put a candidate in the field against the U.F.O. and that in places where there was a Liberal candidate the U. F.O. should not run a candidate, because this would result in the Conservative candidate being elected.

On April 12 in the House, Andrew Hicks, the U.F.O. whip, said that he could no longer follow Drury because he knew Drury was endeavoring to perfect an arrangement with Mr. Hay by which there would be a coalition between the Liberal and U.F.O. parties, and he would not be a party to any coalition.

When the Liberal party met on April 26 in Toronto the gathering of representatives of that great party decided that in every riding as far as possible Liberal candidates must be put in the field, and no trafficking with the U.F.O. would be tolerated. The Liberal party would hoe its own row.

On April 27th—the day after the Liberals decided against coalition with the U.F.O. party, Drury and Morrison met in the U.F.O. office and a truce was patched up between them, Drury saying that after the election is over he will not make any affiliation until he has called together the U.F.O. successful and defeated candidates and decided what is to be the destiny of the party.

Conservative Position.

"You have the position of the Conservative party clearly before you," said Mr. Nickle. "We stand on the traditions of the Liberal-Conservative party for safe, sane, legislation. We move forward when the conditions warrant moving, but we make sure that the ground we propose taking is stronger than the ground we are on."

The problem of the government in Ontario is administration, the speaker pointed out. There are no great issues on which to divide the parties but from one end of the province to the other the steadiness and youth and brains of the Conservative party is being offered to the country to bring stable government.

Redistribution.

On January 26 the Conservatives brought in a resolution calling for redistribution and an adjustment of population between ridings.

There is a great discrepancy between the ridings, some having only 12,000 while others have 100,000.

There are 23 having less than 15,000 population; 27 have between 15,000 and 20,000; 30 have between 20,000 and 30,000; 14 have between 30,000 and 40,000; 2 have between 40,000 and 50,000; 6 have between 50,000 and 75,000; 6 have been 75,000 and 100,000, and 3 have over 100,000 population. In the West Peterborough riding theer are 28,284 persons, while East Peterborough has 13,648. Middlesex has three U.F.O. members to a population in its three divisions of 50,000; London has one member to a population of 60,000.

"We wanted redistribution and equality of the various ridings," the speaker said. After Hicks made his charges, to the horror and amazement of the Conservative party the government brought down not one redistribution bill but three bills — redistribution, proportional representation and the single transferable vote. A committee was proposed to consist of 5 Conservatives, 5 Liberals, 1 Independent, 8 Agrarians and 3 Labor representatives. "What chance had the Conservative party on a committee like that?" demanded Mr. Nickle.

"The Conservative party would have consented to the Redistribution Bill going to a committee like that, but a clause provided for proportional representation. This would make it impossible for us to elect a majority in Toronto, which is over-

MANY MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE BEFORE SYNOD

NEW AGE LIMIT.

LONDON, Ont, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—Approval of a canon providing for the change of the age limit for members of the vestry from twenty one years to eighteen; refusal to form a diocesan council for social service, according to the suggestion contained in the report report submitted by Very Rev. Dean Tucker, Chairman of the Committee on Social Service ;and the referring to a special committee appointed by the Bishop, the proposal that the Church fire insurance be taken over by the Diocese were three steps taken by the Synod of Huron at its concluding session in Cronyn Hall yesterday afternoon.

A stir of more than casual interest was occasioned when figures presented by the Committee on Civil Census indicated that there was a disparagement of more than forty per cent between the number of Anglicans reported by the civil census and those shown by the clergy's report. The Bishop signified his intention of bringing the question up at the rural deaneries in order that in some measure at least the number of Anglicans claiming relationship with the church should more nearly approach the number of those in actual communion.

With expressions of cordial enthusiasm, the Synod expresed its willingness to accede to the request of Rev. Dr. Gould, General Secretary, of the M.S.C.C. that is Lordship the Bishop of Huron be allowed to take his place in representing Canada on the International Mission Conference which is to be held in Oxford next summer.

There was a bit of interesting discussion over the resolution submitted by Rev. Henry Smith to the effect that the women's guilds be made responsible in a greater measure to the rector of the parish and the vestry in their financial undertakings. It was evident that some of the clergy considered this a "ticklish" matter requiring some degree of tact It was finally referred to the Executive for consideration.

The following report was submitted by the Committee appointed to consider the Bishop's charge.

"That the Synod approves of the co-operation of the Anglicans, Con-

More Opposition to Canadian Cattle.

LONDON, May 17.— (Canadian Press Cable)—Formidable opposition is foreshadowed from the agricultural committee of House of Commons which is the strongest group in the House, against the Minister of Agriculture's proposal to lay an order on the table for the admission of Canadian breeding stock to Great Britain.

The committee has already adopted a resolution unanimously declaring that while welcoming reciprocal arrangements for the interchange of pedigree breeding stock between the United Kingdom and the Dominions it could not assent to the admission into Great Britain of non-pedigree breeding stock.

Greeks Are Determined to Pay No Indemnity — Rumors That War May Break Out Again.

LONDON, May 17.—(Canadian Press). — Sensational rumors are current of possible hostilies between Greece and Turkey as the outcom of the reparations dispute at Lausanne and according to a Central News despatch from Constantinople a secret meeting is reported to have been held at British general headquarters to consider eventualities.

No confirmation of the rumor, however, is obtainable in official circles in London.

Reuter's Athens correspondent says the newspapers there state that the Greek delegation has been instructed to leave Lausanne should a plenary meeting of the Near East conference pronounce in favor of payment of indemnities by Greece.

According to the Athens correspondent of the Times referring to these rumors, Colonel Plastiris, one of the leading authorities, in the course of an interview, voiced a denial, saying that Greece's intentions were entirely pacific. He added that Greece would take no precipitate action without consulting the Allies, but was absolutely determined not to pay a single penny of indemnity.

AFTER BETTER TERMS FOR THE RURAL MAILS

Mail Contractors Suggest Many Changes For the Betterment of Conditions Among Rural Mailmen.

WORK AT LOSS.

OTTAWA, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—In an endeavour to secure better terms for the rural mail contractors from the government the Canadian mail contractors' association has addressed a circular letter to the members of the House of Commons and senate. The abolition of the contract system and the introduction in its place of a salary system is asked. A yearly salary of $70 per mile of the route covered is asked. For contractors operating between railway stations and steamers and post offices, a salary three times the present rate is asked. They desire the increased rate to be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1917, to offset losses which it is claimed contractors have incurred in the last few years. Saturday holidays with full pay, and the removal of all rural mail boxes from the left to the right hand side of the road, to avoid accidents are among other requests.

It is stated in the circular letter that the average rural mail route is 20 miles, and the average yearly cost of upkeep of contractors' horses and rigs in the last five years has been $1,058, while the average yearly contract price payable by the government has been $732. The result, it is asserted is a yearly average loss of $326 to the contractors, not taking into account his time and the responsibility he assumes.

Threats Declared Against the Jews.

BUCHAREST, May 17.—(Canadian Press)—The Rumanian Fascisti to-day issued threats that continued attendance by Jewish students and professors at the University of Buchrest would lead to their deaths. Professor Reiner was informed by telephone that he would be murdered if he attempts to resume his lectures. A large number of Jewish students have been maltreated.

A report from Temsvar says 40,000 students have enrolled there in answer to a call issued by the "Fasia nationala Rumana" to join in the "life or death struggle against the Jews."

WELLAND'S TIME TROUBLES.

The folly of attempting to carry on a system of daylight saving when such a method is not universally adopted and when even the community affected is not agreed is illustrated by the case of Welland, where most of the merchants and manufacturers are using the summer time schedule and the rest of the citizens are adhering to the standard article.

The result naturally is confusion worst confounded.

There is little to be said in favour of the daylight saving advocates, who, although in the minority, have been responsible for upsetting the equilibrium of the community.

The issue was put before the electors at New Year's and the verdict was against summer time.

That should have been the last word.

The minority, like loyal citizens, should have been content to accept the verdict and yield to the will of the majority.

Daylight saving when universally adopted has much in its favour—and very little against it.

Daylight saving when adopted by the will of a community is not so beneficial, but at the same time has considerable merit.

Daylight saving when followed by a minority which attempts to force its opinion upon the mass of citizens, as in Welland, is not only a nuisance and an absurdity, but it is a piece of insolence and impertinence as well.

A MINISTER OF IMMIGRATION.

Sir Henry Thornton's declaration that Canada needs a skipper to direct immigration is so thoroughly founded upon fact that no one is likely to take issue with the head of Canada's National Railways.

Sir Henry's residence in Canada, although only a matter of months, has been long enough to enable him to put his finger upon the weak spot in the immigration efforts of the Federal Government.

The first need is undoubtedly a separate Minister of Immigration—a "skipper," to use the Thornton phrase.

It is not reasonable to expect Hon. Chas. Stewart to give the attention he should to immigration and at the same time look after the other duties with which he is at present loaded.

The Immigration Department is big enough to stand by itself.

The programme laid down by Sir Henry could not be effectively carried out unless the first vital step is taken.

A separate Minister, more effective propaganda abroad, an organization to follow up the immigrants when they arrive—these are all essentials of an immigration policy that is to get anywhere.

Despite the time spent in discussing this question in the House of Commons, nothing really definite has been accomplished.

Nor will anything worth while be accomplished until a Minister of Immigration is appointed and is backed up by the enthusiastic support of the Government.

MR. BRADBURN'S CANDIDATURE.

Leaving political considerations out of the question altogether, there seems every reason to believe that the Liberal-Conservatives of West Peterborough were well guided in their choice at last night's convention of Mr. W. H. Bradburn as standard-bearer in the Ontario election.

Mr. Bradburn impresses people of all shades of politics as a very desirable type of citizen to be interested in the management of the affairs of this Province.

His name has always stood in this community as that of a man willing to serve his fellow-citizens and ready to utilize his time and talent in the public service.

As an Alderman he served splendidly, and in connection with his two-year term as chief magistrate he has always been mentioned as one of the best Mayors that Peterborough has had.

Since severing his connection with the Council, ex-Mayor Bradburn has continued his efforts in the public interest by excellent work as a member of the Utilities Commission.

Incidentally, with Hydro-electric matters occupying such a prominent place in public discussion in the Province at the present time, the experience and knowledge of Hydro operations gained by Mr. Bradburn as a member of the local commission might be counted upon to stand him in good stead if the people promote him to the larger arena.

With candidates of this type in the running there is no reason to anticipate anything but a clean, gentlemanly fight in West Peterborough, and whether they agree with Mr. Bradburn's views or not it is to be fancied that the majority of electors will welcome his advent as an encouraging sign that politics can still attract men of weight and ability.

THE PEOPLE MUST BE CONSIDERED.

The Dominion Budget places the sales tax of six per cent "at the source." That means that the firm making an article is looked to by the Government to pay that tax. A lot of detail will have to be settled before there is a clear understanding of what "the source" really means, says the London Advertiser. If a manufacturer making cloth sells it to a manufacturer making clothing, which will be "the source?" Men in this business in London do not seem quite clear on the point.

From the standpoint of the consumer, the danger is in the possibility of that tax growing before it reaches him. If it passes through one or two hands before he gets it, the six per cent. is liable to be nine or ten per cent. by the time he pays it, and in our way of doing business no one would be to blame.

A sales tax is a direct levy on the purchasing power of the people, whether they are rich or poor. The indirect, or invisible, manner in which it is collected may make the people a little less clamorous in paying it, but it takes the money from them just the same.

Canada has two things to deal with, (1) the war debt and (2) the National Railways. These are going to make extraordinary taxation necessary for some years to come. The existence of these two great money takers calls for cutting down of ordinary expenditure.

When a man finds himself in a tight place he cuts his expenses; he does without things that he used to consider quite necessary, and he generally comes out of such an ordeal a better man with simplified ideas and sensible notions.

A Government is in the same position. The need for revenue has no right to receive prior consideration over the ability of the people to pay.

A CHATHAM INCIDENT.

One of the absurdities in connection with certain features of the Ontario Temperance Act is illustrated by the case reported from Chatham, where the Council is considering the question of paying the fine of a man convicted under the Act and in this way avoid having to take care of the prisoner's family until his sentence is served.

The offender, always a law-abiding citizen until the present occasion, was unlucky enough to be caught violating one of the sections of the O. T. A., and he was fined $400, with the alternative of nine months in jail.

He was unable to raise the amount of the fine, and, of course, has to serve his sentence.

At home there is a wife in delicate health and four small children.

It is estimated that it will cost the city considerably more than the amount of the fine to take care of the family until the bread-winner is released.

Hence the proposal that it would be good business for the Council to pay the fine rather than have to assume the expense of keeping the wife and children.

The case illustrates the necessity of establishing some elasticity to the measure in order that magistrates may be able to exercise their own judgment and deliver verdicts in accordance with the circumstances as they see them, instead of being pinned down to definite sentences that fail to take into consideration any unusual feature there may happen to be involved in the case.

It is incidents of this kind that serve to drive out of the minds of many people the numerous good features of the O. T. A.

TOO MUCH LICENSE.

What our younger generation is suffering from today is too much license. What is the cause of so little respect for the old by the young? Too much license again and so on ad-infinitum.

In the past children were treated as children until they attained their majority, but in these modern times they are treated as adults, at least they are allowed all the privileges that belong to grown men and women without any of the responsibilities. Is it any wonder that they do not develop the necessary character to make good citizens in later life? By all means remove all the prejudices of the past, but some of the old ideas of building character are worthy of consideration and should not be laid aside without something better to take their place. Robert Louis Stevenson says, "To love playthings well as a child, to lead an adventurous and honorable youth, and to settle, when the time arrives, into a green and smiling age, is to be a good artist in life and deserve well of yourself and your neighbors."

At the present day what opportunity have the young to develop character and self-restraint? Their parents efface themselves only too unselfishly to insure their young ones pleasure, with the result that the children take such sacrifices as if their right, and never realize, until out in the world for themselves, the sacrifices their parents made. How much better to train them to deny themselves some pleasure when young so that they may appreciate them fully later on.

There is an old adage, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," and while this form of punishment may have been overdone in the past, it is certainly underdone today. We all wonder at the marvellous achievement of John D. Rockefeller, the multi-millionaire. Perhaps the characteristics that contributed chiefly to his success were taught him in childhood. In Rockefeller's Random Reminiscences, he says: "My mother was a good deal of a disciplinarian. Once when I was being punished I felt called upon to explain, after the whipping had begun, that I was innocent of the charge. 'Never mind,' said my mother, 'we have started in on this whipping and it will do for the next time.' This attitude was maintained to its final conclusion in many ways." Again, Rockefeller says later on his book, when he had gone into business for himself: "My loans from my father were many. He would come to me and say that if I needed money in the business, he would be able to loan some, and I always needed capital. Just at the moment when I required money the most, he was apt to say, 'My son, I find I have got to have that money.' 'Of course, you shall have it at once,' I would answer, but I knew he was just testing me and that when I paid him he would hold the money without its earning anything for a little time and then offer it back to me later." Perhaps Rockefeller's parents were too spartan in their discipline, but there is no question but that a measure of their treatment could be applied to the present generation with advantage in many cases.

To bring out the best in anyone a certain amount of indulgence is necessary, especially with the very young, but a large amount of discipline is necessary also if the children are to be taught the true value of things. By all means let our young ones have all the fun and pleasure there is while young, but don't overlook that unselfishness, self-denial, gratitude and duty play a large part in a good man or woman's character and must be taught while young.

There has been plenty said and written about self-expression and such like new thought, which usually are just excuses. What we want are strong unselfish characters to make the best citizens to deal with the vicissitudes of business of life and not weak, pampered, headstrong characters that we meet only too often in this enlightened age.

In short, the idea is to stop this ever-growing, untrampled license of the young.—The Darling Digest.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The worst feature of the Welland daylight saving mix-up is that "Central" cannot be appealed to for the correct time.

The rumours that J. J. Morrison may be a candidate should be taken with a grain of salt. The U. F. O. Secretary has all the power he wants now.

The fact that the two Singers may be candidates in Southwest Toronto should not be accepted as an indication that the campaign there will be a harmonious one.

Premier Drury has a press agent now. Evidently he does not care to depend upon the Farmers' Sun for publicity.

TO RELIEVE PAIN AND BACKACHE

Women May Depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I had heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that when I realized I needed to take something to relieve my pains and backache, and to help build me up I began to take that. I had been sick off and on for years and barely weighed a hundred pounds, but now I have had such good results that I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to every one."—Mrs. J. J. BIEBER, 2939 18th Ave. South, Minneapolis, Minn.

Finds a True Friend

"Every woman who values her health should be proud to have a true friend like the Vegetable Compound," says Mrs. W. E. Shaw, 2327 Walnut Street, Chicago, Illinois. "I had female weakness so badly that I could not stand on my feet. Half of my time was spent in bed and I had pains in my back which were unbearable. I tried everything I could think of to help myself, and when a friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began taking it at once. I recommend it without hesitation."

A. F. Choate gave a most interesting talk on the post office work of this district. Mr. Choate has been connected with this work since 1866. His father was made postmaster in 1842 followed by his son, A. F. Choate, who has held the post for 34 years.

Mr. Choate said the first postage stamps reached Warsaw on Nov. 13, 1857, previous to which time postage was paid in cash and so recorded on the package to be mailed. No envelopes were in use, letters being written on one side of a sheet of paper, folded and sealed, being addressed on the reverse side. One sheet of paper was counted as one letter for a specific charge, and so on. Postage was also charged according to distance. Subscribers to newspapers paid the postage at their own post office, quarterly.

North Douro post office was situated in Lakefield, and opened Jan. 1, 1856. The office officially kept the name Douro post office for some time after the village was incorporated as Lakefield.

Hamilton Douglas used to carry the mails from Peterboro on horseback, to Lakefield, Warsaw, Norwood and Douro and back to Peterboro once a week.

The present Douro post office, then South Douro, was opened Sept. 1, 1860, a contract was made with Robert Shaw to carry the mail twice a week, and later three times a week. Charles Payne carried the mail for 12 years, three times weekly and in all that time never failed to get to Peterboro with his load, although once, in March, 1870, he was one day late making the return trip.

The first postcards, continued Mr. Choate, were blue-edged with a blue stamp. For many years the mail for the North Clarina and adjacent points, was sent to Warsaw and anyone coming down to the village delivered it to their neighbors. Patsy Kennedy drew the mail to Warsaw tri-weekly, for $1.37 and then to Clarina for $37 extra. When the contract was let, July 2, 1883, for daily mail to Warsaw the price was $274.00.

Money orders, Mr. Choate went on to say, were issued in Canada in 1854. A money order for the U.S. had to have 6 copies—In a list of post offices 1848.

Sometimes funny incidents occur in the post office, concluded the speaker, and at time sad stories may be visualized from happenings at the mail's distributing point. For instance, one elderly woman visited the Warsaw post office daily for two years, hoping for the letter from her son which never arrived.

Laid at Rest.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Mark Edwards was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Drain, Tuesday afternoon and was very largely attended. Rev. F. G. Weir conducted the services at the house and at the grave. There were many floral tributes. The pall-bearers were three brothers, Alec, John and Frank Darling; two brothers-in-law Robert Lennox and John Hunter, and one son-in-law, David Drain. Interment was made in Warsaw cemetery.

Through her long and distressing illness, Mrs. Edwards showed remarkable Christian fortitude. To the very last she was always cheerful. She was a member of the Baptist church.

Deceased passed away Sunday from the effects of a paralytic stroke on Monday week, although she had been in poor health for several years.

W. H. BRADBURN

whelmingly Conservative."

The Conservatives fought the measure day after day. They told Drury to drop his proportional representation and single transferable vote clauses and they would let the redistribution bill go to the committee. "I believe you will appreciate the strenuous fight that was put up by that little group of 25 men to save the great Conservative party," the speaker said.

Agrarians' Extravagance.

Referring to the main plank in the farmers' platform—economy—in setting up which they undertook to cut out all expenditures not absolutely necessary, Mr. Nickle produced a mass of evidence which proved, he said that the Drury administration had not only been extravagant, but had resorted to manipulating the accounts in order to make the condition of its finances appear better.

During the last year of the Conservative regime, ordinary expenditure totalled $21,000,000; in 1922, the total ordinary expenditure under the Agrarian government was $37,000,000. Although pledged to cut down expense the Drury government after four years of power had doubled the ordinary expenditure.

The books of the province should close on the 21st day of October in each year, Mr. Nickle said, but they were kept open last year until Nov. 15, with the result that $793,000 was taken in and credited to 1922 whereas it should have appeared in 1923. This assisted in making their finances for 1922 look better.

Liquor Profits.

Referring to the Ontario Temperance Act the speaker said that the government's share of the profit on liquor last year was $1,200,000.

"If liquor in this province is being sold as a drug or medicine," he said, "no government should charge so much as to make in one year from the people a profit of $1,200,000. It should be sold to the people on a doctor's prescription at the minimum price."

"These are some of the problems that confront you. We do not ask your support on the grounds of any promises that we make or have made."

In the days of Sir James Whitney taxes were kept low. There has been placed on the backs of the people during the administration of the Drury government new taxes totalling $13,500,000, and every dollar came out of the pockets of the people. This government driven to desperation, has left nothing untouched on which they could levy taxes.

Mr. Nickle paid a graceful tribute to the talent and oratory of Mrs. Follis and reviewed the work that women had done in the Conservative ranks. The Conservative government gave the women the vote he said, realizing that the immense services given during the war justified the giving to them of the franchise. Women in voting must remember that the political game is played according to certain definite rules and that no party can continue to command the government that cannot hold a majority in the House. "We must have a majority of the House Conservative members," the speaker said. "You have an opportunity today such as rarely comes to electors within the province. When the day comes that the Conservative Party obtains the majority in the Province of Ontario the foundation has been laid for a Federal representation."

The Nominations.

J. H. Burnham was proposed by G. W. Morrow and the seconder was Mr. Reynolds. Mrs. Howard Follis was proposed by Mr. Merrill, and the seconder was George Boucher. J. F. Strickland was proposed by Mr. Gregson, and the seconder was Mr. Nelson.

Mr. Stricklands motion for the unanimous nomination of W. H. Bradburn, was seconded by Mr. Bolton.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Nickle was proposed by V. J. McElderry, secretary of the Liberal Conservative Association of West Peterboro.

gregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians on the subject of the place of the Bible on the Public School curriculum, but while recognizing the value of such joint action and acknowledging the excellent work done in our Sunday Schools, something further is desirable and we recommend that the parishes of the diocese make some arrangement locally whereby during the summer vacation schools for religious instruction be instituted.

(a) Where possible in co-operation with other communions in the Public Schools.

'(b) Where this is not possible that the individual churches of one communion should hold classes for religious instruction in their own buildings.

"(2) That this Synod believes that the time has come when our missionary work in India should receive greater attention from the Church so that what is undertaken shall be commensurate with the importance of that country and with the work in China and Japan.

"(3) That this Synod reaffirms its belief in the unity of the churches of Christ and accept as its basis for promoting this unity the basis of such unity as it is set forth in the appeal to all Christian peoples,' issued by the Lambeth Conference. While following with profitable consideration every movement working toward the goal of unity, it believes that the only union which can be worked for is such as would be recognized as our communion throughout the world and comparible with the historic witness of the Church of England

"That the sections of the charge dealing with 'the trend of religious education,' 'the misconception of the Church,' and 'powers that be,' be printed and sent to the clergy to be used by them as sermons or sermon matter on a specific Sunday to be appointed by the Bishop."

VIVID DESCRIPTION OF "PASSION PLAY"

Killbrook Audience Enjoy Lecture and Lantern Views By Peterborough Rector.

MILLBROOK, May 17.—The town hall was well filled with a most appreciative audience on Monday evening, when Rev. R. B. Grobb of All Saints' church, Peterboro, gave his lecture on the "Oberammergau Passion Play," under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas church. Rev. Canon Allen introduced the speaker in a few well chosen words, and for two hours, with only a few moments intermission just before the trial scenes of our Saviour when all rose and sang, "There is a Green Hill far away," the audience listened with intense interest to the vivid description of the play of which Mr. Grobb was an eye witness last August, and which was so beautifully pictured upon the screen.

The criticism that it is scarcely right to make this Passion Week in the life of our Lord the subject of theatrical dramatization is overcome, the speaker stated, when it is known that it is done in fulfillment of a vow made over three hundred years ago by the people of Oberammergau, in gratitude because their village was delivered from the ravages of the plague which was devasting Central Europe in the year 1630. The performance, which takes place once every ten years, is done by the villagers as an act of sacrament, it is woven into the very warp and wool of their lives, they live in it and for it. To be elected to act the character of our Saviour is the highest honor in the village, and the children even are brought up with a keen desire to take a part in the play. In 1634 the first performance was given, and was very crude indeed, but improvement has been made until now it is the finished production which has gained world-wide fame, and in 1922, 350,000 people witnessed the play.

The great theatre seats 4200 people though the said there were probably 5,000 present when he saw it on August 5th of last year, about 1,000 standing throughout the entire twelve acts. The curtain rises promptly at 9 a.m. and the performance lasts until 6 p.m., with two hours intermission for lunch from 12 till 2, when the visitors, billeted in the home of the village, are waited upon by the very people who are taking part in the play.

The stage is partly open to the sky allowing the magnificent view of blue sky-line and green mountains to aid materially in giving realism to the scenes depicted. Two or three performance are given each week during the summer, between sixty and seventy being presented in 1922. German is the language of the people in this little village high up in the Bavarian Alps, its very isolation helping to keep its people "unspotted from the world.

Anton Lang, who takes the character of Christ, did so last year for the third time; as he was then forty-nine years of age, he will be too old to act again in 1930 when the time for production has once more arrived, and it is probable that the one now taking John will be chosen for the main part, in the next ten years. The sight of the actors filling the village church to capacity attending mass and partaking of the Sacrament before going to the theatre for their performance. Mr. Grobb said does much to dissipate any scruples one might feel regarding the right of acting such sacred scenes; with the villagers the play is an act of real worship.

These side lights, given during his introductory remarks and as the lecture progressed, did much to deepen the attitude of interest and reverence with which Mr. Grobb's vivid portrayal of the various scenes was listened to. The slides used are from pictures copyrighted by a firm in London, England, not being allowed to use a camera in the theater. The audience could not but remark the speaker's excellent memory as he more than once repeated whole passages of the dialogue from the play, and even the words sung by the great chorus which, at the opening and previous to several of the subsequent scenes, outlined in song that which was to follow.

The amazing coloring, wonderful costumes and stage setting, were clearly depicted and as the sacred story reached its climax, and Christ, thorn-crowned, was actually seen to hang upon the cross, the hushed atmosphere showed how deeply the listeners were stirred by the literal presentation of the atonement of the world's Redeemer. The few scenes following seemed, as the speaker said, like an anti-climax, but necessary to the completeness of the story of salvation. The tableaux of events from the Old Testament foreshadowing either by contrast or likeness, other events connected with Passion Week in the New, were most impressive and did much to round out the understanding of Biblical facts in the minds of the listeners.

The spiritual atmosphere which had been created made it unseemly that there should be any attempt at applause, Rev. Canon Allen closing the evening with benediction. Mr. A. A. Smith moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, and Reeve W. T. Wood seconded the motion, the uplifted hands of all present signifying their approval.

CANADA SHOULD RETAIN MARKET FOR CANADIANS

T. L. Church Vigorously Protests in Dominion Commons Against Too Generous Tariff Reductions.

DEBATE ON BUDGET

OTTAWA, May 17.— (Canadian Press.)—"I do not believe," declared Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, during further debate on the Budget in the House yesterday. "I do not believe and I have had nothing to convince me that so heavy a rate of protection is required as is given to many of the indutries existent in this country today." But there were peculiar conditions existent in Canada to-day, Mr. Stewart went on — depressing conditions not only in regard to agriculture but in regard to business. Much as we would desire tariff reductions that would mean something considerable in the cost of living, "it is not my desire, nor is it the desire of the government at this moment to jeopardize any of these industries while they are passing through such a trying period as they are passing through to-day." It was said that other countries generally were increasing their tariffs. That made it incumbent on those charged with the responsibility of government to go slowly in the matter of reductions.

Canadians Not Beggars.

In the course of debate, J. H. Harris, Conservative of East York, referring to the new reciprocity offer, urged that the Canadian people did not wish to be beggars waiting for crumbs to drop from the industrial tables of Uncle Sam.

Tax on Pulpwood.

In prolonged discussion of financial interests, T. L. Church, Conservative of North Toronto, urged that revenue might be raised by a tax on exported pulpwood and exported water power.

He also expressed the opinion that if the reciprocity clause had been taken out of the Budget it would have been better. At the present time, it would commend itself neither to the people of Canada nor of the United States.

MR. DRURY LAUDS HIS LIEUTENANTS

Defends His Stand on Timber Commission and Hydro Radials.

MOUNT BRYDGES, May 17. — (Canadian Press). — An arden defence of his present stand on the Timber Commission and the Provincial Hydro radials and an enthusiastic commendation of the work of Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture in the late Government, were the main items in the speech of Hon. E. C. Drury, speaking before a nominating convention of West Middlesex U. F. O. constituents here yesterday. J. L. Lethbridge, of Glencoe, former U.F.O. in the Legislature, was again nominated.

The Premier gave a detailed account of all the work of his administration and asserted that legislation undertaken by his Government had been carried out by responsible business men and not by inefficient politicians.

In highly eulogizing Mr. Doherty, the Premier gave him credit for having the embargo on Canadian cattle in Britain lifted.

The Tax Rate.

Although the tax rate this year as just set by the Council is 42 mills, two mills higher than last year, the increase will not be a new experience, for the ratepayers, as 42 mills was the figure in 1921. The rate for public and separate school supporters is the same. The total amount of the estimated expenditure for the year is slightly in excess of $59,000.

Among the new expenditures is a bridge across Trout Creek at Simpson Street, the estimated cost of which is $1,200, and this adds nearly one mill to the rate.

SUGAR SCARCE BUT NO CAUSE PRESENT PANIC

DUE PROHIBITION.

OTTAWA, May 17. — (Canadian Press). — The world's supply of sugar is short by some five per cent. of normal production, this accounting for the increased prices. As a result, sugar prices may be expected to increase still further from their present plane, but there is no need for panic among consumers. There will be enough sugar "to go round" if consumption can be decreased slightly. This is a summary of the evidence placed yesterday before the Special Agriculture Committee of the House by representatives of the Canadian sugar refineries.

All witnesses declarled that the great factor in the increase of sugar prices was the decrease in production; that the issue of a "short crop" bulletin from Washington in February had sent prices "sky rocketing," and that the price of Canadian refined sugars was governed by the price of raws in New York. Consumption of sugar had increased "enormously," it was stated, and to some extent this was charged to prohibition, the absence of alcoholic drinks having given rise to a great demand for sugared liquids. Prosperity among wage-earners in the United States was also a factor in increased production.

As to a possible source of making up the deficiency in the world supply, one of the witnesses declared that increased beet sugar production in Europe and America was the only hope. That sugar, however, would not reach the consumers until the fall.

Bank Not Guilty.

C. E. Neill, general manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, gave a flat denial to charges that his bank was behind sugar speculators and partly responsible for increased sugar prices. Sir Herbert Holt, he said, had been accused of "bulling" the sugar market because he had estimated the Cuban production at very close to what it actually proved to be.

The sugar refiners' evidence was followed closely by a large crowd, which disappeared when, at ten o'clock, the committee turned to hear a witness urge the use of the port of Quebec as an outlet in shipping cattle from Canada to Great Britain.

MOSCOW, May 17.—(Canadian Press.)— According to a despatch from Odessa, on the Black Sea, the sailors on the German ships in the harbor there have declared a strike in protest against "the attack by capital upon Soviet Russia," this presumably referring to the ultimatum served on the Moscow government by Great Britain. The sailors later marched through the streets carrying red flags and delivered speeches at a mass meeting urging the creation of a Soviet state stretching from Vladivostok to the Rhine.

TIMBER ISSUE WAS BASIS OF ADDRESS

G. Howard Ferguson Flays Drury Government For Action in the Backus Deal.

SUDBURY, Ont., May 17.—(Canadian Press).—That the Timber Commission was part of a Liberal campaign to villify the former Minister of Lands and Forests and to cast obloquy on the Conservative party, was the feature of the address made by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, leader of the Conservative party in Ontario, and Charles McCrea, Conservative candidate for Sudbury, at the convention yesterday afternoon, when Mr. McCrea was again the unanimous choice of the convention as standard-bearer in the present campaign. Both speakers dealt largely with the timber issue, defending the previous Conservative timber administration and contrasting it with the Drury regime in this respect. The Backus deal was attacked from every side and by the speakers contended the Shevlin-Clark deal had been a legitimate transaction which had been forced to a settlement by the Government withholding the Shevlin - Clark licenses. Mr. McCrea received a great ovation from his supporters.

LEAGUE HAS NO POWER KEEP PEACE BY FORCE

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—In an utterance of a sensational import which is likely to influence profoundly the policies and opinion at home and abroad, Secretary of State Hughes last night condemned as impracticable the fundamental principle of the machinery set up by the League of Nations to enforce peace. The Secretary, speaking at the National Conference of Social Work, pronounced it impossible to "maintain peace by force," because of the difficulty of supplying the controlling and directing force to be used.

Mr. Hughes touched on the failure of the League to agree on the use of League machinery to prevent and end numerous wars which have raged in Europe and Asia since the League was created.

Jocelyn on the Job

by Jack Lait

"MY DEAR MR. ——:

"This will be presented to you by Miss Jocelyn Hanleigh. She is a young woman of unusual intelligence and education. She wants to earn her living and make her way rather than to do as other well-born folks who haven't enough income to meet the demands of life in 'society'—borrow, owe, dodge process servers and ride a high horse. Miss Hanleigh, suddenly and perhaps but temporarily in a financial dilemma due to the death of her father, the late J. Bernard Hanleigh, wants to work. Her determination is as admirable, I think, as her qualifications are potentially superior.

"If there is or can consistently be made a place for her in your organization, I pledge you that she will apply herself earnestly, will absorb any knowledge individual to her duties rapidly and thoroughly, and will make good.

"Any help you can extend her toward making a connection will be warmly appreciated by

"Yours sincerely,

"BROCK AMESBURY."

That was the uniform text of the letters that reached Jocelyn the morning after her talk with Amesbury, her counsellor, who had promised her twenty copies addressed to as many of his clients, who represented a score of varied industries in the metropolis.

Her silvery-haired mother—still numb with grief over the death of her husband, who had never discussed money matters with her and who had died leaving the widow and daughter in the embarrassing and harassing situation of being accustomed to luxuries and having no money to further support them—made no further protest against Jocelyn's persistent resolve to earn their bread and salt—let the snobs snicker and the gossips gasp.

Jocelyn held the package of letters in her hand, then stacked them on the table. They slid down and apart, and one slipped to the floor. She picked it up and read the typewriting on the envelope:

"JULES FORDE, ESQ.,

"—— Fourth Avenue.

"Personal."

The name signified nothing to her, nor did the address. The commercial Who's Who was as unlighted to her as the commercial Where's Which. Here were twenty such names and such addresses. None meant more than the other. They must be twenty different men in twenty differing circumstances as they affected her. But her vision could tell her nothing about any of them. It must be blind luck that should decide. Then, why not Jules Forde, whoever he might be? Chance had singled his letter out of the twenty; why not follow the hint?

Jules Forde it would be.

Jocelyn kissed her mother, who sat listlessly in one of the formidable easy chairs in the home that the girl hoped she could enable them to keep from the wreck. Mrs. Hanleigh touched her arm limply in assent, not in encouragement or resistance. Jocelyn selected a simple hat consistent with her "character" as a working girl and tripped forth. She walked a block or two and then asked a policeman the way to the address on Forde's envelope. She was directed to the most handy carline and instructed where to transfer. Jocelyn had never transferred in her life, but she watched the others. And when she left the jammed tram she found herself in sight of the building she was seeking.

On the directory in the lobby the name of Forde appeared beside the number 1682. Jocelyn elevatored to the sixteenth floor and found the right door. Only then she got her first intimation of the business into which she was about to ask admission. Forde was an advertising specialist. Just what this might comprehend was too hazy to Jocelyn. But she entered.

Before her spread a large, square room, subdivided only by low partitions running criss-cross, here and there cut up by little swinging gates, making a series of offices. There were fully two dozen desks, some flat, some of the rolltop persuasion, some just typewriter stands. No one looked up. The men and women kept their attention concentrated on papers or machines before them or continued walking or arguing.

Jocelyn crossed the slender aisle that ran along the front fence and laid her letter on the nearest table, across which a bright-eyed girl with fluffy hair and a sailor collar glanced first at it and then at her.

"Half the letters that come in here are marked 'personal,'" she said. "Is this really personal? Or, if you want to tell me just what your business is with Mr. Forde, I'll send you to a desk where you can get some action. The chief is a busy bird—you might have to wait for him an hour; and then he'll probably send you to the head of whatever department you want. Now—what do you want?"

"I—my—yes; this is a letter of introduction, and I scarcely think it was meant to be read by any one but Mr. Forde."

"Introduction? Are you one of the 400—or something?"

"Yes—no—I mean . . . is Mr. Forde in?"

"I can't tell you till after he reads the letter. I'll send it to him if you insist."

She touched an invisible button. A young man came from the next desk.

There was no bench or chair outside the walnut rail. Jocelyn shifted from one foot to the other. The messenger had gone through a door in the far wall, had been about a minute, had returned to his place without any word to her. Three minutes later the young woman who had interviewed her picked up a receiver, said "Yes, sir," pushed her button again, and said to the young man, "Show this lady to the front office." He beckoned her and she followed through the door into a handsome private room with rugs and art works and some quiet pretence at magnificent simplicity.

In a corner, behind a curved and carved table of fumed oak, sat a little gray-haired man, immaculately and sedately attired. He stood up as she approached. The boy backed out.

"Won't you be seated, Miss Hanleigh?" he asked.

"I have read this letter from my friend, Amesbury. I will, of course, find a position for you."

"'Of course'? Is it as simple as that?"

"When Brock Amesbury asks anything of me it is more simple than that; it is done, if it is within my possibilities. Providing a place for you, however, is only a small part of it. I must see that it affords you an outlet for the promising qualities which he pledges for you; it must be suitable, must pay enough to meet your difficulties, and must allow you to be happy in it. That complicates it somewhat, doesn't it?"

"Why—Mr. Forde—it is too much. I have no right to ask that anything exceptional be done for me. I am quite willing to fit in anywhere; at almost any salary to start. You see, I—well—I find it difficult to express what is in my mind. I could say so much. But I shouldn't burden you with any of it. I have already gotten past the barriers in an irregular and maybe in an unsportsmanlike way, and"——

"Not at all," he interrupted. "You had a passport through the lines. I owe Brock Amesbury much more than I shall ever be able to repay him through the little I can do in response to this request. Have you any approximate idea of what you would like to do? Or, let me put it this way: have you decided what branch of the advertising business would be most likely to embrace your outstanding inclinations and talents?"

"But I know nothing of the advertising business in any branch. To be truthful, I did not know you WERE in the advertising business until I came to your door. I'm afraid you misunderstand. Mr. Amesbury did not send me here because he thought I had specific qualifications for your business. He just gave me some letters to his clients—several—who might by some friendly luck have some sort of a vacancy."

"It doesn't matter how many letters he gave you, Miss Hanleigh. One was addressed to me—and he signed it. I am glad that you found the friendly luck, and that you came here. . . . Now, let's see. . . . You have never worked?"

"No, sir."

"This is a highly technical and complex business, advertising. It is more; it is a profession. The public little sees in the ads it skims over the extent of the brain work, enthusiasm, experience, devotion and system that are poured into the commercial 'copy' in the newspapers and magazines.

"No playwright or editor or poet or impressario designs his effects with one-tenth of the scrupulously detailed minuteness to which paid advertising is subjected. Each infinitesimal word is scrutinized, weighed by the carat, considered from every angle. When one is paid for writing, or typing, or illustrating, one may be cavalierly or free-handed. But when one pays—and with other people's money, moreover—for words and pictures, one must be precise and efficient to the last drop of selling energy that may be squeezed from printed matter in limited and costly spaces.

"There are other and broader phases. We consult with merchants on such vital questions as sales drives associated with the advertising campaigns, distribution of advertising in relation to cost, quality and volume of circulation, as well as territorial distribution and such elements. But our principal responsibility is the preparation of 'copy' that will, to make it succinctly to the point, get the highest results with the lowest expenditure."

"Oh, I'm afraid that is terribly involved—and I know nothing of even the most elementary principles, not to speak of the finer shadings you mention. Perhaps I would be better raw material for a less exacting business."

"No. There is none, to begin with. I have hinted at some of the demands of this business not because they are more devious than those of others, but because this chances to be my business. You will find in every industry a similar condition. As the world is graduated into highly specialized divisions of all branches to-day, instead of the general practices of half a century ago, when a 'merchant' looked after every part of his institution—and did every part superficially and inefficiently—the great merchant of this day is he who does one part and does that part thoroughly, exclusively, exhaustively.

"A department store has hordes of buyers, each highly trained in one sort of goods and not knowing or caring much about any other; that is much better than having as many, all buying all sorts, and none knowing about any. With such competition a man must master something or he cannot survive. And every man who has any measure of success will tell you a story similar to mine—that his calling is one that has been refined down to the thinnest point. If you are terrified over the difficulties of advertising, you would encounter the same conditions in cement or automobiles or law or lumber—or any commercial game.

"There is money awaiting the man or woman who does one thing well—better than the outsider can do it. And where there is money, men and women ferret out the possibilities and go after them—go hard and long. And there isn't a spot left out of which money can be gotten that hasn't been explored and charted and mined and staked and even barb-fenced. The surface profits have all been skimmed long ago; those who got in early were lucky. To-day it is scrabble and dig, and to do that and make it pay one must have determination, energy, concentration, patience, and, more than that—knowledge.

"You probably have all but the last. And you will get that—here. As you came through that outer room you passed some individuals in my organization who knew probably less than you do about advertising when they came here, but who are now experts; and they have made themselves almost invaluable and unreplaceable. You, with a much sounder foundation, will soon catch them and eventually pass them.

"Can you start to-morrow?"

Jocelyn gulped. She thought of a thousand things in half a second. Then she gulped:

"I can start now."

"Attaboy—I mean, that's the spirit. Do you know anything about art?"

"Art?" she looked at him puzzled. "That's a broad word, Mr. Forde. I have had it dinned into my ears since childhood."

"And some of what you have learned of it will be useful. Of course, art has a selling value only when it is applied properly—like medicine or law or any other intangible but essential thing. Art, here, resembles art in text-books, critiques and lectures only in its elementary principles. But it is still art. An exhibit of the best drawings and paintings made in any year for commercial ads would be as fine a collection of real art as any collection in any high-brow academy. Folks sometimes think that a thing cannot be both useful and artful, but I think that is an error.

"Beyond that door to your left—not the one through which you came—is our art department. We have pen-and-ink, wash, water color and oil artists, some that 'double' in a couple of these supposedly exclusive methods, and even a crayon man. We also have 'layout' experts, who are artists, but who do not draw or paint—they supervise, arrange, suggest, criticize.

"I am going to make you—for the time being—one of these, in a way. And I am going to employ, of course, expert qualifications. If there is anything that you know—really KNOW—better than most others, that information has a commercial value. If brought to just the right market it may have a far greater commercial value, immediately turnoverable into cash, then the possessor imagines."

"But—what do I know—better than most others?"

"A great deal. You know some things, some things important, important to the advertising business, far better than, for instance, I do."

Jocelyn looked at him in wonderment.

"You know clothes—form—good taste—those things. Now, our clients want to sell to discriminating people. They can attract them with art work which such people will recognize as being authoritative. You can help us. Our artists are expert in technique, and to certain extents know such things, too; but you know more about that especial quality than they do or could.

"I am going to make you censor of the clothes on the women—yes, and the men, too—in our pictures. And don't think I am merely creating a sinecure to be obliging. There is perhaps no more important function in advertising. If our pictured models convey 'class' our product will intrigue people who recognize 'class'—and they are, by all odds, the preferred risks among potential purchasers. You will be able to do this at once, I am certain. Gradually you will learn—acquire, absorb—other professional knowledge about the myriad ramifications of advertising. For the present you will supply your own specialty—and a highly valuable one, I am confident. This way, please."

And in ten minutes, before she realized it, Jocelyn Hanleigh, society girl, tenderly reared seminary deb, was "at work"—an expert in a business she had scarcely known existed half an hour before; examining pictures designed for advertisements (thereunto she had rarely even read an advertisement) to see whether the ideas expressed by prosperous children of the poor and the middle classes would stand the vise of the poor child of the elect stratum.

The draughtsmen, letterers, retouchers and less specialized men and girls in the department gazed at her curiously behind her back. She had been introduced and her functions had been announced. Some one laid a fresh drawing before her. She picked it up.

"That hat will never do," she soliloquized before she half realized that she was already doing just what she had been engaged to do.

And it struck her with a bang—she had started on a commercial "career"!

MISSION SERMON ON THE JUDGMENT

"God now declareth to man that all should everywhere do penance, because He hath appointed a day wherein He shall judge the world in justice." Using these words of the apostle of the Gentiles to the Pagan Athenians, as his text, Rev. J. McCandlish, C.S.S.R., last evening, in St. Peter's Cathedral, delivered a forceful sermon on general judgment. It is an article of our faith, the preacher said, that each and every one of us at the moment of death will be judged in a particular manner. We will go alone before the tribunal of Christ immediately after death to receive from the all-just Judge according to our works. But in addition to that, there will be the general judgment which will take place at the end of the world, wherein all who have ever lived will be gathered together to receive that eternal sentence from which there is no appeal. Dread signs will appear that will herald to man the approach of the world's destruction and the end of time. "The sun shall be darkened, the moon shall not give her light, the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be moved." "Then," says St. Matthew, "all shall be gathered together from the four winds, from the farthest parts of the heavens to the uttermost bounds of the earth." Souls will again enter their bodies which they inhabited here upon earth and will see "The Son of Man coming in a cloud with great power and majesty."

Our Divine Lord will appear this time, not, as the helpless babe of Bethelehem, not as the despised and scourged Nazarene, but as an all-powerful King and Judge. Accompanied by His angels, He will separate the just, the elect from the reprobate from those who, impenitent, died enemies to Him.

"Christ is no respecter of persons," says the evangelist. Ties of friendship and relationship which, here upon earth, sometimes shield the wicked from the consequences of their acts will be of no avail on the last day. Families will be separated from families; members of the same family will be divided, some to the right, some to the left, husband from wife, brother from sister, mother from son. The nature of our sentence will depend upon one thing, and one only—not upon the position we have attained in this life, the wealth accumulated, the manner in which the world regards us, the successes or failures in temporal pursuits, but we will receive in proportion to the obedience we have rendered God—in proportion to our good works.

If we receive particular judgment at the moment of death, what need is there of a second or general judgment? It is given us that the ways of Providence, which seem mysterious in this world, will be justified at the last day. Are there not many who ignore the existence of the Almighty, who care little or nothing about His divine laws, and live in daily enmity to Him, and yet in their perversity meet with little, if any, trouble or trial, which they would richly merit; on the contrary, prosperity seems to accompany them. Are there not likewise those who are sincere in their endeavors to do the right thing, who shun sin and the occasions of it, and yet seem to have no end of trial or misfortune. These designs of Providence, mysterious to us, will be shown in all their justice on that last day when, in the sight of all, merit and punishment will be given by an all-seeing and all-just Judge.

What will be judged on that day? St. Paul says that "For every idle world men shall render an account on the last day." From the fall of the angels to the last moment of time, all deliberate acts of word, thought, desire or omission of duty will have been recorded, to be manifested and judged before all.

Our Divine Lord on that day will be an object of terror to the damned but a source of consolation and happiness to those who have served Him faithfully. Let us so live, the preacher urged, that on that day we may hear the words, "Come ye blessed of My Father, possess the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid" indigestion.

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

To Make Hairs Vanist From Face, Neck or Arms

(Beauty Culture)

Keep a little powdered delatone handy and when hairy growths appear make a paste with some of the powder and a little water, then spread over hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be entirely free from hair or blemish. This simple treatment is unfailing, but care should be exercised to be sure and get genuine delatone, otherwise you may be disappointed.

JAPANESE LABOR OUTBREAK.

SYDNEY, N. W. S., May 17.—(Associated Press).—The situation at Thursday Island, off the northern coast of Queensland, where serious Japanese labor troubles occurred recently, is said to be delicate from an international point of view, according to the latest reports received here.

One authority has described the position as "a powder magazine covered with brown paper," although there has been no violence on the part of the Japanese greater than Australia has been accustomed to in other portions of the commonwealth.

The situation is declared to be the climax of difficulties that have existed since 1916 when the Queensland Government was forced, through representations made to the Federal Government at the instance of Japan, to withdraw the permit for Japanese in the sugar fields.

In 1920 the Japanese indentured workers resented the employment of Papuans and Australian natives to such a degree that the laborers of those races were withdrawn almost entirely from the industry.

The garrison at Thursday Island is so small that it would be useless in the event of any widespread trouble.

A Thought

FIFTY CENTS A RACE.

BERLIN, May 17. — (Associated Press).—Jockeys in Germany get about forty or fifty cents a race, with a small percentage added for riding a winning mount, under the terms of a new tariff. The schedule prescribes 10,000 marks for every flat-race ridden, and 13,600 for each steeplechase. If he wins, the jockey gets two per cent. of the purse. Apprentice jockeys are paid half the rate of the "regulars" and their share in any first purse won is one-fourth of one per cent.

TRIAL ALFRED DANN IS UNDER WAY TO-DAY

TORONTO, May 17.—(Canadian Press.) — Trial of Alfred Dann, charged with murdering Ann Fields in this city on April 14th, began today before Mr. Justice Lennox and a jury. The body of Ann Fields was found in a house on Hagerman street and indications were that she had been struck with a hammer and stabbed with a butcher knife.

Had Bad Pains In Her Heart

Nerves Were Very Bad

Mrs. John Case, R. R, No. 4, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I wish to say that I have been bothered very much with my heart and nerves. I doctored with two different doctors, but did not find much relief. I would have such bad pains in my heart, at times, I would be almost afraid to move or breathe, and at night I could not sleep. If the pains in my heart were gone, my nerves would be so bad I could not lie still and would only get a little sleep by being tired out. My stomach was also very bad and I could not eat but very little, and then only certain things or I would have so much distress which always made my heart worse.

I had been suffering for nearly two years until one day I was talking to our druggist about the way I felt. He advised me to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a fair trial. I have now taken five boxes and am feeling so much better, I am able to do my own work, and can eat anything I wish. I cannot praise

"Fever Girls" Astoundtng Pluck

ANNA MANTHIE.

MILWAUKEE, May 15.—To live through two years of fever, running from 107 to 110—

To live two years without a mouthful of food or a glass of water—

To be kept alive two years by forced liquid feeding—

To undergo ten operations.

That takes grit.

And it is plenty of grit that Anna Manthie, 28, who lives here with her aged mother at the home of her brother, Edward Manthie, has.

"No, indeed I'm not going to die not yet awhile," said Anna when seen in her little bedroom where she sat propped up on seven pillows—to make breathing easier.

Better, She Thinks.

"You see I've stuck it out this far, and I really believe I'm a little improved because the fever has gone down in the last few weeks, so why should I give up now?

"Oh, yes, I've been ready to die several times, but each time I pulled through. I've made my peace with God and am prepared. But I do so want to get well. So I just determine to live on, and I do."

Anna has big brown eyes that stand out startlingly against the pallor of her skin. She continually has a cold compress or an ice pack on her head to keep the fever down.

Lying on her bed, not able to move from one side to the other, she keeps in touch with the outside world through newspapers and her many friends.

With wonderful clarity of memory Anna tells of the oncoming of illness.

She was a girl of 17, working in a down-town store as a clerk, when she was first taken ill, she said, though she had never been strong.

First Operation.

Then followed an operation and but little improvement. Then came another operation and another and another. This continued up to two years ago when she suddenly grew worse and took to her bed.

Her fever mounted rapidly and hovered for months around the 110 mark. Never was it below 107.

Her physician couldn't believe his own eyes. He called in other medical men who in turn recorded the temperatures—and predicted a quick death. But Anna lives on.

Her malady is a kidney disorder.

GERMAN RADIO FANS MAY HAVE NEW SETS

(By Gus M. Oehm. ... ...

BERLIN, (By mail to United Press.)—The German post office department has lifted the ban against radio receiving sets in private homes.

Heretofore the German government reserved the exclusive right to send and receive radio messages in Germany. However, heavy pressure has been brought to bear and the lifting of the restrictions has resulted. Several companies have already been granted the right to send out musical prorammes, weather reports, speeches and features.

The government will regulate the wave lengths so that it will be impossible for a private receiving set to tune in on the government wave length, thereby picking off messages going over government lines.

The government has taken the position that Germany, through the loss of her cables at the end of the war, must depend largely upon wireless for transmitting messages abroad, and under no circumstances willp rvitae transmission be permitted to interfere with business transmission.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba: More than 1,000 head of cattle will be shipped from western Canada to Great Britain in May by the United Grain Growers, Ltd., it was announced by C. Rice-Jones, general manager.

System Run Down Blood Out of Order

Many people become run down, but don't know just exactly what their trouble is, when, as a rule, it is improper circulation of the blood.

All they need is a good tonic to build up the system and put the blood into proper shape.

For this purpose there is nothing on the market to-day to equal.

Burdock Blood Bitters

It regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, purifies the blood and tones up the entire system.

Mrs. H. Poole, Port Dover, Ont., writes:—"My system was run down and my blood out of order, and I suffered a great deal from pains in my head which made me feel very miserable. A friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle and before it was used I found it was doing me good. I kept on until I had taken three, and now I feel like a different woman.

My husband also took it and it has built him up."

For the past 44 years B.B.B. has been manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

Council, as reported in the paper, affecting the prosecution of offences under the Ontario Temperance Act, it is quite apparent that there is a serious conflict between the attitude that is taken by the Attorney-General regarding the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act and that taken by the City Council.

Section 64 of the Act itself states that "It shall be the duty of the Crown Attorney within the county in which the offence is committed to attend to the prosecution of all cases committed to him by an inspector or officer appointed under this Act by the Lieutenant-Governor or by any officer appointed by the Council of the municipality under Section 120 and the Council appointing such officer shall be responsible for the payment of the proper fees of the Crown Attorney when so employed by such officer."

It is the duty of every member of the police force to enforce the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act, and it is the duty of the members of the police force, through the Chief of Police, to report all breaches of the Ontario Temperance Act to the County Crown Attornty if the wishes of the Attorney-General are to be respected and carried out.

In the event of any conflict between the City Council and the Crown Attorney, their proper course is to take up their differences with the Attorney-General and the Chief of Police is well advised not to allow himself to be drawn into discussions in which he has no concern and where his plain duty is to carry out the instructions of his superior officers, the Board of Police Commissioners.

LABOR CONDITIONE SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Increased Activity Is Apparent in Many Parts of the World.

LONDON, May — The unemployment situatior. throughout the world is favorably compared with that of a year ago, says the current issue of the International Labor Review, the monthly publication of the International Labor office of the League of Nations at Geneva. The periodical has just finished a world wide survey on unemployment.

In France and Belgium unemployment is non-existent. In North America employment was exceedingly good towards the close of 1922 as compared with 1921, though in Canada figures for October and November show a contraction as compared with previous years.

In the United States employment has been stadily increasing during the past year and business conditions continue to improve. Production was very good during January, 1923, and apparently no one a year ago expected such a rapid recovery.

In the United Kingdom the general unemployment index numbers show little change at the end of January, 1923, as compared with December, 1922. The activity in coal mining in steel-sheet manufacture and in the worsted industry was satisfactory but most of the other principal industries are still under the spell of depression.

In the Scandinavian countries and in the Netherlands the situation shows improvement.

In Italy the great increase of the numbers unemployed recorded the end of the year was due to unemployment in the mining and out-door industries, as well as in agriculture.

Polish industries were comparatively active during the last three months of 1922, and a comparison with the corresponding month of last year shows that unemployment has greatly diminished. In Switzerland unemployment is still declining.

Austria and Germany are the only two countries for which unemployment figures show a substantial increase at the end of 1922 as compared with 1921. It has been estimated that Austrian industries were working at 40 per cent. of their capacity at the end of 1922. In Germany seasonable unemployment in the building industry is especially acute this year. Employment in the metal, electrical and chemical industries is still good, the decline being chiefly in the printing, food and building trades.

RAIN STOPPED OPENING GAME

Weatherman Interfered With Opening of Northumberland Baseball League at Hastings.

HASTINGS, May 17. — Rain interfered with the opening of the Northumberland Baseball League here yesterday, and the first inning was not finished. The locals and the visitors, the Campbellford team, waited patiently for the grounds to dry after the shower at about the time set for play to begin. After Campbellford had taken a turn at the bat and Hastings had one man at the plate, the deluge came, the crowd fled for shelter, and the game was called.

The season, however, was opened officially by distinguished residents of the village, Reeve W. M. Fowlds leading off in a brief address before pitching the first ball, in which he referred to Hastings' unfailing interest in athletics, and praised the game in which the village now has a team as one of the best forms of sport. Of course, the Reeve said, the fans hoped that the home team would win the opening game, but they were just as anxious to see the visitors play winning ball. Whoever won it was the desire of all that the playing should be fair.

The umpire in the preliminaries was Rev. D. A. Thomson whose vigorous frame is a standing homily on the advantages of athletic exercise. A. U. Bailey, manager of the Bank of Toronto, took his place behind Alex. Wilson, clerk of the village, who was at bat.

Umpire Thomson had no chance to demonstrate his judgment on balls and strikes, and Mr. Bailey's job, too, was a sinecure, as Mr. Wilson, swinging his bat ferociously found everything that Reeve Fowlds had to offer, straightening out the best curve at the command of the man on the rubber. Clarence, the young son of Police Chief Scriver, was struck in the mouth by a ball from Mr. Wilson's bat, and was assisted from the field, not seriously injured, although he lost considerable blood.

The Game Begins.

Cowell, the third baseman, headed the batting order of the visitors. He landed on the first ball pitched to him, and made a clean single to centre, beating the ball to first by a block. He went to second when Hutton was hit by the Hastings pitcher and stole third. Weston's sacrifice sent him around the plate with the first run of the season.

Hume was thrown out by the pitcher at first, and Weston, the heavy slugger of the visitors' team, met the same fate after knocking a number of long fouls which would have been good for extra bases if they had landed in fair territory. The side was retired when Ayrheart struck out, the visitors giving as fine an exhibition of snappy play and good work on the bases. They are a bunch of gentlemanly young fellows and made a good appearance in their neat and tasty uniforms.

Hastings at Bat.

The first and only man up for Hastings was Scriver, the catcher, who sent a red hot grounder down to short. Nancarrow made a splendid stop and perfect throw to Weston on first, but Umpire Jones, who officiated on bases gave the runner a life.

At this point the rain came and play was stopped, the umpire calling it off after the legal wait for fair weather.

A. J. Wood, president of the Campbellford club, was umpire on balls and strikes.

Manager Davidson of the visitors proved himself expert and vigilant as a coach, at the same time keeping on the lookout that his men were given a fair deal by the umpire.

As Campbellford is rather a long name for a league team it has been suggested that Manager Davidson's men be known as the "Campbells."

The complete team selected by Manager Davidson is composed of the following young men everyone of whom has been drilled in athletics since his infancy: J. Blackwood, c; Sam Hutton and E. Eagleson, pitchers; H. E. Nancarrow, short stop; Cliff Weston, first base; J. Cowell, second base; Leslie Shillinglaw, 3rd base; W. Hume, right field; E. Ayrhart, left field; C. Johnston, centre field.

HOOPER SAYS MOVEMENT PROGRESSIVE IN NAME

NEW YORK, May 17 (Canadian Press). — Many progressive movements of the day are only progressive in name, and underneath show plainly their Socialistic origin. Ben. W. Hooper, chairman of the United States Labour Board, declared here last night before the National Association of Manufacturers.

"There are lots of wild-eyed Radicals and demagogues who believe they can sell any kind of idea to people by labelling 'progressive,'" he said.

We all like that word "progressive," but it will pay to take a good look at political wares that are brought around bearing our favourite label.

He described Socialism as an "insidious cult," standing at the elbow of every man who harbours an individual grouch or class grievance, real or imaginary, and whispering into his ear distrust, suspicion, and bitterness against institutions of his country.

SEEDING IS LATE

WINNIPEG, May 17—(Canadian Press).—While seeding is later this year than generally, there is little anxiety owing to the shortening of the growing season through the substitution of Marquis for Red Fife wheat, according to the first crop report issued yesterday by George Batho, of the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

The wheat acreage will be slightly decreased but there will be an increase in the amount of oats and barley sown.

HYDRO PARTY MAY CONTEST ELECTION

Executive Meeting on Friday May Change Fortunes of Old Parties.

TORONTO, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—Mayor Maguire, president of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, which is a union of all municipalities involved in Hydro lighting power, has arranged for a meeting of the executive of this association to be held in the city on Friday. Decisions reached at this meeting may have a great effect on the forthcoming Provincial election and may change the fortunes of more than one political party. In some quarters it is felt that this meeting will see, if not the birth at least the christening of the Hydro party.

While no official statement has been made, it is generally known that most members of the executive favor a vigorous intrusion of the Hydro party into the forthcoming election. They have been watching with intense interest the preliminary political skirmishes. They have been disappointed because no political leader has so far made a definite pronouncement of the policy on Hydro matters.

YOUNG WOMAN SLAIN WHEN LOVERS STRUGGLE

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 17.—(Canadian Press.)— Struggling to prevent her sweetheart from killing himself, according to his story to the police, Miss Ruth Johnson, aged 25, was shot and killed by four bullets from a pistol held by Arthur George Sunberg, aged 31, yesterday, while scores of people watched the tragedy on the lawn of the Sundberg home. Sundberg, who faces the charge of murder, stated that he intended to shoot himself and that the girl followed him out, and in the struggle the pistol was discharged. When he saw her on the ground he ran back upstairs and tried to kill himself but the pistol would not work.

CHAMP WON ALL ROUNDS PADGETT FLOORED TWICE

CHICAGO, May 17 (Canadian Press). — Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, floored Cowboy Padget twice in ten rounds here last night, but could not knock him out. It was the first time, however, that Padgett had been knocked off his feet in 150 contests.

Walker won every round.

PLACE RAILWAY UNDER PROTECTION OF POWERS

HONOLULU, May 17. — (United Press).—The senior members of the diplomatic corps at Peking proposed on Wednesday to China that the Tien-Tsin-Foo-Chow Railway be placed under the protection of the United States and Great Britain.

This latest development is a means of protecting foreigners from the Chinese bandits, one company of which is holsring foreigners captives which told of in a despatch from Tokio on Wednesday night to Jiji, a local Japanese language newspaper.

INSULIN IS SOVEREIGN IN TREATMENT DIABETES

NEW YORK, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—The exhibition of case after case of persons afflicted with diabetes who have been restored to normal health by Dr. A. I. Ringer at a clinic held in Montefiore Hospital, has revealed in detail the use, manipulation and efficacy of insulin.

"No one need die to-day who is suffering from diabetes," he declared. "I do not know of any drug upon the efficacy of which one can depend with such surety as one can upon insulin."

INCOME TAX RETURNS MUST BE COMPLETED

Income tax returns are again causing trouble, but this time in the municipal ranks. It is pointed out that any person to whom a form is sent must return it whether he is liable for income tax or not.

Some think that because their incomes are not liable to taxation they need not return the forms, but it is equally necessary to have the form completed in that case as where income is taxable.

ROMANCE OF EARL AND PETITE CABARET DANCER

NEW YORK, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—The Earl of Northesk, who won the promise of marriage from Jessica Brown, cabaret dancer, because she thought him a "regular fellow," arrived here yesterday on the Olympic, hoping for an early wedding with the "grandest girl in the world."

Jessica, who met the young Earl while fulfilling a dancing engagement in London, and returned to her home in Buffalo in March to prepare for a "gorgeous wedding," met him at the gang plank all a-flutter.

She jumped into his arms and he kissed her. They then entered a taxi and drove away.

FEAR ANOTHER EUROPEAN WAR

Report That British Officers in Turkey Have Been Requested to Cancel Social Engagements

LAUSANNE, May 17.— (United Press.) — Renewal of the Turco-Greek war, involving Serbians as an ally of Greece and Bulgaria as an ally of Turkey, is threatening such a Balkan conflagration, it is feared as might precipitate another general European conflict.

The Greek delegates threaten to leave the Near East peace conference here to-morrow unless the Turks forego their claim to reparations and at the same time the Athens government is threatening to send troops across the Maritza river into territory held by the Turks.

According to a Turkish communique two Greek submarines attempted to approach north of Dikela, but were forced to withdraw. Officials of the British General Headquarters at Constantinople met to consider the situation.

There is also an unconfirmed report that British officers in Turkey have been requested to cancel their social engagements.

ITALY'S NEED IS TO BALANCE HER FINANCES

Premier Mussolini in Interview Says Deficit of 3,000,000,000 Lire Must Be Cut to Zero—Premier Is a Genius.

Personal Magnetism.

By William Philip Simms

ROME, May 17. — Interviewing the man who hypnotized forty million people would seem a difficult job. It wasn't. Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy is the easiest man to interview —once you get to him—in Europe.

It is easy because he answers questions. Most Latins—most Europeans—beat the devil about the bush. Mussolini comes right back at you.

"Eh bien!" he exclaimed, drilling me with his enormous hypnotic eyes as we sat facing each other across his desk in Chigi Palace—the Italian foreign office. His tone said as plainly as had he used the word:

"Shoot!"

"The world is full of trouble." I said as an opener. "What is Italy's

"Done!" Mussolini exploded, the word which indicated he was about to unlimber coming across the desk at me like a cannon ball. "Six months ago Italy's chief trouble was that she needed order. Now she has it."

His words came in jerks, about six at a time, like bursts from a machine gun.

Finances Problem

"To-day," he went on in perfect French each word bell-clear despite the fact he is the son of a blacksmith, a "self-made" man, and has taught himself pretty much all he knows. "To-day's Italy's greatest need is to get her finances in order—to balance her budget. Three years ago there was a deficit of 20,000,000,000 lira. We have cut it to 3,000,000,000. We must cut it to zero Voila!"

"When will you reach that zero " I asked.

"That does not depend entirely on Italy. If Europe quits making trouble, soon. If not, I can not say."

"What the matter with Europe?"

"Mainly two thinngs,' Mussolini shot back much like a tennis player volleys back his opponent's ball. "Russia is one. Germany is the other. Russia is just a big hole —a void—in the world. Nothing there but literature — phrases Germany is a block in the road.

"These two countries may be considered as one obstacle, for they are working together —one supports the other. Europe's economic ill can not be corrected until the void is filled and the block removed from the road. That means reparations must be settled. Germany must pay."

Conferences? No!

"How is this to be brought about —by conference?"

"No. Conference, don't settle anything. All they do at one conference is to agree to have another. The patient is very sick. The doctors confer but the patient gets no better.

"No. The interested nations must agree one with the other—first two, then three, then four and so on, until a general agreement is reached."

"What about the opposition to the Fascisti party which has just resulted in four resignations of cabinet members being handed in to you?"

"What opposition?" snapped the premier as if he did not understand. "You mean in the Popular party? Over with. Finished.

"ave you no fear of a reaction setting in— a return to the old days and parties as they were before your march on Rome "

"Old Parties Dead"

"Not the slightest. All the old parties are dead, their ashes scattered. The rest have been absorbed by us. To-morrow you will see. The streets of Rome will show you why I do not fear a reaction. The people are with me and then there are 160,000 'Black Shirts'—Fascisti soldiers These are mine. They belong to me."

For a few minutes we talked of people — European personalities Lenin was a menace. Kemal Pasha quite a figure. Chancellor Cuno "was to be reckoned with. He's a business man." Lloyd George 'writes too much."

Then I put the question —the one question —I most wanted to ask. This new Italian leader, virtually dictator, who holds Italy in the hollow of his hand, seems to wield some sort of supernatural influence over the 40,000,000 people of his country His great, black, wide-open and staring Svengali-like eyes gave him the air of a hypnotist.

Force, Faith—Eyes

"You seem to have some strange hold on the people of Italy," I said. "To what do you attribute your power?" I asked the question deliberately. I wanted to see how he would take it.

Mussolini smiled. He had risen and come around to my side of the desk. Now he took a step forward until we stood face to face, very close, his piercing eyes stabbing directly into mine.

"That is one of the mysteries" he said enigmatically.

"Personal magnetism," suggested his chef de cabinet, smiling also.

"People," said Mussolini, "really love force. They love to be commanded. They love a leader. They love courage and they love unselfishness. When there is work to be done and a man of courage does it and without personal gain to himself, people will follow him anywhere."

"Then," I replied "there isn't such a mystery after all."

"But first,' he concluded, ignoring my remark, "you must be as hard on yourself as you are on others. To have discipline you must first discipline yourself. I am very hard on myself."

One thing is certain. Part of Mussolini's power comes from his absolute faith in his own star. He is the most self-confident man I have ever seen. In his lexicon there is no such word as fail.

Only time can tell whether Europe has another Napoleon or just a most interesting meteor trailing across the sky.

The Canadian Home of "Big Ben" an Ideal Factory

Phenomenal Progress of the Western Clock Co. in a Few Years since Locating in Peterboro Places It in the First Rank of City's Manufacturies—Consideration of Employees' Welfare Shown—Staff Almost Entirely From Peterboro.

FROM A LITTLE SUITE of rooms in the Barrie Building to a modern four-storey factory surmounting Armour's Hill has been the phenomenal growth of the Western Clock Company in a little less than four years.

None of Peterborough's industries has expanded and advanced so rapidly as this.

From comparative obscurity to a strong position among the first rank of the city's manufacturies, from a mere handful of employees to a payroll that is lengthening out past the hundred mark, from a cautious hopeful venture to flourishing fulfilment, and all in three years, Big Ben has bounded ahead with such prodigious strides that it seems to have missed the first tardy milestones on the highroad of industrial progress.

In October, 1919, the Western Clock Company began operations as a small assembling plant in the Barrie Building. They came here asking no favors, and had chosen Peterboro as the future home of "Big Ben," after a careful survey of the leading industrial centres of this province. By the end of that year they were forced by their increasing business to seek larger quarters, and at once bought the building of the Canadian Chicle Company on George Street south. In two years they had outgrown those premises and in December 1922, moved into their own new factory at the corner of Hunter Street and Armour Road.

Early in 1922 the staff of employees had reached the total of eighty, and with every department cramped the company decided to erect their own permanent plant, equipping it specially for their own requirements and incorporating in it the latest and most improved methods and facilities for the manufacture of clocks and watches as successfully adopted in the parent plant in La Salle, Illinois. In some instances this machinery and plant features bore the stamp of Westclox invention.

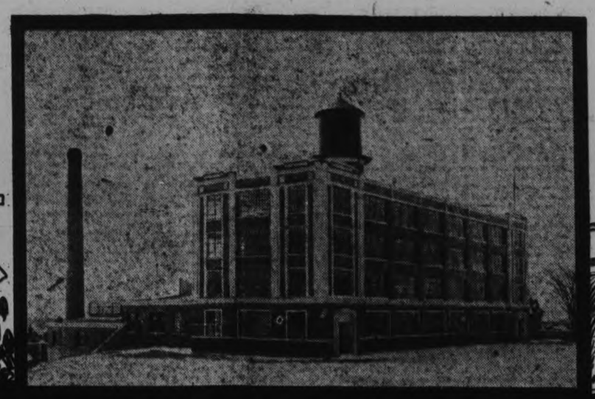
Advantages of Sight

Again the company made their own selection of property and surprised the public by buying the hilltop property on the south side of Hunter Street east, between the King George school and the famous Lift Lock on the Trent Canal. The advantages this place afforded were chiefly the absence of vibration and the freedom from dampness which, in the heart of the city, tended to affect the delicate adjustment and regulation of the company's products of clocks and watches. The only concession asked of the city was a fixed assessment for ten years.

The factory was constructed in 1922, and was occupied in the last week of December. Since then the number of employees has exceeded one hundred, gradually increasing with the demands of production. Business has been exceptionally good, and has been largely stimulated by the aggressive policy of the sales department. At the beginning of this year the Western Clock Company determined upon a certain gross output which they proceeded to manufacture whether or not they sold the entire quantity during the year. This forehandedness was quickly rewarded by a mounting demand, until at the present time the output in most lines is oversold for six months.

Work is Steady

This policy of production on the basis of a yearly schedule means steady work the year round for the employees. There are no periods of feast and famine, of flurries and calm, in so far as the staff of the Western Clock Company is concerned. The probabilities for this year indicate a continued growth as new processes are added from time to time.



THE PAYROLL of the Western Clock Company contained 128 names this week, an increase of twenty-five in two months. This addition was caused by the commencement of new operations which the new and larger quarters with the ideal manufacturing facilities enable the company to start.

Mr. John H. Vernor is the factory superintendent, and it is a matter of satisfaction to him as it will also be of pride to the citizens that the employees have been almost entirely drawn from Peterborough's population.

Only four of the present staff came from the parent plant, including Mr. Vernor; Mr. O. A. De Graw, sales manager, Mr. R. H. Simmons, foreman, and Miss Emma Wolf, who is the instructress in charge of the vibrating department.

This expansion plainly indicates the valuable contribution the Western Clock Company has made in the recent development of Peterborough, and the new opportunities it has afforded so many men and women of employment under unusually congenial surroundings and conditions.

WHERE WESTCLOX ARE MADE

TOP—Exterior, showing the north and east faces of the main building taken from the Lift Lock hill looking toward the southwest. The plating and buffing annex and the boiler room are shown. This view brings out the pleasing architecture and also the broadsides of windows that flood the floors with light.

CENTRE LEFT—A corner of the press department. The heavy presses could not be included in this picture which shows the foot presses on the ground floor.

CENTRE RIGHT—The plating room. Note the slats in the floor under the vats. Underneath are troughs lined with asphalt which drain off the liquid that drips from the parts after they have been dipped. This provides a dry floor for the employees. This floor construction of drainage is a feature that has been developed by the Western Clock Company. Exhaust pipes over the vats carry off fumes. The drying rooms are seen beyond.

LOWER RIGHT—Rows of clocks on the final test racks. Imagine hundreds of Big Bens and other Bens incessantly tick-ticking, a metallic rustling that forms the tait motif of the factory sounds in the southwest section of the third storey.

The site of the new Westclox factory on the south shoulder of Armour's hill, the highest in Peterborough, inspires the visitor to rhapsodize under the spell of the enchanting prospect of lake and river and patches of woodland. And as one gazes from the entrance of the imposing new Canadian home of "Big Ben" around the sweeping countryside his roving fancy is intrigued by the visual range from the broadsides of windows, especially on the third and fourth floors, and finally conjures upon the telescopic view from the platform of the water tower's dizzy height.

Ideals in Practice

This breadth of vision afforded by the new Westclox location undergoes a change from the literal to the figurative sense as the visitor enters the building and discovers in the arrangement of the plant, its facilities for production, its room for expansion, and its conveniences for the employees, unmistakable evidences of an idealism that sharpens the first impression suggested by the site itself. In every respect the Western Clock Company have made good their promises to the citizens of Peterborough when they first announced their plans for a new establishment.

The fifteen acres at the southeast corner of Hunter Street and Armour Road were selected and purchased by the company because of their ideal surroundings and pleasant conditions. The new home of Big Ben and his increasing progeny, including Baby Ben, Glo-Ben and the other latest additions to the Westclox family, comprisesthree buildings: the main factory, 50 feet by 160 feet, four storeys; the plating and buffing building, 40 feet by 80 feet, and the boiler house, 40 feet by 50 feet.

Dignified Architecture

The construction is of the flat slab type of reinforced concrete, faced with red brick and artificial stone trimmings. The stone coping which effectively lends a pleasing ornamental touch to the exterior has been carried around all sides of the building, rear as well as front, presenting an attractive appearance from the street approaches and also from the Trent canal below the Lift Lock. Not only is there an air of solidity and permanence about the place and a dignified beauty, but there is also a sense of spaciousness created by the deep setting from the street line, leaving an expansive front of ground that invites sodding and evokes a picture of wide enhancing lawn with flower beds and perhaps a terrace trailing down to the lower level behind.

In the order and arrangement of their departments the Western Clock Company closely follow the modern and natural system of production, adapted to their own problems, the parts being prepared on the first and second floors and assembled on the third; moving from one erective process to the next, through the regulating racks and emerging in completed form for a final performance test after which they are ready for the market and service.

The Press Department

The ground floor is gradually orienting to the new location and the changed conditions. Here are the heavier power and foot presses with available room for others which the increasing business will presently require; also the storage quarters for incoming stock and outgoing shipments. Incidentally the plating and buffing departments in their separate building are connected to the main factory from this floor.

On the second storey are the offices, tool-room, a big miscellaneous department of die-casters, also lavatories, washroom and lockers. Standard sanitary equipment with hot and cold water, tissue towels and steel lockers for the employees' wraps are noteworthy features in the personal accommodation that is provided.

In the mechanical section a die-caster, electrically controlled, functions like the linotype machines in a newspaper plant. The die-caster, however, is more delicate and must operate correctly to one ten-thousandth of an inch. Instead of casting a slug or line of type, this machine brings six piano wires into contact with a wheel of a watch sets them solidly and exactly in place as lantern pinions in a metal base at the centre of the wheel, snips the wires, and draws them through in readiness for the next wheel.

The foot presses which stamp out various parts that enter into the inner mysteries of the mechanism of Big Ben and the lesser Bens are all equipped with safety devices which operate on the simple, protective, fool-proof principle that each hand of the operator must have something essential to do at the moment when the machine is tripped. Some of these attachments are Western Clock Company patents, and were invented to safeguard fingers and hands tending the machines.

Plating and Buffing

The plating and buffing departments incorporate the Westclox ideals and ideas of factory efficiency and comfort. They are located under their own roof to the south of the main building, but are practically brought within it by the big, airy enclosed passage-way through which shop traffic ebbs and flows, outbound with Big Ben parts dark and dull, and perhaps scratched as they came from the presses, and returning burnished with the brightness of coins fresh from the mint.

In many respects this buffing or polishing room is unlike most of its kind. There are no belts and shafting. Each buffing lathe, rotating at a speed of 3,600 revolutions a minute, is set on the end of the shaft of its own individual motor which is boxed from view. The buffing wheel is close-hooded by an arm from a suction pipe which carries outside the fine metallic dust thrown off in the process. One of the objectionable features of buffing which excludes it from the white-collared occupations is thereby eliminated, and the air in the room is free of the minute particles that would otherwise permeate it. Not only is the air kept pure and wholesome for the employees of this department and its companion, the plating section, but they have their own private lavatory and washroom, including shower baths which have been recently connected and will be particularly acceptable to them in the warm weather.

The steel gongs which also serve as Big Ben's voice pass through the buffers' hands after they have been stamped. Abrasions are smoothed off and the surface is polished in readiness for the platers who give the gong the gleaming nickel finish that seems to soften its morning summons. In its special features the plating room is the only one of its kind in this country. It was designed by the Western Clock Company with the special purpose of preventing foot troubles that attack men who work on wet floors. The floor in the plating department at the Westclox factory is entirely of slats beneath which are troughs that drain off the water into a tunnel that extends under the entire length of the building. Nickel plating is the main operation in this department. Another room off it houses the lacquer department with its sweet, pungent odor. All the brass parts of Westclox are lacquered and dried to prevent tarnishing. Ovens have been installed for the drying process.

The Tool Room

The tool-room is one of the brightest machine shops in the city, flooded with light and air and looking out upon the pleasant countryside and fringes of the city. Electric furnaces for the heat treatment of steel which have not yet come into general use are a feature of this department. The company does all its own tool and die making. The machines are all new, and driven by individual motors.

Assembling Movements

The assembling and erection of the movements of the clock and watches are conspicuous operations on the third floor. The movement of a clock or a watch is its whole interior economy of wheels and springs and levers which comprise the functioning vitals. Lacquered parts are fitted together, adjustments made, the main spring set in place, and the whole works are solidly enclosed in a skeleton brass frame. Next they are tuned up by expert employees. Springs are set in proper alignment and other fine adjustments are made. The movements are then arrayed on the regulating racks, which appear to be nothing more than an arrangement of shelves in tall cabinets, each cabinet having a capacity of 240 movements. On these racks the movements are automatically started at the same instant. If any of them lose five minutes in 24 hours they are sent back to the employees who erected them, as shown on attached tags that bear the operators' names. If there are some that are erratic in their behavior under this tes they are sent back to be dismantled and reconstructed.

The movements that pass this first performance test are then advanced for further finishing touches. The hands that had been temporarily affixed as indicators during the inspection on the regulating racks are removed. Big Ben then begins to assume the features and lineaments that have made him familiar and famous all over the world. The big, open, honest face is set in position, then the hands, and gradually the clock emerges in its nickelled case ready for the final severe test as a serviceable time-keeper. Rows of Big Bens are placed on shelves, are wound up and set going, lined up for inspection as to accuracy as chronometers. They are run for a week and any of them that lose two minutes a day are set aside for re-examination. The others pass on to the select company of finished products. Price tags are attached to them and they are boxed ready for shipment.

Soft Sibilant Symphony

In that final stage of inspection the row upon row of clocks of all the well known Westclox varieties tick-tick incessantly in a soft, metallic symphony that greets the visitor rather pleasantly. They are of the quick train type of clocks with lever escapement, animated by their springs, and vocalized by the steel gong that constitutes th reverse face, a veritable master's voice in its matutinal call to millions, a musical summons that shatters the most grateful dreams and rends the soundest sleep that knits up the raveled sleeve of care.

The Heating System

A vacuum pump attached to the heating system is one of the novelties of the boiler room. Incidentally the two large boilers in the lofty room have a heating capacity for a factory twice the size of the present group of Westclox buildings. The vacuum pump which automatically drains the condensed water from the steam coils through the heating systems explains the fact that the pressure on the one boiler which was in use all winter never exceeded four pounds on the gauge even when the thermometer dipped to its lowest level.

As the steam circulating through the coils and radiating heat condenses the water is pumped into the tank of the little vacuum unit. As the tank fills with water a floating valve automatically starts another pump which returns the water to the boiler of the furnace, where in turn it is again transformed into steam and shot into the heating coils. The electrically operated vacuum pump saves the coal bill by reducing the work of the furnace. Instead of a head of steam sufficient to force the water back into the boiler, the vacuum pump steps in and draws off the water, working automatically all around the clock.

The coal bunkers are built into the slope of the hill, permitting the coal to be unloaded by gravity from outside, and reducing labor to the minimum of simply shoveling from the bins into the furnace. Above the factory a hundred foot smoke stack thrusts its slender length in opposition to the soaring height of the standard upon which rests the water tower.

Safety Devices

Safety devices have been adapted to the plant wherever possible. Belts are completely boxed, and the ceilings, especially on the ground floor, were equipped with inserts for setting up motors for new machinery that may be installed from time to time. Some of these are already in use with the belts from motors reaching down to the machines.

The entire plant is equipped with sprinklers which automatically burst when the temperature of the room exceeds 160 degrees, thus extinguishing a fire. The tank on the tower provides twice the capacity required for such purposes.

Rewarding Employees

Among policies inaugurated by the Westclox Company in the interest of their employees was group insurance whereby every employee is insured without cost to himself for an amount equal to one year's earnings. In 1920 it was decided to give vacations with pay. Each employee who has been on the payroll continuously for five years receives one week with full pay, and those with ten years' continuous service, two weeks with full pay. In 1922 an old age pension plan was adopted, but the details have not yet been made public, although it was announced that some $300,000 has been set aside for this purpose.

TUNNEL UNDER FACTORY FOR MAINS AND CONDUITS

THE BASEMENT under the main building has been narrowed down to a mere tunnel, six feet high, six feet wide, and slightly more than 300 feet long. Its floor and walls are of concrete, and its chief service is for the enclosure of gas and water mains, electric conduits and the return pipes of the heating system. It also carries the drainage pipes from the plating department, and in the accessibility of these conduits and pipes the tunnel has already proved its convenience and economic value.

BIG BEN'S PROGENY

THE Westclox family includes the following members: Big Ben himself; Baby Ben, one-quarter his size; Sleep-Meter, medium priced; America, one of the most popular low-priced nickel alarms on the market.

Jack O'Lantern, the darker it is the brighter he glows; the same applies to the Luminous Baby Ben.

Locket Ben, the Westclox Watch, and his nocturnal counterpart, Glo-Ben. The glow lasts for years.

WISDOM OF SOLOMON.

NEW YORK, May 16.—(By Canadian Press)—A case requiring the wisdom of Solomon came up in Yorkville Court when Mrs. Anna O'Connor and Mrs. Rose Cohen appeared before Magistrate Sweetser each claiming ownership of a Pomeranian pup, which was also present.

"Stand over there, Mrs.Cohen," ordered the magistrate, "and call it."

Mrs. Cohen called "Bebe." The pup ran to her joyfully.

Mrs. O'Connor was then given a similar chance. She called "Trixie" The pup again responded joyfully.

Then the animal romped to Magistrate Sweetser whether he called it Bebe or Trixie. In desperation the judg put Mrs. Cohen on one side of the court and Mrs. O'Connor on the other with the pup in the centre.

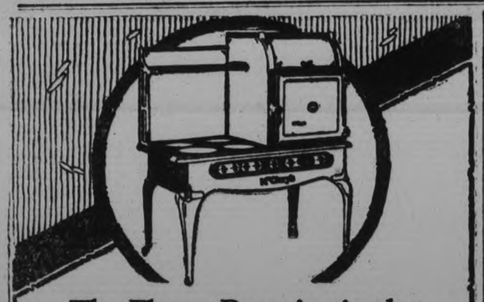
"Go!" he thundered.

The pup ran to Mrs. Cohen, so she was allowed to keep it.

ENGLISH JAILS OPEN FOR DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS

LONDON, May 17.—(Associated Press).—What happens to the people in England who do not pay their income tax, has been told by an official of the Inland Revenue, who declares there are about 1,000 such delinquents now in jail compared with 1,162 two years ago.

Plenty of time is given by the authorities for payment ,said this official, and in cases where it can be shown that funds are not available, easy methods are devised. In other cases, after a certain interval, a notice is sent to the defaulter that the tax must be remitted by a certain date—usually ten days time. If that is disregarded a more urgent notice is sent, and three days grace given. After that a distress warrant against the defaulter's goods is obtained. Those who are imprisoned for default are generally single, or have no seizable property of their own.



The Flavor Remains in the Cooking

To know the real flavor of a roast you must have it cooked in a McClary's Electric Oven.

McClary's Oven seals tight when the door is closed, preventing rapid evaporation and retaining all the delicious flavor in the cooking.

Not only is the flavor better, but there is less shrinkage in weight, a considerable economy.

Clean as a China Dish inside, McClary's oven is porcelain enameled. The walls are seamless and rounded at the corners. Remove the heating elements (they slide out easily), and the oven is clean and easy to clean.

Ask McClary's Dealer to explain the economies and convenience of McClary's Electric Range.

The Protected Element

The Protected Element is as solid as a stove lid. No wire coils are exposed. In this feature McClary's have achieved the aim of all electric range makers—to perfect a protected element. Recognize it by its reddish color—and name, McClary's. 113

QUIZ CORNER

THE CANADIAN MATTERHORN.

Q—Which is the Canadian Matterhorn?

A—Mount Assiniboine, in the Canadian Rockies, thirty miles south of Banff, is called the Canadian Matterhorn from its similar configuration in its great towering snow clad peak over 11,000 feet high and its difficulty of access.

CANADA'S TREES.

Q—How many different kinds of trees are there in Canada?

A—Canada has approximately 150 different species and varieties of plants reaching tree size. Only 31 are niferous, but the wood of these make up 95 per cent of the country's forest products and the trees themselves cover even a larger proportion of the potential forest area.

CANADA'S LEADING TELEPHONE CITY.

Q—Which is Canada's leading telephone city?

A—Calgary is Canada's leading telephone city with one instrument in use to every 4.10 persons. No less than 32,000 directories are issued.

CANADA'S IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY.

Q—What is the extent of Canada's iron and steel industry?

A—$650,000,000 is invested in Canada's iron and steel industry with an equal annual production value. From 1870 to 1920 without any marked increase in the number of iron and steel plants, there was an invested capital increase from $9,000,0000 to 642,000,000 and from $28,000,000 to 640,000,000 in production.

CROP REPORT

Following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Fall wheat and clover have been helped by the rain and snow which fell during the week, and both these crops look more promising than they did a few weeks ago. In some countries, however, a number of wheat fields have been plowed up and resown to spring grains. Waterloo states that about fifty per cent of the area sown has been so treated.

The cold wet weather of the latter part of the week has prevented much work being done on the land, and has considerably checked growth. Some injury has been done to tender plants by frost, but not to a serious degree.

Live stock turned out to pasture has not done very well, as the growth of grass has been very slow so far.

Prince Edward: It is reported that cherry blossoms suffered from winter injury. Indication is for heavy orchard bloom. Increased interest in spraying as evidenced by the amount of spray materials and equipment purchased and inquiries made. A large acreage of early potatoes will be planted, and a larger area for roots to supplement feeds. Snow and cold have delayed growth of tomatoes in hotbeds which had to be protected.

Kent: The extensive onion marshes in the Erie district have been seeded, but owing to the dry weather, and also to the fact that some poor seed was sown by the growers, it was necessary to reseed in a number of cases.

Waterloo: Cattle are being shipped out every day. A good many of these are good, but a lot of them do not go over 1200 mark.

North Simcoe: Several car loads of hay have been shipped out recently at prices varying from $13 to $14 per ton for baled hay. Loose hay is being bought by some farmers at $15.

South Simcoe: There was comparatively light shipment from this county this week. A number of choice butcher steers brought $7 per cwt. at point of shipment, while $10.50 per cwt. was paid for hogs on the thick-smooth basis. The percentage lamb crop this spring is higher than usual several reports having been received of 200% at birth in the smaller flocks, although fatalities later have been larger than average, a number of the lambs being quite weak from the start.

Most of the cheese factories are operating, but a larger number of farmers are shipping their cream to the cities, and are using the skim milk for raising of their young stock.

The Farmer's Dairy is paying $1.60 for 3.3 p.c. milk at the stand for April. The Belleville Creamery paid 31c per lb butter fat for the last half of April.

There is a fairly good flow of milk coming into the cheese factories. Local creameries, although receiving a good supply, are not getting the same amount of milk as last year. Butterfat is 31c per lb. The outlook for cheese factories is much better than in 1922. Small pigs are selling from $10 to $12 a pair, according to size and age.

There is a steady growth yearly in the dairy industry in the county of Lambton. Our larger creameries are making further improvements and extensions to take care of their growing trade.

A great number of sheep in the county of Halton have not yet been shorn. This I should think will interfere with our dipping demonstration schedule for the latter part of May.

Farmers in Elgin are beginning to call for wool sacks and I look for a considerable increase in the number of shippers through the Co-operative Association this year. Most breeders have had good success with the lambs.

Oxford: Egg circles have had the biggest week in the year, over 6,000 doz. coming into the Woodstock circle last week.

Lambton: There is a demand for farm labor at wages of from $25 to $35 per month, according to experience. Nine Hebdrideans and four Hollanders, farm laborers, were placed during the week.

South Simcoe: While excellent results have been obtained, in general in the placing of immigrants, through the Department of Colonization, there are still many applications for farm help yet unfilled.

Victoria: Immigrants in arriving this season have helped considerably in solving this problem. Reports so far are quite favorable regarding this class of help.

Gold Reserve of the Dominion Increased.

OTTAWA, May 17.—(Canadian Press).—There was again a small increase in the gold reserve behind Dominion notes during the month of April. At the end of that month the percentage of gold to notes stood at 52.57 which is the highest since January. In the opening month of the calendar year the gold percentage reached 54.7 the maximum since the war, but it has been sinking since then and last month was 51.7. The increase in the gold percentage during April was in part due to a rise in the amount of gold held, but more to a falling off in the amount of notes and currency outstanding. The total note and currency out-standing at the end of April was $239,365,450 as compared with $242,657,765 at the end of the fiscal year; while the value of gold held was $125,812,160 against these notes at the end of April as against $125,650,245 a month earlier.

SHRINE OF THE DEMOCRACY

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(United Perss.)— A campaign will soon be opened to make a second Mt. Vernon of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence and third president of the United States. Richmond, Washington and New York organizations are seeking a fund of $1,000,000 to purchase the property and make permanent a fund for its care.

Jefferson built the mansion on a mountain top near Charlottesville, Va., and the building looks much today as it did when Lafayette and Daniel Webster were there as guests of the founder of the Democratic party. It is a brick mansion with white pillars, cornices and balustrades surmounted by a dome, standing in the midst of a lawn overlooking river, woodlands and fertile valley ,with a view of mountains.

Congress may stop sending out free seeds. It seems they do not raise enough votes.

BANK STOPS PAYMENT.

LONDON, May 17 (Canadian Press Cable). — Some concern is being felt in Glasgow owing to the Mercantile Bank of Scotland, Ltd., suspending payment.

CONCRETE HIGHWAYS pay for themselves

DO you realize all that "building roads for permanence" means to your community, your province and your country? You cannot fully understand how great is the need for the permanent road until you accept the big truth that Concrete Highways pay for themselves.

Mr. Fred R. White, Chief Engineer of the Iowa State Highway Commission in an address before the State Convention of County Supervisors held in Dubuque in August last, says:—

"$803 per mile was the average maintenance cost of the old style road in Story County in 1921 as against $89 per mile on concrete roads in the same County, a saving of $714 per mile.

"Figuring traffic census count together with proven difference of tractive resistance as between a concrete pavement and the old style road, the fact was established that concrete meant a yearly saving in fuel consumption on motor vehicles using concrete roads, of $1,746 a mile.

"Adding this $1,746 saved on fuel to the $714 saved on maintenance, we find an annual saving on concrete of $2,460 per mile per year.

"Figuring the concrete pavement at the then-prevailing prices for labor and material, it was found that the interest charges figured at $660 which sum deducted from the $2,460 leaves an average saving of $1,800 per mile per year. Applying this on the cost of the road—$26,400 a mile—it is readily seen that the saving would pay for the road in fifteen years."

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. J.D.W. writes:

Some time ago you kindly gave me some information and I want a little more of your good advice.

The baby will be a year old this month. I have been putting her to bed at 8 and she sleeps through until 7 or 8. Could I start to train her for an earlier bed hour as now she seems to get drowsy by 7. What is the proper bed hour for her age?

Answer

If she is fed at 7, 11, 3 and 7 her bed hour would come naturally after the last feeding. Personally I think 6:30 is late enough for most babies of that age to be stowed away for the night. It's all a habit and an hour more makes little difference to children, that is they are not old enough yet to clamor to stay up later.

Betty D., writes:

I always read you column and receive good advice. My baby is 1 year old and weighs twenty pounds. She seems to be in good health. Is she the right weight for her age? She sleeps well at night, also three naps a day.

I give her a poached egg and cereal in the morning, orange or prune juice at 10:30 bottle of four ounces of milk and four of water, and at 4 again half milk and half water with water three or four times between meals. It seems as if she should take milk without so much diluting, but it makes her bowels run She is also wet most of the time. She has gained four pounds since I weaned her in February. Please give me some advice about this.

Answer

The baby is getting too much water, four ounces in every feeding besides the contents of the milk and then water besides, there is really no reason why she wouldn't be wet most of the time. This doesn't mean any trouble with the kidneys as you seem to fear.

The formula now should be about six ounces of milk to two of water Increase this gradually. Feed her four times a day and send for these ages, sending a self-addressed stamped envelope for it. Please.

Don't give but two ounces of water additional in the whole day, then I feel sure you will notice an improvement.

The baby is the average weight.

TORONTO PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO A LOCAL ARTIST

Dorothy Allan Park Achieves Brilliant Success at Closing Concert of Toronto Conservatory

At the Closing Concert of the Toronto Conservatory of Music on Tuesday Evening, Dorothy Allan Park scored a remarkable triumph.

Mrs. Park's splendid voice and artistry are always a delight to her audiences, but the reports of Toronto musical critics bring a realisation of the remarkable success she is achieving under the tutelage of Mr. Dalton Baker, who has come to be recognized as the premier singing master of the Dominion.

The following criticisms are taken from Toronto papers of yesterday:

Mr. Augustus Bridle, the well-known musical critic, writing in the "Star" says:

"Three English songs were sung by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park of Peterborough with commanding impressiveness and a voice of big dimensions, rich in the lower register, brilliant in the high notes, and with a wonderful crispness of dramatic enunciation derived from the speech method in singing. As Mr. Dalton Baker, her teacher—and accompanist—is leaving the city, it can be no advertisement for him to say here that all his pupils have a remarkable ability to "elocute" sensibly when they sing."

The critic of the "Telegram" says: "Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, pupil of Mr. Dalton Baker, sang a group of three English songs. She has a rich, dark coloured voice of mezzo-soprano quality, with contralto beauty in the lower register. Her singing throughout had a stately charm that the songs revealed excellently, The breadth and dignity of her interpretation had fitting counterpart in the melodic beauty of her sustained phrases. It was singing that you could delight in. They were beautful English songs, beautifully enunciated, and doubly welcome as such."

Particular commendation was also received from Dr. A. S. Vogt, Principal of the Toronto Conservatory, and also from Dr. Healey Willan, Vice-Principal

The songs Mrs. Park sang were: Old English (arr. by Arthur Somervell, "You Lovers All."

Sir Edward Elgar, "The Shepherd's Song."

John Pointer, "How Shall I Sing That Majesty."

MUSSOLINI HAS SAVED HIS KING AND COUNTRY

STAYED REVOLUTION

(By William Philip Simms.)

ROME, May 17. — Call him a Svengali, a hypnotist, an egotist, a dictator, what you will, but Benito Mussolini has saved Italy and he has saved King Victor Emmanuel III.

Some call this son of a blacksmith ,now premier and dictator of Italy, a Napoleon. Some call him a bluff. But to-day, after several months' trial ,none denies he has done a good job.

But for this bold "upstart," as his enemies call him, this man who once dug ditches in Lausanne, Switzerland, for a meal-ticket, Italy today would very probably be in Russia's stakes and Victor Emmanuel just another king in exile .

How Fascismo Started.

Briefly, here's the who, what and why of it:

After the war Italy started to go to pieces. Class hatreds sprang to life. Unemployment became a menace. Prices were high and money was scarce. Bolshevism menaced the country and a communist revolution seemed impending. Disorder was everywhere.

The Italian government seemed powerless. It did nothing, or very little, to set things to rights. There was an enormous deficit in the budget with which the cabinet seemed unable to cope.

From the Italian point of view the government's foreign policy was supine. Stagnation at home and abroad. The country seemed slowly drifting to its doom.

Demobilized Army Rallied.

About this time, in Milan, the blacksmith's son, Mussolini—now by sheer hard work and self-education the editor of small newspaper called the "Popolo d'Italia," founded the first "Fasci."

These Fasci spread all over the country, largely made up of ex-officers and demobilized soldiers. Hundreds of thousands of men were soon enrolled under the Fascist banner.

The big idea behind the movement was to fight the "negative," to combat the lethargy which had settled down over those who otherwise should have been leading the country, and at the same time to check the rise to power of the lawless element, daily growing bolder.

Now Mussolini, with "all the Fasci" at his back, called Rome to task. Rome laughed. Rome had not the slightest idea of the power at Mussolini's beck and call—the power of hundreds of thousands of plain but determined, citizens intent upon one thing, that neither a do-nothing, weakling government nor a bunch of communists and anarchists should ruin theeir beloved country.

Mussolini Prepared.

But Mussolini was ready. His "Black Shirt' 'army had been thoroughly organized—infantry, cavalry, aviation, medical ,ambulance and all, including even the 'women's corps—and only awaited a signal from "il Duce."

The signal came—in a jiffy. The famous "march on Rome" began. At first the sleepy old guard were inclined to scoff, but the "Black Shirt" column grew and grew as it approached the capital.

Without firing a shot Rome was "captured." The old-guard government fell and King Victor Emmanuel asked Mussolini to be his premier.

Since that day Mussolini has been dictator. He swept parliament out of his way with a brush of his hand so he might not be hampered by it for months. He disbanded Nitti's military police and created a new one. He began firing useless state employes and trimming expenses. He cut down the budget and increased the national income. He never stopped to worry about the legality of his acts. If he considered them necessary, he just went to. Deadheads in office he fired bodily. He tolerated only those who worked hard. He worked harder than any.

Cave-Man Statesman.

You may not like the way he saved Italy. He literally kicked her back to life. He used cave-man methods. Like a strong swimmer rescuing a drowning maiden, he swatted Italy a lusty blow between the eyes, but he got her ashore alive and otherwise well. And like any rescued maiden ought, Italy, once she got her senses back, threw her arms about the neck of her rescuer and now loves him to death. As far as I able to judge he can hit her between the eyes as much as he likes.

And, if necessary, Mussolini will do that very thing.

"The Fascisti state is in a state of force," was the way it was described to me by a Fascist leader. And Mussolini himself told me he has absolutely no fear of Italy back-sliding, his chief reason being the 160,000 "Black Shirt" troops ready at his beck and call.

Dangerous? Maybe. But it has worked to Italy's good thus far. Figure the future as you will.

CO-EDS PITCH HORSESHOES.

OLIVET, Mich., May 17.—(United Press).—Barnyard golf is proving the most popular sport among co-eds at Olivet college here. Nearly all of the girls have taken up the sport and each afternoon they gather at the "golf course" and "do their stuff." The blacksmith shops of the town have been taxed to provide the horseshoes that are necessary to keep the contest going.

THEATRES

Epic Entertainment

Harold Lloyd is one of the movie picture stars who seems to make a constant progression in his work, and he has a style all his own. There is nothing in any of his pictures that recalls other fun-makers of the silver screen, no hint of the famous Charlie or of Ben Turpin or Larry Semon, or the Hall-Room Boys. He doesn't go out of his way to make funny situation, but just takes the ordinary events of every day life and turns them into uproarious mirthfulness. However, perhaps he does go a little out of his way in his latest release, "Safety Last," when he climbs an eleven-storey building and performs his breath-taking antics while clinging to the side of a New York skyscraper, but his air of unconcern, his habit of polite cheerfulness at moments of hazardous risk to life and limb, make the thrilling undertaking seem an absolute necessity.

Harold gulps nervously as he looks down into depths of space, but he tips his hat to the old lady who peers down and warns him that he may fall and hurt himself, just as politely as if he weren't clinging with one hand to the side of towering building.

There are gasps and giggles in every foot of the reeling film which portrays the career of Harold as "The Boy" in search of a fortune in New York. There is something unique about the idea of a comedy being staged in a big department store, but Lloyd's possibilities are inexhaustible. With his debonnair demeanor, his habit of quick thinking which turns the most awkward situations to account, he extracts a barrel of fun from a picture that is a shriek from first to last. He evolves a feature method of concealing himself from a rent-seeking landlady, gets to work and past the time-clock in a manner all his own, and has some hectic moments at a rush bargain counter sale. But his cheerfulness remains unabated, even after an hour's frenzied session with a sample-seeking customer, and his manner of convincing his visiting sweetheart that he is general manager of the store, instead of a mere clerk, and the fashion in which he gets away with it, is a perpetual laugh.

Then comes the big adventure, the 'human fly' stunt which was to have been pulled off by The Boy's chum. While "Bill" is trying to "ditch" a wrathful cop, The Boy is compelled to take his place, and, armed only with his horn-rimmed specs and his quaking heart, concealed behind a sporty smile, he swarms up the side of an eleven-storey department store with applauding crowds egging him on. It is impossible to describe this latest feat of Harold Lloyd's, with the innumerable thrills which he has incorporated into a series of gasps and roars. There are times when nothing will apparently save the reckless performer, but he lives to gain the summit and clasp his sweetheart in his arms. For sheer, breath-taking thrills, which make its title absolutely appropriate, and an atmosphere of reality often lacking in "stunt" pictures, it would be hard to beat this latest production of a deservedly popular movie star.

The usual run of short reels, with a very good Sherlock Holmes episode, complete an excellent programme, which had a large audience at the Capitol Theatre last evening.

SEVERAL CERTIFICATES FOR CENTRAL PLAYERS HELD FOR INFORMATION

All Peterboro Certificates Granted at Executive Meeting Held Yesterday in Oshawa.

RESIDENCE RULE.

OSHAWA, Ont., May 17 (Special to The Examiner). — The executive of the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball League met in Oshawa yesterday afternoon, with the following in attendance:

Past presidents, S. Lockington, of Port Hope; A. C. Kimmell, Cobourg; E. Parsons, Oshawa; president, J. Dedman, Lindsay; second vice-president, J. J. Solomon, Peterborough; third vice-president, G. O. Patterson, Bowmanville; secretary, J. G. Nott, Oshawa; C. M. Anderson, Oshawa; Ford W. Moynes, of Lindsay; F. E. Convery, Peterborough; R. D. Adams, Belleville; G. T. Thurston, Bowmanville; George Peacock, Leaside; J. Kennedy, of Kingston; George Strong, of Port Hope.

The A. A. U. of C. was represented by Mr. Steele, the O.B.A.A. by W. J. Smith and Joe Walsh.

The residence rule was first taken up, and after considerable discussion in which Oshawa, Leaside, and Port Hope opposed the first of January, the League decided to abide by the O.B.A.A. constitution, and work under the same, to take effect from the first of this year.

Messrs. Steele, Walsh, and Smith addressed the meeting on the status of the League and players. The first-mentioned went fully into the Ontario bodies' affairs, showing that the Central League must go under the residence rule, as adopted. He also spoke about the tourist movement throughout the League.

The three representatives form Toronto and Secretary Nott, of the Central League, were appointed a committee to pass on certificates, and had representatives of the different clubs appear personally and give information as to players with the result that cards for Jack Ouelette and William H. Ivey, of Belleville, L. J. Jackson, T. P. Kenney, J. K. Kenney, E. O. Jahren, and C. F. Hinton, of Cobourg, Harold Dainty, Al. J. Tyson, and McGunity of Oshawa, Charles A. Allan, of Lindsay, Hector Gravell and L. Blonden of Port Hope, and S. Hamilton of Leaside were held over for more information, while Harold Brownscombe of Belleville, was denied a card for a period to be set by the A.A.U. of C. owing to his having changed his affiliations four times in two years.

During the meeting, Port Hope expressed the opinion that they would have to drop out.

The umpires were given consideration, and some changes in the appointments made will be taken up by President Dedman, also the amount the League shall take out of play-offs, came in for much discussion.

Certificates that were passed were as follows:

Peterborough—C. H. McElroy, Max J. Swanston, P. A. Johnstone, Leo Comolli, Paul Summerfeldt, Charles Ansaldo, Alvin Heckman, Frank Collins, Stanley A. Lowe, Ernest Legon, C. Harrison, J. J. Solomon, G. H. Helson, Herbert Wolfe.

BIG CROWD OUT FOR LINDSAY TILT

Game on Saturday Afternoon Promises to Attract a Lot of Attention.

With favourable weather on Saturday it is certain that the game between the Lindsay Grey Birds and the Petes at Riverside Park will attract a flock of fans. The Lindsay crew have always given the Solomon outfit a hard tussle here and they expect to drive the Big Four representatives all the way to the finishing post in Saturday's argument. Lindsay will trot out a gang of new players and judging by the turnout at practises they should have no trouble in lining up a formidable team. Manager Solomon will work Heckman against them, and the Petes will be at full strength as the game is regarded as a splendid conditioner for next Thursday's Central Ontario League opener at Cobourg. The game will start at 3 o'clock sharp and it is expected that Alex Kay and Edgar Lebarr will be in charge as umpires.

Bad Politics May Disrupt Sports.

French politics are now blamed for the wrangle that has developed in the United States in amateur athletic circles. The A.A.U., which refused to grant permission to Charley Paddock and several swimming girls to go to Europe this summer is said to have taken such action at the request of the French A. A. Federation.

The French, it is understood, did not look with favour on the games arranged this summer by the Swedes on the grounds that a big international meet in Europe this summer would take some of the edge off the Paris Olympics.

The Swedes, Finns, and some other smaller nations, as retaliation, now threaten to withdraw all their entries from the Paris Games.

All of which is a nice mess!

Siki Second Best in Bout With Lion.

MARSEILLES, May 17. — Canadian Press. — "Battling" Siki, the Senegalese pugilist, has been bitten by a lion and therefore the bout between him and the British middleweight Moore, which was to have been held May 27 in Marseilles, has been postponed. The promoters of the bout in announcing the postponement said that the wound in Siki's arm had become infected.

PARIS, May 17. — Of late "Battling" Siki has deserted the squared circle for the circus side shows in an endeavor to carry out his ambition to become as prominent as a wild animal tamer as he has been as a man mauler.

A few days ago the Senegalese was severely bitten by a lion cub which he had dragged into a cafe from a near by menagerie. He was said to have been attempting to force refreshments down the beast's throat Siki when seen yesterday afternoon was carrying a much swollen arm in a sling. The opinion seems to prevail among the boxing experts in Paris that Siki's career as a fighter is about at an end.

SMOKE ELIGIBLE.

Questions.

One—When can a pitcher, who has been announced to start the game, or sent in as a relief pitcher, be removed from the game?

Two—Can a manager send in a pinch hitter, and after two strikes have been pitched to him, remove said pinch hitter and substitute another batsman?

Three—If a batsman bat out of order, and the proper batsman is called out when the mistake is discovered, can the batsman who had hit out of order bat again in the same inning if the correct batting order calls for him to do so?

Four—If the manager changes outfielders and fails to notify the umpire, and said outfielder retires the side on three fly balls after going into the game unannounced, has the manager of the team at bat a chance to protest?

Five—When rain causes the umpire to suspend play is there any set time that he must call it off if the rain continues to fall?

Answers.

One—A pitcher anounced to start the game or sent in as a relief pitcher must pitch until one batsman is either retired or reaches first.

Two—Manager has a right to remove batsman sent in as pinch hitter by substituting some other player who takes balls and strikes that was on pinch batter.

Three—The fact that a batsman batted out of order has no effect on him. He must continue to hit in his proper place in the batting order.

Four—The outfielder who went into the game unannounced takes the place of the player for whom he substituted and plays made by him are legal. The manager of the team at bat has no chance for a protest.

Five—The umpire can hold up the game as long as he believes there is a chance that play may be continued.

TOM GIBBONS HAS IDEAL HOME LIFE

Nothing of the "Rough Neck" About This Challenger of Dempsey.

(By Henry L. Farrell.)

NEW YORK, May 17 (United Press). — Thomas Joseph Gibbons, respected citizen, responsible business man of St. Paul, and a family man of the highest ideals, is going to fight Jack Dempsey in Shelby, Montana, on 4th July, for the world's heavyweight championship.

To know a man of the character of Tom Gibbons, to have first hand knowledge of his private life and to associate him with the prize ring is a problem in psychology, where the answer lies only in the man.

"A profession is just as honourable as a man makes it," Tommy once said, when asked why he had chosen to follow the ring as his career.

Facts and figures about the ring career of Tom Gibbons can be found in the record books, but the real story of Gibbons is familiar to only a few who have been fortunate enough to know him intimately and win his confidence.

There was a "Gentleman Jim" Corbett, who left a desk in a bank to become a heavyweight champion; there were Jim Jeffries and Kid McCoy, sons of clergymen, who won titles in the ring, and there was a Carpentier who rose to the pedestal of a national hero, but none of them possessed the all-around qualifications of refinement that are personified in Tommy Gibbons.

Always a clean liver from the time he was removed from the discipline of a strict Irish parent, Gibbons has never been a victim of any kind of dissipation. He has never smoked or drank, and his idea of a wild party after he has won a contest is to partake of several quarts of ice-cream.

A Man of Family.

Gibbons places his religious and family obligations above everything else, and when he is not in the ring or taking a trip on ring business he can be found around his home in St. Paul with his three sturdy youngsters, Thomas Joseph (Little Junior) aged 5, John Anthony (Jack) aged 3, and Richard Gregory (Dick) aged 8 months.

Last winter Gibbons spent a few weeks in New York and at that time he was being mentioned as one of the opponents for Dempsey this summer. Everyone wanted to talk about it, but Tom. When the conversation drifted around to ring subjects, Tom would get into another channel and tell with the greatest interest how little Tommy, just a few days before Christmas, had found a pair of snow shoes back of the piano where Santa Claus had carelessly exposed them to view.

When the talk would be worked around to boxing again, Tom would prefer to talk about "Duke," one of his hunting dogs, which he claimed to be the smartest animal in the north.

A Great Hunter.

Gibbons is a great hunter and outdoor man, and he likes to discuss his theories about the training of dogs and argue about the best breed, their various peculiarities and capabilities. He is essentially an outdoor man, and he is bringing up his family in the same way. Little Tom and Jack are cracks on snow shoes and skis, and they accompany their father on most of his winter jaunts through the woods.

It has often been pointed out to Gibbons that he had not advanced as rapidly in his profession as his talents merited, because he did not show himself enough around New York and the big boxing centres.

"I'm happy where I am. I could not be happy in New York. The wife and the kiddies could never stand being cramped in New York, and my place is with them all the time, even when it does exact some big sacrifices," he would say in answer.

Characters of such high ideals are so unusual in the boxing game that a personality like Gibbons seems almost an accident and he did get sort of accidental, or if it might be considered as such, a sort of predestined start in the ring.

In a second chapter, Gibbons' early career in the ring and how he got started will be related.

RAIN PREVENTED LEAGUE OPENING

The downpour of rain yesterday prevented the opening of the Mercantile League as was scheduled. The Examiner and Bankers were to have played but their game has now been indefinitely postponed.

It is hoped to get the League under way this afternoon, weather permitting, with the regular scheduled game between the Westclox and C. P.C. This game is scheduled for 5.15 and with any kind of decent weather conditions it should be a good one.

An effort will be made to secure other grounds for the Examiner-Bankers game as this will have to be played off if possible before May 24. If no other grounds are available it may be necessary to postpone the game till after the twenty-fourth.

Merkle Has Hit in Every Contest.

ROCHESTER, May 17.—(Canadian Press.)—By hitting a single in the ninth inning of Tuesday's game with Reading, Fred Merkle, captain of the Rochester baseball club, brought his total of hitting safely in consecutive games to 23. Merkle has made one or more hits in every game he has played in this season. He was out of the line-up once. His batting average for the season is .511 and he leads the International League sluggers.

To break the International League record, Merkle must hit safely in his next ten games. The record is 33, established by Charles "Chad" See, in 1910, while playing with the local club. Merkle's consecutive game record is two less than Charley Grimm's in the National League.

Kirkwood Set New Record For Course.

LEEDS, England, May 17. — (Canadian Press.) —Joe Kirkwood gave a magnificent performance yesterday in the qualifying round for the professional golf tournament. He made a new record for the Headingly course by turning in a score of 67, which made his total 139 for the 36 holes, the first 18 of which were played Tuesday.

Kirkwood therefore is leading the 32 professionals who have qualified for the competition which begins today. Walter Hagen, with 147, and Gene Sarazen, with 151, also have qualified.

The sensation of yesterday was the first failure of Ted Ray in 25 years to survive the qualifying round. The Frenchman, Arnaud Massey, also failed to get in.

ORLAND SUFFERED DEFEAT BY 10-5

The Only Game Played on Opening Day of Northumberland League Season.

ORLAND May 17. — The only game played on the opening day of the Northumberland League season yesterday was the one here yesterday between the home team and Colborne. It was a case of the meeting of extremes as this is Orland's first venture in League ball and Colborne last year won the country champion ship. The rain fell up to the hour of opening and halted play for a time in the fifth innings but the diamond was in fair shape and a fine exhibition of baseball was given. The Orland team was weakened by the absence of the regular pitcher, and captain who is ill in bed with tonsilitis but Leonard Scott, his substitute, pitched the entire nine innings and struck out six of the visitors. The longest hit of the game was a three bagger made by V. Moran of Orland. The visitors put up a good game and were supported by a large number of rooters who came with them from Colborne.

Score by innings:

Orland	0 0 0 1 4 0 0 0 0— 5
Colborne	2 0 0 6 0 0 0 0 2—10

BRITISH TENNIS PLAYERS FAVOR HARD COURTS

LONDON, May 16. — Tennis, like everything else in these progressive days, has to conform to the altered world conditions, and, following the change from old to new Wimbledon and the abolition of the "world's title" therefrom, comes the news that the British Davis Cup trial matches will probably be held on hard courts.

This is in order that the selected players may be used to the courts on which most of the 18 competing countries play, and also to the probability that the British teamwill have to go to Belgium where hard courts are used.

These forthcoming trials, so far as England is concerned, are likely to bring out very little new talent, and the Old Country will have to rely on such old guards as Kingscote, Crawley, Gilbert, Lycett, Lowe, Max Woosnam, and Roper Barrett.

The only new man mentioned with any pretensions to Davis Cup form is the young 23-year-old South African, J. D. P. Wheatley, who has been educated here and has qualifications to play for Great Britain.

Wheatley showed remarkable form recently when he won the Covered Courts Championship at Queen's Club, beating in the final game the International Indian player, Doctor A. H. Fyzee, three sets to one.

Policeman Finds Health in Dreco

Martyr to Stomach and Liver Trouble Finds Immediate Relief—One Bottle of Dreco Puts Percy E. Ganter of St. John, on His Feet. Enthusiastically Recommends it.

Mr. Percy E. Ganger, originally a man of robust physique as demanded by the arduous nature of his occupation as a member of the St. John's Police Force, was failing rapidly through the devastating inroads of chronic stomach and liver trouble and indigestion. Everything he ate caused sickness and dizziness Despite medicines and tonics his suffering increased until Dreco gave him real relief. One bottle of this splendid remedy went right to the root of his troubles as it is doing for thousands of others who suffer the untold agonies of a disordered system.

"My husband," says Mrs. Ganter, "was ailing with stomach and liver trouble and indigestion that were rapidly pulling him down. Everything he ate made him sick and dizzy. He was getting worse and worse all the time in spite of medicines and tonics, a big strong man undermined by the revenges of a sickness nothing seemed able to crue. At last I read about Dreco and in desperation got him to try it. The result was beyond all hope. One bottle and all trace of illness disappeared. His digestion is now perfect and he is rapidly regaining his normal health and vigor, thanks to Dreco, which we both recommend highly."

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and a good druggist everywhere.

Financial News and Views

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, May 17 (Special to The Examiner). — Further bear attacks met with fair success and stock prices were driven further downward after the opening of the market. Trading again was very light, and at the opening was restricted, with prices showing no important changes. Steels were a little stronger, U. S. Steel opening up 1-4 at 97 5-8. The action of Republic directors in starting to wipe out the accumulated dividends on preferred was regarded as an encouraging sign.

The action of the American Construction Council in recommending the curtailment of building until the prices are driven down aroused interest.

This is merely in line with the action in other industries.

Housewives have boycotted the sugar, and copper has been driven well below its high point by buyers staying out of the market.

The market dragged in the early trading, sales not being sufficient to give an indication of any trend. Steel reacted to 97 1-4 and rallied again to the opening level. Sinclair sold at 31 up 1-4 from Wednesday's close. Sinclair had been the leader since the announcement that mammoth oil had brought in a five thousand barrel well in the Teapot Dome. This is an important development. The well came in two feet of sand and with a natural flow. A big source for additional income for Sinclair will be its increased gasoline supply. Before 31st December new construction will have almost trebled its capacity as compared with the actual output last year.

The Publicity Department of the bear crowd had been working overtime since the first of the week. They started with the circulation of a report that structural steel prices had been cut. This was followed by rumours of the closing of steel mills. Wednesday's propaganda that the U. S. Steel Corporation contemplated another advance in wages was sent broadcast.

Copper and oil issues were under pressure. Anaconda sold under 44 and Utah was off 7-8 at 63 1-8. Copper authorities claim the market has already discounted the price recession in the metal, and say that all the leading companies can make fair profits at the ruling levels around 15 1-2 cents a pound. Further trade opinion is that the next price changes are likely to be upward, as there is little copper for sale at the current market.

The cables will be the largest ever made. Each will be 30 inches in diameter and will be made up of 16,500 strands of high grade carbon steel wire.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

He spent the day yesterday telling everybody who understands Spanish what a speed marvel is his Panchito, while Sancho Panza, Junior, galloped Panchito gently around the track and warmed him in a few quarter-mile sprints. It was observed that the cactus burrs were still decorating Panchito's tail and manc.

Don Quixote is a dead game Mexican sport, however. He has a roll that would choke a hippopotamus and appears willing to bet them as high as a hound's back.

Faifure it out for yourself. You pays your money and you takes your choice. Bobby Wilson, the handicapper, says Don Quixote smokes marihuana, but the jefe politico says he knows it's the fermented juice of the century plant. However, Bobby is taking no chances as the wise ones will note when they check the weights. Panchito, being a powerful horse and (according to Don Quixote) absolutely unbeatable, faces the barrier with an impost of 118 pounds, not counting his shoe scactus burrs and stable accumulations.

Watch for Sancho Panza, Junior. He rides barefooted in a two-piece uniform, to wit, one "nigger" shirt and a pair of blue bib overalls and he carries a willow switch.

Viva Panchito. Viva Don Quixote. Ditto Sancho Panza, Jr.nior.

John Parker finished reading and his glance sought Leighton's. "Danny, he informed the trainer in a low voice, "here is what I call a dirty, low, Irish trick. I suppose he's been making a night-bird out of Panchito, but you can bet your last nickel he isn't neglecting him when they're alone in the barn together. He gets a grooming then; he gets well fed and well rubbed and the cactus burrs and the stable accumulations are only scenery when Panchito's on parade. He removed the racing plates you put on Panchito and substituted heavy work shoes, but—Panchito will go to the post with racing plates. I think we had better put a bet down on him."

"I wouldn't bet tin money on him," Danny Leighton warned. "He can outrun anything in that field, even if he has broken training a little, but those wise little jockeys on the other those wise little jockeys on the othe pocket him and keep him there."

"They'll not!" Kay's voice rose sharply. "Panchito will be off first, no matter what position he draws, and Don Mike's orders to Allesandro will be to keep him in front. But you are not to bet on him, father."

"Why not? Of course I shall bet on him."

"You know very well, Dad, that there are no bookmakers of Tia Juana to make the odds. The Paris Mutuel system obtains here and the public makes the odds. Consequently the more money bet on Panchito the lower will be the price. I'm certain Don Mike will bet every dollar he has in the world on Panchito, but he will bet it, through trusted agents, in pool-rooms all over the country. The closing price here should be such that the pool-rooms should pay Don Mike not less than fifteen to one."

"So you've been his confidante, have you?" Parker scrutinized his daughter quizzically.

"He had to take somebody into his confidence in order to have his plans protected," she confessed blushingly.

"Quite so! Somebody with a deal of influence," Mrs. Parker interjected. "John, this is simply delicious. That rascal of a Don Miguel has reverted to type. He has put aside his Celtic and Gaelic blood and turned Mexican. He tells people the truth about his horse and a reporter with a sense of humor has advertised these truths by writing a funny story about him and Panchito and the Indian imp."

"They'll have him up in the judge's stand for an explanation five minutes after the race is won," Danny Leighton declared. "Panchito will be under suspicion of being a ringer and the payment of bets will be held up."

"In which case, dad," Kay reminded him demurely, "you and Mr. Leighton will be furnished with an excellent opportunity to prove yourselves heroes. Both of you will go to the judge's stand immediately tand vouch for Don Mike and Panchito. If you do not I shall—and I fancy John Parker's daughter's testimony will be given some consi dera tion, Mr. John Parker being very well known to every racing judge in America."

"There are days," murmured John Parker sadly, "when I find it impossible to lay up a cent. I have nurtured a serpent in my bosom."

"Tush! There are no snakes in Ireland," his humorous wife reminded him. "What if Don Mike has hoisted you on your own petard? Few men have done as much," and she pinched his arm lovingly.

RESPIRATION METHODS BRINGS WOMAN AROUND

Girl Overcome by Gas in Toronto—Pulmotor Saves a Life.

TORONTO, May 17.—(Canadian Press.)— Methods of artificial respiration applied for about eighteen minutes by Police Constable Thomas O'Neill, proved successful in saving the life of Miss Etta McKendrick, aged 25, who was overcome by fumes of illuminating gas at her home at daybreak to-day.

Moans of the young woman awakened her elder brother who, upon investigation, detected fumes of gas emitting from her room and broke in the door. He immediately ran to the street and called Constable O'Neill who put the call in for the police ambulance. Constable took the pullmotor from the patrol box and hurried to the girl's aid. O'Neill, who was almost overcome himself while working on the girl, stated that several times he thought she had expired. Gas was found to have escaped from a faulty pipe in the girl's room.

"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for over 20 years and I feel that I owe my life to them. I suffered severely from rheumatism and heart failure. One doctor just gave me one year to live, and even told me I might be found dead at any time. A neighbor advised Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I have been using them as needed ever since. I am now 70 years of age, weigh 217 pounds and can work as well as any young man."

BLIND MAN'S BUFF

EVEN in this age of enlightenment some folks spend their money blindly. They buy with their eyes shut. They grope in the dark as truly as if their eyes were bandaged.

And all the time a powerful light is being thrown on the very things they need and want.

Advertising is a beacon to guide you in buying. It shows you what to buy--where to buy--and when to buy. At the same time, it protects you against fraud and and inferiority.

Merchants and manufactures who advertise deliberately focus thousands of eyes upon their wars. Their values must be honest and their prices right, or they could not advertise successfully.

Don't play blind man's buff with the exclusive dollar. Spend a few minutes each day running through the advertisements in this paper. Then buy the products that have proved up in the light of advertising.

A CHURCH FOR MUTES AND BLIND TO CLOSE

LONDON, May 16.—(Associated Press).—One of London's quaintest institutions, the deaf and dumb church at St. Saviour's, is soon to disappear. So far as known, it is the only church in the world devoted exclusively to worship by the deaf, the dumb and the blind. The increased real estate value of the site upon which this unique institution is built has made it necessary to close its doors, but it is hoped to re-establish it in a more modest part of London.

The foundation for the modest church was laid by the late King Edward in 1870, and it became familiar to the hundreds of thousands of Britons and Americans who pass along one of the busiest and noisiest thoroughfares of the capital. Yet it is doubtful if a tithe of those passers-by even thought to step inside to witness one of the deaf and dumb services.

Like the United States, Great Britain is one of the most advanced nations in the care and education of its deaf and dumb. Recognizing the truth of Dr. Samuel Johnson's statement that of all physical deprivation, the deaf and dumb is "the most desperate of human calamities," the state now provides for the whole of the educational needs of this afflicted class of the population up to the age of 16 and gives them assistance in after years.

She sings with authority, and, of all the vocalists, was the one with the most poise. Her numbers were, "You, Lovers All," an old English air; Elgar's "Shepherd's Song," and "How Shall I Sing Their Majesty?"

On Tuesday evening a join meeting of the W. A. and Girls' evening branch of the W.A. of All Saints' church took place in the church hall. Reports of the 37th annual meeting of the Anglican Women's Auxiliaries, which took place in Toronto last week, were given by the delegates from All Saints': Mrs. H. Fuller, who represented the W. A. itself; Mrs. H. E. Connolly, for the Juniors ,and the Misses Gwen Dobbin and Edna Barrie for the Girls' branch. Mrs. S. Harris, president of the W.A., also spoke briefly of her impressions of the convention. The reports, which were interestingly given, were much appreciated by their hearers.

At the conclusion of the business session, a social hour was spent, when refreshments were served, under the direction of Mrs. W. Howden.

A THOUGHT

These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.—John 16:33.

Truth forever on the scaffold, wrong forever on the throne;
Yet that scaffold sways the future, and within the dark unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above his own.
—James Russell Lowell.

THE TEACHER.

To Mrs. J. H. Bettes, Teacher of a Class of Chinese.

From where beyond the farthest bound of broad Pacific's tide,
Old China floats her yellow flag over an empire wide,
A realm of darkness scarcely pierced by radiant Gospel ray,
Where, o'er a myriad million souls, Budda holds sovereign sway.

By hope's bright beacon led, there came, a little exile band,
A home and heritage to win, in Canada's fair land.
The country of Confucius, far far they left behind,
Trusting to fortune's f voring smile, a happier lot to find.

But those benighted ones had ne'er of Christ the Saviour heard,
Nor of Redemption's story told, in His most Holy Word;
They knew not of the wondrous love that brought Him down to die
That we might have eternal life, and bliss with Him on high.

But He who guides unerringly, His children's steps aright,
In mercy led them here where shines the Gospel's glorious light,
And sent to them the best of all that Heaven can deign to send
To mortals here, or great or small, a true, unselfish friend.

One who would gladly take the task for the dear Master's sake,
(Although discouraging, it seemed, since alien tongue they spake,)
The old, old story to relate, and strive as best she may,
To lead them to the Cross of Christ, that takes our sins away.

And every soul that God has made, or yellow, black or white,
Of every race, are of one blood, and equal in His sight;
With patient hand she sowed the seed, which fell in fertile soil,
From which a precious harvest grew to bless her earnest toil.

They found the peaceful fold, with door still standing wide,
Where all who will may entrance gain, for no one is denied.
Soon to their distant native land they will return to tell
The glad Evangel unto those who still in darkness dwell.

Ungrudingly she spent her time and talent doing good,
And well of her it may be said she hath done what she could;
Aye, she shall find fulfilled at last the promise all divine,
They that turn many to the Lord, bright as the stars shall shine.
Mrs. A. F. Calder.

WHILE YOU SLEEP.

There's an ending to the daytime,
To the working and the playtime,
There's an end to every pleasure and an end to every game;
There's an end to joy and sorrow,
And to yesterday, tomorrow,
But your whiskers, they keep growing just the same.

There's an end to tiresome joking,
There's an end to luscious smoking,
There's an end to all affections when your heart has lost its flame;
There's a stoppage to your thinking
To your eating to your drinking,
But your whiskers they keep growing just the same.

You may shave and shave each morning,
At the starting of the dawning,
You may shave till twilight deepens, and you light the tallow flame.
You may singe and pull and rub them,
You may get a bat and club them,
But your whiskers will keep on coming just the same.

CONDITIONS THAT CALL FOR A TONIC

Symptoms That the Blood is Thin Should Not be Neglected.

Weak, run-down, lacking strength, energy and ambition, nervous, sleepless, poor appetite, digestion disturbed—these are the symptoms named by a great majority of people who have been benefited by the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These tonic pills correct the condition described and if you have any of these symptoms you should give these pills a trial. Their great value in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. Melville Fortune, Preston, Ont., who says: "Some months ago I became very depressed and worried. My friends thought I was in a decline. I would often faint, was weak, pale and hardly able to go about. I lost weight to the extent of 34 pounds in four months. I was taking treatment but did not get any benefit until I began using Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These made a wonderful change in my condition, and by the time I was on my fifth box I had regained 22 pounds of my lost weight. I feel altogether like a new woman, can do my housework with ease, and have reason to praise Dr. Williams Pink Pills for the great good I have found through their use. I will always gladly recommend them for anaemia and general debility."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LORD CURZON WISHES BREAK WITH RUSSIA

Such is Public Opinion in Soviet Country, Expressed Through Her Influential Newspapers

WILL NOT HEDGE

MOSCOW, May 18 — (United Press. — A break with England is feared by responsible government persenages here. Russia will be unable to go much further in meeting the demands set down in the British ultimatum, it was pointed out by them to-day.

It is not believed that Lord Curzon will hedge in his attitude demanding complete compliance with the British demands.

Public opinion of Russia, expressed through its newspapers, is convinced that Curzon wishes a break with Russia. The one hope here is that English public opinion will not sufficiently back Curzon and force him to retract.

The Isvestia, in an extra edition printed to-day, in big and unusual headlines, comments from the New York Metropolitan papers considered favorable to the Russian attitude. That paper pointed out that "even the American Conservative Press finds Russia's note acceptable."

Prepared to Leave.

Although the British mission states that no official instructions to leave Moscow had reached it up to noon to-day, a number of British subjects have been asked by the mission to be prepared to leave on short notice.

THE DISTRICT COUNCIL OF A.Y.P.A. IN SESSION

District Council took place last evening in St. George's church, with a good representation from the four Anglican churches of the city, and visitors from Lakefield and Millbrook, including Miss Blanche Graham of Lakefield, president of the District Council and Mr. Stone of Millbrook.

Rev. G. J. Bousfield, the Council's chaplain, opened the meeting with prayer, followed by a welcome from Rev. W. R. Courage. Brief addresses were given by Rev. R. B. Grobb and Rev. G. J. Bousfield.

After discussion on business matters, it was decided to hold a picnic at Chemong Park in July.

Mr. Sills of St. John's congregation extended a general invitation to be give by Bishop Reeve in St. John's Sunday-School room, on Wednesday, May 23rd.

An enjoyable vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. H. Rew, jr., and a reading by Miss R. Williams. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the business session.

The next meeting of the Council will be held in Lakefield on June fourteenth.

ADDS MURDER TO HIS RECORD

Fugitive Leo Rogers, Aged 21, Shot and Killed Constable LeFebyre This Morning.

NORTH BAY, May 18.—(Canadian Press).—A fugitive from justice since Wednesday morning, when he made a sensational escape from custody in the district court here, Leo Rogers, 21 year old desperado, added murder to his criminal record early to-day when he shot and fatally wounded plain-clothesman Fred Lefebre of North Bay, following an all night pursuit of the fugitive which was participated in by scores of North Bay citizens. Constable Wm. McGovern was wounded in the right thigh in an exchange of fire with Rogers and is now in hospital.

Rogers was seen at daybreak by farm house and Lefebre crept out towards him in an effort to apprehend him but the desperado stopped in his tracks and rained bullets point blank at the officer, who fell with his stomach pierced with a bullet. Rogers then escaped to take the shore road.

Lefebvre was hurriedly removed to hospital here, where he died shortly after seven o'clock this morning. "Rogers got me at last," he feebly muttered with his last breath just after he had received the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church.

At two o'clock this afternoon Leo Rogers, who made a sensational escape from the Court House here on Wednesday, had not yet been captured. He is in the rocky district along Lake Nipissing, and the provincial police are organizing for a prolonged chase. Rogers is armed with an automatic revolver and is believed to have a plentiful supply of ammunition.

KIWANIS CLUB HEAR ADDRESS BY A. HURRELL

The Common Heritage That Exists Among the English Speaking Nations of the World.

A BIG SESSION

"Our political inheritance" was the subject of an intensely interesting and instructive address at today's luncheon of the Kiwanis Club. The speaker was Mr. Alfred Hurrell, second vice-president and general solicitor of the Prudential Insurance Company of New York. In the course of his address, Mr. Hurrell revealed the fact that he is a Canadian by birth, having once resided in Welland County. Launching into his address, Mr. Hurrell carried the gathering back to the signing of the Magna Charta, which, he said, gave birth to the liberty of thought and action which the English-speaking world enjoys to-day. The early English settlers of the colonies at times were inclined to be unreasonable in their demands, and for one thing they objected to the idea of a central government and the imposition of taxes. In an effort to assuage this condition many a British statesman gave the best that was in him. Later, when the states were joined together by the bonds of federation, it required the utmost tact and diplomacy to prevent it from going on the rocks. The constitution of the United States is in a sense a counterpart of the Crown. Englishmen who made the country to the south of us, regarded property as a sacred thing. Generally speaking, in Great Britain the law of Parliament is supreme, but in the United States the law of the courts can be invoked where legislative enactments tend to work a hardship or trespass on the liberty of the people.

Referring to the growth of Communism throughout the world, the speaker said it was up to those who are now in the majority to become militant instead of passive. Too many men who are in comfortable circumstances have a habit of burying their head in the sand because they do not want to be bothered with the problems of to-day. We should fight to maintain the Christian ideals that make for the civilization and development of any successful nation. These are the ideals that got a chance under the British flag, said Mr. Hurrell in conclusion.

In moving a vote of thanks to the speaker, His Honour Judge E.C.S. Huycke, referred to the individual who takes a delight in twisting the lion's tail. "That man," said His Honour, "is an enemy to the race, to his family and to himself. We have a common heritage. The governments and jurisprudence we have in Canada and the United States is born of the mother of parliaments. Not one soldier or one ship is necessary to guard the four thousand mile boundary between the two countries. This heritage is peace on earth and goodwill towards men."

Mr. J. J. Turner seconded the motion and the Kiwanis lion roared in its usual effective manner.

Guests of Kiwanan J. I. Allen to whom the thanks of the club were extended for arranging to have Mr. Hurrell address the meeting, were Mr. E. J. MacIver assistant secretary of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, and the following.—Messrs. John J. Turner, W. R. Breyfogle, Peter P. Westbye, Ray A. Carman, Geo. A. Gillespie, Vincent Eastwood. OLEOMARGARINE CANNOT TAKE BUTTER'S PLACE

So G. N. Gordon Advises Local Council of Women —Country Better Off Without It.

PRICE OF BUTTER

There was a small attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women, held yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association. In the absence of Mrs. A. Mowat, the first vice-president, Mrs. A. Stevenson, took the chair.

Re Oleomargarine.

A discussion in regard to oleomargarine arose out of the reading of a letter from G. N. Gordon, K.C., M. P., in answer to correspondence from the Local Council, asking Mr. Gordon to support the Council's action in upholding its import and manufacture in Canada. Dairy interests in the Dominion are at present making a strong effort to prohibit its use.

Mr. Gordon gave it as his opinion that "the country would be better off if it never used oleomargarine at all." He had been advised by physicians, he said, that it could not take the face of butter, and he referred also to a brand of oleo named "Country Rose," which was stripped of its label, the name "oleomargarine" rubbed off and the product sold as butter.

In the discussion which followed the reading of Mr. Gordon's letter, the ladies considered that facilities of inspection at the Governments' disposal should make such action on the part of dishonest dealers impossible. "That is a lame argument," said one lady. "The Government has an army of people out to watch just such things. If we are not accorded protection in this way, then we will be at the mercy of crooked dealers in other commodities as well."

"The fact that the law is broken," remarked another, "doesn't constitute a reason for changing it. The decalogue has never been abrogated, and it is broken every day."

Price of Butter.

In answer to a reason advanced by the Council that the use of oleo exercised a certain control over soaring butter prices, Mr. Gordon said that the price of butter is not regulated by the law of supply and demand, but by the amount of milk which is available at certain seasons of the year.

The convenor of the Council's committee on Household Economics, Mrs. J. B. Mann, had been asked to review a pamphlet recently issued by the Alberta Dairymen's Association, which is making a strong fight against the use of oleomargarine in Canada. The arguments and their refutation as prepared by Mrs. Mann were read by Mrs. A. Stevenson. Mrs. Mann asserted that the arguments of the Alberta Association are illogical, inconsistent and contrary to fact. They say that oleo is not a nutritious food as it contains no vitamin content, but for the fats it releases to the body cells.

They also stress the argument that the use of oleoe is fostering encouragement of United States' industries, while recording the fact that only 41 p.c. of the margarine used in Canada is imported, neglecting to credit the encouragement given to home industries, which manufacture the remaining 49 p.c. "If they were sincere they would advocate a tax on oleo, which is free now."

Renovating Plants.

Although oleomargarine would be prohibited by these dairymen they advocate the establishment of renovating plants as a means of helping the struggling farmer. Renovated butter is rancid butter that is washed and given a flavour by the use of sour cream. This could be sold at first-class prices, although it might be absolutely unclean, and its keeping qualities are very poor. The argument that the poor man's child should be protected against the use of oleo is not used when renovated butter is mentioned, although figures show that 50 p.c. of the oleo sold is used for shortening and the balance is used by boarding houses.

One member asserted that "our boys, when fighting in the trenches," used oleo constantly. "If it was good enough for them, when they were fighting for their country, what is wrong with it now?" Also saying that England, in war-rationing time, used oleo in large quantities as a substitute for butter.

CONFERENCE OF POLICE COMMISSION AND CITY COUNCIL WAS ABORTIVE

Opposing Opinions of Amendment to Statute Respecting Council's Control of Police Estimates — Will Ask Commission to Reconsider Their Attitude.

WAS AN AMICABLE DISCUSSION

"I don't think we can allow you to interfere with us."

With an accompanying wish to be courteous and kindly Judge Huycke thus declared the attitude of the Police Commission in regard to the City Council's action in pruning the Police Department's appropriation from nearly $29,000 to $25,000 in the preparation of this year's budget, and also to the council's suggestion last night that the commission trim and adjust their estimated expenditures to the reduced allowance.

The discussion was practically unproductive. Judge Huycke and Police Magistrate Langley contended that the amendment to the statute which the council invoked was illusory in the construction that had been placed on it in opinions and advice which the council had followed, that it was "half-baked" legislation, and meant only that the commission might be required to strike out of its estimates any items which were not legally authorized within the act.

The conversation between the two groups was cordial, and there was agreement in their disagreement. As to the future effects of the cutting of the appropriation when it is exhausted late in the year and the police are left without credit on the city's payroll, Judge Huycke remarked that the police might sue the city for their salaries, but in any event the responsibility rested upon the council. Their first duty, he argued, was to provide the sum required and fixed by the Police Commission, unless it contained items which were not necessary for the maintenance of an efficient police force.

Not only did the commission appear before the council, contrary to expectations expressed some time ago that they would funk the conference, but after they had departed without offering any hope of compromise the council passed a resolution appointing a special committee to wait upon them at their convenience in the hope that under reconsideration the differences might be lessened and smoothed over.

Ald. Holloway's motion, seconded by Ald. Phelan, was simply that the council take no action. Ald. Maher and Ald. Crowe supported them, but the motion was lost and Ald. Fife's amendment, seconded by Ald. Meyers, holding out for reconciliation was carried with the additional votes of Alderman Stocker, Morrison and McIntyre. Ald. Turner was not present.

Ald. Fife and Ald. Meyers were delegated to interview the commission.

The Council's Position

After stating the purposes of the meeting, to discuss the appropriation of the Police Department and also the question of the employment of City Solicitor Wearing instead of Crown Attorney Hatton in the prosecution of O. T. A. cases Mayor Taylor asked Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Finance Committee, to explain the council's position.

Ald. Phelan said that the council had set out to economize in every way possible, and had brought in their budget with material reductions in every department.

"The council assumed that we had the power to determine the bulk sum to be allowed the Police Department," he continued, "and we cut $3,841 off their estimates, leaving a balance of $25,000, which was practically the estimate in 1921 from the Police Commission. To get a 34 mill rate every department had to co-operate by taking a reduction."

Judge Huycke—Our estimates went in long before. They were in detail, and we think you were acting on a wrong assumption when you proceeded to cut our estimates. I'd like to know what items in the estimates you object to and on what grounds.

Ald. Phelan—Our main opinion was that the Police Department could do with less men.

Judge Huycke—I don't think you have anything to do with that.

Ald. Phelan—We didn't specify what the commission should do, but left it to their own judgment how they would meet the reduced appropriation.

His Honor replied that the commission did not attempt to interfere with the responsibilities of the council The commission had its own responsibilities, and the Judge said he proposed to carry them out.

Ald. Phelan—We are responsible for the money we raise.

Judge Huycke—But not for the police money.

Ald. Phelan—We maintain that the Police Commission can't spend more than the council approves.

Judge Huycke—I think that's a weak maintenance. That was not the advice from your city solicitor.

Ald. Phelan—Not exactly.

Judge Huycke—Not at all. I saw his written opinion.

Ald. Phelan—He suggested that we might cut out the police car and motorcycle.

Judge Huycke—That was not in Mr. Widdifield's written advice. He may have given it verbally.

Accept Responsibility

Continuing, His Honor said: "I don't wish to get into an altercation with the council. We are responsible for our duties as you are for yours. If a responsibility is thrust on me I am going to take it and carry it out. As far as the legal aspect of it is concerned I don't wish to say anything about it. The time may come when I may have to decide something upon it.

Magistrate Langley—Are there any other things in the estimates?

Ald. Phelan—There was the attendance at the chiefs' convention and the upkeep of the car.

Mr. Langley—I feel that we made our estimate very low. We didn't make a heavy one. I assume that we all want to do our duty, and have the city properly policed. What is wrong except this? You say you could do with less constables, and we feel that, according to the statute, that is a matter for the Police Commission to deal with.

Ald. Phelan answered that the council didn't intend to dictate how the commission should spend the money, but that in order to keep within the tax rate the commission should not spend more than $25,000.

Too Many Police

Ald. Crowe stated his position, saying that he had taken a prominent part in the matter. "I take observations of other places, and I find the police costs are not so great as ours. Although those places are not so large as Peterborough, yet the police costs don't correspond. Orillia, Lindsay and towns like that have only one or two constables. Peterborough is a law-abiding city. We haven't the transient foreign element they have in western Ontario, and it means a good deal not to have them in so far as police work is concerned. The people look to us to save their money, and they think we have more police than we should have. You could put twenty men to police all the city, and I don't think you would have any more order than we have now. Why should our streets be paraded more than other places. I can't see that it's necessary. I think our position is well taken. The fire, water and light and the other departments were cut; why not the Police Department? I think the people should be supreme. If the want less policemen why all right. It shouldn't be a question of making them do it if they don't want to."

When the bars were open a few years ago, Ald. Crowe said, there was more rowdyism than there is today, and only four policemen were required.

"We were told that if we got rid of the bars we wouldn't need so many policemen, and I don't think we do. I believe in the Temperance Act, and I wish to see it carried on, but I hope the commission will see its way clear to fall in line with us. In my opinion extravagance is shown in the policing of the city. I think it can be done for less without any serious lawlessness. Let's try it for this year, and if we see we are wrong we can remedy it next year."

Ald. Maher's Criticism

Ald. Maher said the sentiment he had heard expressed was that there was too much police protection. The commission declared that sixteen men were necessary, but he had gathered from citizens that such a force was not necessary, and the citizens had to pay the bills.

"In the report of the last meeting of the commission they agreed they needed sixteen men, and they referred to the system that had been built up. It is largely built up around the chief with a private secretary, and an expensive car to take him up and down to his meals. The citizens feel that the chief is just as able to walk as your honor or any others."

Ald. Maher mentioned the expenditure last year on gasoline and car repairs by the Police Department, and the cost of educating one of the men at the Business College who might decide tomorrow to leave Peterborough. The police, he said, went outside their jurisdiction, and if any more men were required the city could get more provincial police on short notice. Ald. Maher referred to a reported statement by the chief that he could not assume the responsibility of the department if the force was reduced. Let the chief resign and the council would quickly assume the responsibility.

"I know we haven't the authority," he continued.

Judge Huycke—None at all. If you are going to talk that way there's no use of coming here.

Ald. Maher said there had been a high-handed attitude not to come together at all.

Judge Huycke—Wasn't it high-handed for you when you got our estimates to take the broad-axe to them. That's about what was done.

Ald. Maher contended that allowing for the commission's authority and duties they hadn't tried to co-operate

TEN MINUTES DEAD RESTORED TO LIFE

Marvellous Achievement of Modern Chemistry Based on Experience of 20 Years.

Men who have died (their hearts stopped beating entirely) have occasionally been brought back to life by injecting adrenalin into their hearts. Adrenalin — most powerful heart stimulant, even more so than nitroglycerin—sometimes can start the heart beating again.

This has been known to the medical profession for 20 years. Improved methods have been discovered by Dr. Dennis W. Crile, of Chicago. He makes the announcement to the Chicago Medical Society. Similar results were obtained about a month ago by Dr. Karl Bodon, of Budapest.

The adrenalin treatment, to be successful, must be applied within 10 minutes after death. Also, the cause of death must be removed. To understand that last statement, it should be known that the adrenalin injection is of most use in reviving patients who, having weak hearts, die from the anaesthetic during an operation.

Incidentally, a heart that has stopped is sometimes made to beat again by the surgeon using his knife quickly to enable him to massage the heart.

Adrenalin is a chemical substance extracted from the adrenal glands, usually of sheep. These glands are located close to the kidneys. You have a set of them. Take them away and you can't live, for the stimulant generated by the adrenals and shot into the blood keeps the heart going—speaking broadly.

When you get excited, you sometimes feel your heart pounding fast. Your adrenal glands, responding to your emotional change, simply shoot more adrenalin into your blood and over-stimulate your heart. When the adrenals are not active enough, the pulse gets low and faint.

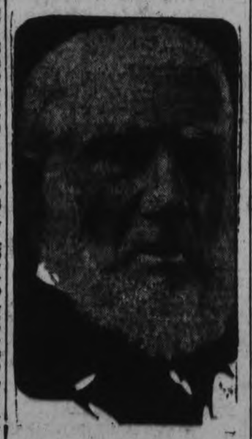
A friend of ours, a hyper-thyroid, went to a doctor who specializes in endocrine glandology. The friend had a pulse of 150. The physician fed him extract of pancreas. This, working through his own pancreatic gland, calmed down his thyroid in his neck. In turn, that slowed down his adrenal glands—and his pulse has been reduced to nearly normal.

An intricate process. It again emphasizes the importance of the discoveries doctors are making about the functions of our glands.

Dr. Crile brings a man back from the grave after he has been dead 10 minutes. This ends the old saying: "No one ever died and came back to tell us about it."

Most people will wonder, what happened to the man during the 10 minutes he was dead? Where was his soul? No one can answer. A curtain is drawn over his memory of those 10 minutes, when he returns to consciousness. Some religious cults believe it takes as much as 24 hours for the soul to leave the body.

NEAR CENTURY MARK



JOHN R. BOOTH.

How old must a man be before he is really old?

Thousands rise to answer, "There is no age too advanced for active work."

But among the outstanding ones who voice the cry is John R. Booth, aged 97, owner and active operator of big lumber, pulp and paper mills in Canada. Should he live three more years he will round out an even century.

A good many men have reached the same age, but few have been inspired with a desire to keep in the harness in the eventide of life.

There is little of the figure popularly associated with age about Booth, Limited, capitalized at $10,000,000 of timber land, every day finds him on the job, actively directing his thousands of employees.

In 1921, he formed the John R. Biith, Limited, capitalized at $10,000,000 and having as directors his sons and daughters. But he still remains an active head.

"I have never secured an acre of timber from any government, except in open competition, and as the highest bidder," he says.

And age?

"What is that?" he asks.

COMING TO CANADA TO PROSPECT LAND

Duke of Manchester Sails From Southampton on "Empress of Britain."

MONTREAL, May 18.—Accompanied by his daughte, Lady Mary Montague, the Duke of Manchester sailed from Southampton Wednesday aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain. The Duke is coming to Canada to prospect six thousand acres of land owned in Quebec by a British-Quebec syndicate with which he is associated. The land to be prospected is on the banks of Lake Demontigny, just across from the Provincial border from the Hollinger and Hattie properties. Mr. Robert Ellis of Shanghai, who is negotiating for the timber on the property says that although "only one trail has been run in the forest at present, we know that there is ore for three mines, but there may be a dozen quite easily.

The Duke will have with him Mr. Mansell, of the Halle Mine who will superintend operations.

Lady Mary will remain in Montreal until a house has been built for her accommodaion at Lake Demontigny.

Mr. J. K. Papassinakes, the principal owner of Halle, interested the Duke in the prospect and staked out the claims for him. The Duke's heir, Lord Mandeville, and his uncle, Lord Charles Montague, are financially interested in the British-Quebec syndicate.

British capitalists are becoming interested in the development of Northern Ontario and Quebec, and should the Duke be successful it is expected that the other sites will be prospected with a view to development.

The Duke is one of the greatest sportsmen in England and well used to roughing it. He will help in clearing up the camp site.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Another Effort to Re-open the School Question — Meeting Friday Evening

CAMPBELLFORD, May 18. — The following notice was sent out yesterday to every member of the town council:

"Please be advised that His Worship the Mayor, calls a special meeting of the Council on Friday, May 18th at 8 p.m. in the Clerk's office for the purpose of dealing with the following matters:

"To discuss with Mr. T. A. Brown and the Building committee of the Board of Education the advisability of completing the new High school according to the original plans and specifications and if possible to arrive at a definite decision in this matter.

"To consider and revise the street oiling by-law.

J. F. McGregor,
Acting Clerk.

The High school problem is no sooner buried than it is resurrected again. At a special meeting held last Friday night this same problem was threshed out. At that session Mayor Meyers, who explained to his colleagues that in calling the meeting he was acting on his own initiative and without pressure from the Board of Education, stated that no attempt would be made to issue debentures for the completion of the building unless the councillors were unanimous. The gap between those who favored the raising of another $25,000 to add a gymnasium and assembly room to the building now in process of construction and those who opposed the proposition, was so wide that the matter was finally dropped. The suggestion that the question be referred to the taxpayers was also disapproved, as the feeling was general that such a by-law would be defeated and consequently it would be a waste of money to put the town to the expense of a special election. The matter was then regarded as settled for all time, at least so far as the councillors were concerned.

Brought Up Again.

The Council held another special meeting Tuesday night for the purpose of striking the tax rate for the year. At that session Mayor Meyers revived the discussion on the High school. He surprised his colleagues by informing them that a member of the Board of Education had told him that in the building for which the contract has been let, no provision has been made for a system of ventilation and that something must be done to provide for the oversight. Some of the councillors took the ground that that was a matter for which the Board of Education should be held responsible.

No Ventilation.

The present High school building was condemned by the Department of Education, chiefly because of the lack of ventilation .The High school inspector who met the Council and the Board of Educatiton in joint session last winter condemned the building on this account, giving other reasons, such as the lack of space, and added that it would cost more to put in proper ventilation than to erect a new building.

When the present High school was built it was provided with the best ventilating system then obtainable, but the value of this was destroyed when the rooms were cut up by partitions to provide more space for the students.

The surprise at the lack in the present plans is all the greater when it is recalled the importance attached to ventilation by the Department. The revised design has received the approval of the officials at Toronto and how they ever came to pass it is the problem.

One prominent member of the Board of Education is quoted as saying that cutting down the plans by leaving out the assembly room and the gymnasium destroyed the system of ventilation which was provided for in the original designs.

Four Stand Pat

At least four members of the Council are outspoken in their opposition to granting any more money and they claim that as another debenture issue would have to be authorized by a two-thirds vote so that the proposition is likely to be defeated.

Real Estate Transfers

Earthquake Split An Island in Two.

VALPARAISO, Chile, May 18. — Canadian Press. — A scientific expedition headed by the American geologist Bailey Willis has just returned from the islands of San Ambrosia and San Felix, 300 miles west of Chanaral, having verified the conditions reported by Captain Campbell of the steamer Martha in March when he encountered a great tidal wave and evidences of the havoc wrought by the November earthquake and subsequent shocks there.

The expedition, which Captain Campbell accompanied, went to the scene on the Chilean despatch boat Aguila. When nearing the islands a rise in the temperature of the sea to 3 degrees Cntigrade above teh normal was noted.

San Ambrosia was almost denuded of bird life and but few birds were left. The scientists found a great gap crossing the smaller islands and evidences that there had been heavy emanations of sulphur gas, Dr. Willis will study the effects of the shocks in Northern Chile before returning to the United States. The return of an expedition sent to Easter Island, 2500 miles distant, early in February, is expected soon.

U.S. TIMBER IS BEING RAPIDLY CLEARED OUT

United States Will Soon Be Faced With a Serious Shortage Unless Immediate Steps Are Taken.

FOR CONSERVATION.

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 18.—(Canadian Press.)—Lumber production has been gradually decreasing in the United States, reports the Department of Agriculture. A survey recently made of thirty-seven Eastern and Southern lumber producing States showed that in one only was a slight increase made in 1920. On the other hand, States on the Pacific Coast report substantial increases, showing that the centre of production is shifting to the Western States, the last of the softwood reserves in the United States.

Thirty years ago after the depletion of New York and Pennsylvania white pine sections, the American lumber market was drawing its supply from the Great Lakes States. When the source in those sections became exhausted and the forests no longer able to supply the demand or furnish enough to keep the mills in operation, the industry moved to the Southern yellow pine region, and is rapidly duplicating the same procedure here.

The inevitable result will be," says the Department of Agriculture's bulletin on the lumber situation, "that within the near future we shall be wholly dependent upon the reserve of all-purpose softwoods, the Pacific slope. Not only is this the only remaining domestic source of softwoods ,but a recent survey of the world's supply of this commodity discloses the fact that there are few foreign forests of this character that we may draw upon when our own are exhausted.

"These figures and facts suggest several questions that touch the welfare of every individual in our growing population. What will be the effect when our timber is gone? What will be the several stages of adjustment? What steps should be taken to meet the national needs?

"The aevrage rate of decrease over the last thirteen years has been about 2 per cent. a year. The figures for 1920 are about 27 per cent. lower than the high production peak that was reached in 1907, when we produced about 46,000,000,000 feet. We have passed the high point and the present tendency downward is permanent. Since this is the case, there must be some active steps taken to insure permanent local sources of timber for the future."

The bulletin just published discusses this problem with clearness and sets forth figures based on facts. The material presented is of importance in considering the attitude to be taken toward the remaining timber resources. This attitude must be the reflection of public opinion. For this reason the bulletin is available for general distribution, that the public may have the opportunity of ascertaining facts regarding the development of the last decade and may understand the vital importance of timber as an adjunct to continued prosperity.

EDISON SAYS MOVIES BETTER THAN BOOKS

Pictures Are Most Powerful Means of Influencing People at the Present Time — Children Can Learn Better From Them Than From Books — Taught Children Chemistry.

NEW YORK, May 18. — Thomas A. Edison gave his opinions of the movies as an influence on public tion for children yesterday when opinion, and as a medium of educacalled as an expert witness for the U. S. Government at a hearing in the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of charges that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was trying to monpoolise the moving picture industry.

Mr. Edison was called as a Government expert at the hearing to testify in support of the contention that control of the motion picture industry would give tremendous power to anybody or any company that controlled it.

Asked whether he thought moving pictures were very powerful in influencing people, Mr. Edison replied:

"There is nothing so powerful as motion pictures in influencing people. They are the most powerful means of influencing people at the present time, and will increase in power from year to year. Whoever controls the motion picture industry controls the most powerful medium of influence over the people."

Calls Pictures Better Than Books.

"I think motion pictures have just started," he said in answer to a question about the future of the industry. "It is my opinion that in twenty years children will be taught through pictures and not through books."

Mr. Edison said that he regarded moving pictures as 100 per cent. perfect for teaching They could influence people mightily for good or bad in the moral sense. They were the best means for the dissemination of knowledge ,especially among the children. He said he believed that children were more susceptible to education through the screen than persons of twenty years of age—more susceptible to good and bad influences alike.

"I have made numbers of investigations alongg the line of teaching children by other methods than books," Mr. Edison testified. "I made an experiment with a lot of pictures to teach children chemistry. I got twelve children to write down what they had learned from the pictures they had seen. It was amazing to me that such a complicated subject as chemistry was readily grasped by them to a large extent through pictures. The parts of the pictures that they did not understond I did over and over again, until they finally understood the entire pictures."

Mr. Edison said that he had discontinued the making of educational pictures after he had invited a delegation of the Board of Education to visit him and had explained the theory of picture education to them, and they had failed to take any action.

Started a Museum By Buying a Shirt.

NEW YORK, May 18. Canadian Press. — One of the worlds greatest museums and perhaps the finest Indian museum in the United States, grew out of the purchase by George Gustav Heye of a Navajo Indian's shirt. Last November the Museum of the American Indian was formally opened in New York City. The director of the museum is Mr. Heye.

Some years ago when Mr. Heye was a mining engineer in charge of a construction gang, his attention was attracted by the brilliant embroideries in a shirt which a Navajo Indian was mending by the light of a camp fire. Mr. Heye was then superintending the construction of a spur of a railroad that was being built from Kingman, Ariz., to a mine in the neighborhood. That same night he purchased the Indian's shirt for $5, and this started him on the path of collecting the thousands of fascinating objects which are now in the new museum, as in a temple of our ancient history. The new building holds only about one-fifth part of this collection. More than 1,000,000 objects gathered by him and his explorers are in warehouses, carefully catalogued.

NEW YORK CITY SCOUTS GREET BADEN POWELL

Founder of the Great Scout Movement is Welcomed By Scouts of the United States.

GREAT OVATION.

NEW YORK, May 18.—A notable event in Scouting activities took place last night when more than 2,000 volunteer scout workers gathered at the Hotel Commodore to participate in a dinner rally given in appreciation of their service, and in honor of Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the British Boy Scout movement. Sir Robert and Lady Baden-Powell were guests at a reception just before the dinner, which was under the auspices of the Boy Scout Foundation of Greater New York and through the generosity of John McE. Bowman.

Sir Robert, as he said, brought with him the most friendly handclasp from the boy cousins in England ,and he promised the American boys that he would take back their messages with him, that the English boys might know they had many friends as well as relatives in the United States. He received a deafening ovation from the scouts, who were present as walters.

The Natural Laxative

Says Dr. Evans in the Chicago Tribune: "Put three teaspoons of bran in a cup of boiling water. Spoon it up slowly. The water itself is helpful, the moist bran is palatable. Half a cup of this wet, hot bran twice a day, with a little sugar, between meals will cure the most stubborn case of constipation."

A natural bran, of course, must be used. Tillson's Health Bran is the coat of plump, clean, white Ontario winter wheat.

THE HYDRO PARTY.

It is to be hoped that the mooted formation of a Hydro party to participate in the Provincial election in Ontario will be speedily snuffed out.

In the first place the campaign is sufficiently complicated with the present line-up of parties without having a new group seeking the favour of the electors and adding to the confusion.

And secondly, the Hydro question is involving quite enough in politics now, without bringing it directly into the arena by the organization of a Hydro party.

Such an organization would probably only succeed in alienating support from the Hydro enterprises instead of gaining friends for it.

It would strengthen the antagonism of U.F.O. members against the scheme and in urban riding there would be danger of making enemies of one or other of the old parties.

There is no place in the campaign for a Hydro party and its promoters would be well advised in confining their efforts to something more useful or more likely to have beneficial results.

"NOT INTERESTED IN POLITICS."

A remark made by Mrs. Fallis, president of the Women's Liberal-Conservative Association in her address at Wednesday night's convention should be digested by the electors generally.

She declared that politics meant government, and that the person who said, "I am not interested in politics" was really affirming that he or she did not care how or by whom the province or the Dominion was governed.

Probably a lot of people who have rather boastfully declared that they were "not interested in politics" have not thought of all that their statement entailed.

A citizen really worthy of the name is interested in politics because the matter of government is something that whether we want to or not, plays a big part in the daily life of every individual.

We cannot afford to stand aloof from politics because in doing so we are paving the way for power to be assumed by a comparative few, we are making it easy for inefficiency to get into office, and we are playing ducks and drakes with our resources and our future.

Indifference on the part of the electors is invariably accompanied by slackness and slovenliness in administration.

The two are inseparable and until we realize that fact we cannot hope to escape from our burden of taxation, or from muddling and groping government.

TIME FOR A CHANGE.

With the endeavour of the Canadian Mail Contractors' Association to secure better terms from the Government for the rural mail carriers, the Examiner has no hesitation in expressing its sympathy.

It is possible that the remuneration they are asking—a yearly salary based on a rate of $70 per mile of the route covered—may be too high, but it is certain that the present remuneration is not just to the carriers.

In the first place the contract system should be scrapped.

If it ever had any merit it has long since been lost.

Rural carriers should be put on a salary basis and should be made to feel that so long as they do their work satisfactorily they are sure of employment at a fair rate of pay.

The carriers claim that the average yearly cost of the upkeep of the contractors' horses and rigs in the last five years has been $1,058, while the average yearly contract price payable by the Government has been $732.

Thus it is asserted that the rural mail contractors of Canada have had a yearly average loss of $326, without any account being taken of the contractors time or the responsibility they assume.

If these figures are correct—and there is no reason to doubt them—it must be fairly evident that the carriers are underpaid and that they are entitled to much fairer terms from the Government that employs them.

CUTTING DOWN THE SPREAD.

"Too great a spread between what the producer receives and what the consumer pays." In two places that same phrase occurs in election addresses delivered on Tuesday, says the London Advertiser. There was hardly a word's difference between the two. Neither of these speakers had uncovered anything new. The same thing has been written and said many times before.

There is a gap in between the producer and the seller. Figures covering a very wide range of articles give for every dollar 42 cents for selling and distributing, 20 cents for the primary producer, 17 cents to the manufacturer, and 14 cents is profit for retailer, wholesaler and manufacturer.

The only man who gets the effect of all these combined is the consumer, and he is credited with a full 100 per cent.

Consumers are paying for elaborate service, and they demand it. They are paying because they insist on their dealers carrying every known line of every known thing.

They are paying for packing and packages where they used to buy in bulk; they are paying the penalty as well for an overdone system of distribution.

They are paying 60 cents for an imported canned article that can be secured in bulk for 30 cents.

The consumer quite often helps to increase the spread between producer and himself because he is not a very keen or studious purchaser. He makes no particular effort to get as close to the source of supply as possible.

CHILDREN AND ACCIDENTS.

A little coloured lad was run down in Toronto by a truck and the jury considering his death recommends fining parents for allowing children to stray off on the streets. When they were about it the jury should have gone further and recommended that parents committing this offence be shot at sunrise without the bother of a trial.—London Advertiser.

At first blush the action of this partcilar jury seems to call for exactly the sort of remark made by the Advertiser.

And yet there is more than a grain of truth in the reasoning that led to such a recommendation.

It is a plain fact that if there were no children playing on the roadways there would be no killing of children to record.

The slaughter of youngsters by motor cars is a serious reflection upon our civilization—so serious that the cause should be investigated.

Often it is the carelessess of the child or more often its inexperience.

Doubtless it was the latter angle of the problem that actuated the Toronto jury in recommending the fining of parents.

That of course would be too drastic, but it will serve its purpose in bringing home to parents the need of constantly warning their children against the perils of the street.

The responsibility in the first place is with the parents—they must do what the can in keeping the little ones out of danger.

But a large share of the onus rests with the community.

To all who know the nature of child life and see the factors that go towards making up healthy manhood and womanhood this fact is indisputable, namely, that children must have opportunity to play, and a safe place in which to play.

Unfortunately most towns are not planned with any such consideration in view. They just grow like Topsy, and the children are driven to the street as a play ground because nothing has been provided for them by the community.

A TAME RUSSIAN BEAR.

The conciliatory tone of the reply of the Soviet Government to the British ultimation, which The Times printed in full yesterday, causes general surprise After the tall talk which the Napoleonic Trotzky had addressed to his beloved Red Army; after all the defiant parades and meetings of protest in Moscow; after the apparent attempt to screw up the courage of the Russians to go to war with England if necessary to maintain the national honor, it was naturally expected that the British Foreign Office would get a pretty tart refusal of its demands. On the contrary, the most important of them are complied with.

The English trawlers illegally seized off the Russian coast are to be released. For the insulting note addressed by the agent of the Soviet Government to the representative of Great Britain to Moscow a rather bungling apology is made. The explanation given is that it was written by a man who was naturally excited and indignant, but that as it never really reached the British Government, whose subordinate in Russia declined to receive it on account of its offensive nature, it ought to be considered as never having been presented, and therefore to be dropped out of consideration. As regards other points raised by the peremptory communication of Lord Curzon, the Soviet Government sets up a denial of the facts alleged in some cases, and in others offers to have the matters in dispute settled in conference or by arbitration,

On one issue the Soviet Government visibly shuffles. Thns is the question of anti-British propaganda in Persia, India, Afghanistan and other countries of the Orient. It must be remembered that an absolute undertaking to refrain from anything of this kind was one of the considerations—perhaps the chief one—which led the British Government to enter into its trade agreement with the Soviets in 1921. This was defended by the then Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, on the ground that it might prove to be of benefit to English commerce, but would certainly be a distinct advantage to British interests in the Far East. The Indian Government would breathe more easily if were freed from the anxieties caused by the Bolshevist agitations among the natives. And what Lord Curzon directly charged was that the Soviet Government had been false to its promise solemnly given to refrain from such machinations in the Orient.

What do the Soviets say in defense or exculpation? First of all, they assert that officially nothing has been done by the Soviet Government in the Far East except to maintain friendly relations with the Governments there, and to look after legitimate Russian interests. Next they take up the accusation that they had in reality been working through the Third International. They proceed gravely to deny that they are or can be in any way identified with that organization. Consequently, they ask that this question should not again be raised. This they must have written down with a wink at each other. For they know how thoroughly the world understands that the Third International is only a convenient alias for the Soviet Government. The aims of the two are the same, the personnel of the two often overlaps, and it is inconceivable that the Third International should attempt to inspire insurrection against British rule in the Far East without the connivance, or at least the silent consent, of the Soviet Government. Under this head the Soviet response to the British Foreign Office is unsatisfactory because it is so manifestly evasive and insincere.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Canada is looking into the capture of a Canadian by Chinese bandits. It is to be hoped the fleet won't have to be ordered out.

Premier Drury says the Biggs' roads will last for five hundred years. But perhaps he only meant to convey the impression that Ontario would be that long in paying for them.

Most Ontario people would rather see the weather warm up than have the political campaign do so.

Remarks on the weather these days have been so cut up by the censor that there is little left for publication.

In spite of the O.T.A., Ontario seems to have gone definitely wet.

They are trying to blame the Gulf Stream for the bad weather. In Ontario, however, some people seem to think the O. T. A. is in some way responsible.

Why People Become Nervous and Run-down

Prominent Health Official Explains

By G. M. Lipinski, M. D. Former Member of Philadelphia, U. S. A. Health Department

"The reason why persons who are weak, anaemic, nervous and run-down have gotten into that condition is because they are so constituted that they use up their vital energy and nerve force quicker than their bodies can replace it."

"Their systems fail to extract from the food they eat and retain in sufficient quantity those mineral elements without which the body is absolutely unable to create vital energy and nerve force. And so they go on expending, day by day, their vital energy without adequately replenishing the supply until their systems become completely run-down, their blood gets impoverished and their nerves are unstrung. The mineral elements which are essential in the creation of vital power are particularly calcium, potassium, sodium, phosphorus and iron. And these elements must be administered to those patients whose systems do not extract them in sufficient quantity in the natural way from their food. That is why I always recommend Wincarnis for weak, anaemic, nervous and run-down patients. For Wincarnis contains all of these vitally necessary elements in a form that enables the system to readily assimilate them and which is acceptable to the most delicate stomach."

ENGLAND ADOPTS MANY REAL PRISON REFORMS

LONDON, May 18 (United Press.)—England may not be over-progressive ordinarily, according to American ideas, but when it is it goes all the way.

Stirred by stories about the home comforts installed in American prisons, the home office has decided that in all British prisons:

Neatly fitting tweed suits are to replace the present drab costumes embroidered with the famous "broad arrow."

Entertaining physical exercises, similar to those enjoyed in the army, will be substituted for the present monotonous prison yard drill.

Cells are to be made comfortable, with mirrors, washstands and bookshelves. Photographs of relatives and friends may be hung on cell walls.

The best behaved prisoners are to be permitted to eat together, and to talk at meals.

Cells may be decorated with flowers.

HALF BILLION IN IRISH WAR LOOT

DUBLIN, May 18 (United Press.)— It will cost upwards of $500,000,000 to repair the damage done by De Valera's "irregulars" since the foundation of the Irish Free State, according to a statement made by Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs.

Numerous serious financial and legal difficulties face the Free State authorities, according to the same official, not the least of which are to decide "who owns what and why, and how?"

"There are people who get rich quickly during the last ten months," declared O'Higgins, "and who have in their possession property and land to which they have not a scrap of legal title."

The Free State authorities have recovered much looted property, but it has not been easy to establish the actual owners thereof, and many looters have converted their ill-gotten goods into cash, with which they have made big purchases of land, etc. Endless lawsuits are promised.

BABY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA

ALL mother's should know of this grand boon, Zam-Buk," writes Mrs. E. Cossett, of Joggin Bridge, Digby Co., N.S.

"My baby girl suffered cruelly from itching eczema for over a year. When doctor's treatment failed I used other salves and lotions. But still the sores spread all over the face and shoulders. Imagine a babe, less than a year old, having to go through such fiery skin torture!

Zam-Buk goes right to the root of skin disease. Whether the trouble be ordinary pimples, rashes and blotches, or chronic eczema, ringworm, poisoned sores or ulcers, nerves can't anything but Zam-Buk. Also for piles, cuts, burns, scalds, sprains, etc.

"A friend said get this herbal Zam-Buk. She told me that if this didn't answer, well, nothing else could. I found that Zam-Buk gave the child great ease, and before the first box was used up we saw marked improvement.

"Day by day, under the influence of Zam-Buk, the sores continued to die away until the eczema was confined to the shoulder where it had always been most severe. By degrees this part also was purified and healed by Zam-Buk."

ONTARIO SETTLED TEMPERANCE ISSUE

Drury Declares Ferguson's Policy to Be Both Nebulous and Hazy.

HAMILTON, May 18 (Canadian Press). — Premier Drury told a meeting of his constituents at Burlington last night that the sum and substance of the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson's nebulous temperance policy was lax enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act.

"Any man who bids for the support of the electorate on such a plea as that is working to undermine the structure of our state, and all right thinking people in Ontario should appreciate this fact."

The issue was simply this, he said: On one side his Government was determined to enforce and maintain the Temperance Act to the hilt, on the other side was the Hon. Mr. Ferguson, who in hazy, nebulous language, was holding out the hope to the "wets" of this Province that if he is returned there will be no enforcement of the Act.

Mr. Drury contended that the people of Ontario had settled the temperance question by a popular verdict.

POLITICAL FUTURE RANEY IN DOUBT

Attorney-General Will Announce His Decision at Fergus on Saturday

TORONTO, May 18.—(Canadian Press). — Until Attorney-General Raney delivers his address before his constituents at the East Wellington U.F.O. convention at Fergus Saturday, there is to be no definite statement as to his political future. Upon his return to the Parliament Buildings, yesterday, Mr. Raney declined to give a lead one way or the other as to whether he would stay in the Cabinet or whether he would retire, as he has intimated in his letter to the Premier.

One definite detail alone could be gathered after yesterday's Cabinet meeting, at which function Hon. Mr. Raney's retirement was discussed, and that was that the Attorney-General was remaining in the Cabinet until after the election, although nothing in the way of a definite statement could be secured in that direction. It was learned, however, that the Attorney-General is open to conviction as to the necessity of his remaining in the Cabinet, and that his mind is to be made up after further domestic parleys and consultations with his constituents. It is understood that his colleagues of the Cabinet prevailed upon him yesterday to give further consideration to his contemplated step and remain with them if at all possible. "I am going to the convention at Fergus on Saturday," stated the Attorney-General, after the Council meeting yesterday, "and anything I have to say will have to be said before my constituents."

Shot Gun Backs Up Plea of This Preacher

ADJUTANT F. W. LUBBES.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 17.—Some folks say a shot-gun and a "billy" club are handy things to have around—even when preaching religion.

F. W. Lubbes, adjutant of the Gospel Army Volunteers, is one of them.

Lubbes is known in these parts as "The Pied Piper of Religion." And it has been a well-earned title, those who know him intimately vouch.

But, as Hans Anderson once said, "let's begin at the beginning."

Has Been Unafraid.

Lubbes has been fearless in his attacks on vice, booze and gambling. He was determined to drive them from the community. And so he would take his big drum and trumpet and parade the street. Crowds that trailed in his wake gathered about him in his little mission.

His has been a single-handed morality campaign.

Then came the climax! He announced his next sermon would be on the subject, "The Dirty Bums of Southtown." He would use names, too, he vowed.

Now "The Dirty Bums of Southtown" is a thesis that is bound to attract attention. It did. All paths led in the direction of the little mission that night. Most of the people came in, but many stayed outside. The group on the outside gathered in numbers, until, as crowds go, it developed into a mob.

Many of the unwelcome intruders may have had experience in throwing hand grenades. If so, they utilized their newly acquired art, but substituted stones. The cobbles crashed through the windows of the mission and the mob crashed through the doors.

Leaders carried buckets of water, which they intended—and did—use to extinguish the fire of the preacher's eloquence. Thus the meeting was broken up.

But never flinching, Lubbes next day announced the regular service would go ahead as usual. And if any disturbers appeared, they would be greeted by buckshot and club.

Now all is serene.

The police, whom he has helped rid the community of bootleggers and other undesirables, rallied to his aid. They placed an extra patrol on duty, and the sidewalk outside of the mission resembled for a time the courtyard of Buckingham Palace when the King's guard is holding a review.

Relies on Armory.

Passersby are scrutinized carefully, and those carrying buckets of water are viewed with downright suspicion. No loitering is permitted in front of the little mission house. Go in, or go on, say the police.

"If they want shot-gun religion," snaps the fighting parson, "I'm here to give it to them. No intimidation goes with me. I'm converting folks every day and lifting them to a higher plane of life.

"And," he paused significantly, pointing to his armory, "I'll keep on, too, until I convert the very fellows who stoned my mission and doused me."

FOLK COLD TO LAWYERS ON ACCOUNT HIGH RATE

LONDON, May 18. — (Associated Press).—The high cost of litigation in England continues to spell hard times for lawyers. People prefer to settle their disputes out of court before they find themselves up to the neck in costs, or submit their dispute to arbitration, and the lawyers get no sympathy in their finanicial troubles from the general public.

Once in court, however, in the interests of a client, a barrister has a chance to recoup. Custom prescribes that he must be paid in advance. He gets a cash payment for his first appearance, a stipulated sum for every additional appearance, and there is no limit on what he may charge.

WILL NOT ABANDON HER REPARATIONS

LAUSANNE, May 18. — (Canadian Press.)—The great Mohammedan festival of Bairam, when followers of Mohammed relax and rejoice after a period of thirty days of fasting, brought no repose of gaiety to Ismet Pasha, yesterday, nor to the Near East conference.

The situation between Turkey and Greeee over the problem of reparations is grave and the conference presumably is imperilled because all direct efforts by Ismet Pasha and Eliptheries Venizelos to settle this dangerous issue "out of court" have so far failed absolutely. Angora and Athens leaders after fruitless discussion agreed to disagree and submit the issue to the conference in an attempt to find a solutiton. Ismet declared Turkey could not abandon the principle of Grecian reparations, but in spirit of conciliation, stood ready to leave fixation of the actual amount to arbitrators.

M. Venizelos contended that Greece should receive reparations from Turkey because of the economic disaster caused to the Greeks when they fled from the Turks, abandoning homes and fortunes.

GAINS 10 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS

Popular Commercial Traveller Strongly Recommends Dreco, the Ideal Tonic and Regulator. His Story is Particularly Interesting at This Season of the Year.

Mr. Samuel Toples of 340 Charlotte Street, Peterborough, Ontario, the well-known traveller for B. F. Ackerman, Son & Ltd., discovered in Dreco an ideal corrective for internal ailments. Mr. Toples says:

"For years, my stomach, kidneys and liver have troubled me. My food would sour, causing indigestion gas and heartburn. Had a sharp pain in the small of my back from my kidneys and suffered terrible dizzy spells which at time got the best of me so that I could hardly keep up with my work. Had pains in my stomach and chest from the gas and my bowels seemed locked as I had always to be taking medicine to keep them open. I was very nervous and could not sleep and my appetite was very poor. I hardly knew what it was to eat a square meal.

"I suffered with these ailments for several years and tried almost every kind of medicine without result. Then, fortunately, I heard about Dreco and gave it a trial. One bottle has done more good for me than anything I have ever used. Most of my troubles have vanished and I can carry on my work with great comfort. I intend to finish the full treatment and have my wife, whose health has been poorly, take it also."

All of Mr. Toples' troubles were traceable to his stomach. Dreco prepared especially for the stomach from medicinal herbs and roots, quickly restores it to healthy functions and builds up the whole system. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

Laxative Syrup Pepsin Helps Nature Give Relief

Try it when a Laxative is needed and see the wonderful results

IT is not necessary to take a violent physic for so simple an ailment as constipation. Yet many thoughtless parents give mercury in the form of calomel, and coal-tar in the form of phenol when a natural vegetable compound like Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin will do the work equally well and without danger.

People should realize that mercury may salivate and in certain conditions loosen the teeth; that phenolphthalein, by whatever name known and however disguised in candy, may cause dermatitis and other skin eruptions; that salt waters and powders may concentrate the blood, dry up the skin and cause lassitude.

You can take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin yourself or give it to a babe in arms, as thousands of mothers do every day, with the confidence that it is the safest and best medicine you can use for constipation and such complaints. A teaspoonful will relieve you over night even if the constipation has been chronic for years. Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, and does not cramp or gripe. Every druggist handles it, and bottles are so generous that the cost amounts to only a cent a dose. You buy it with the understanding that if it does not do as claimed your money will be refunded. The names of all the ingredients are on the package.

Mrs. Geo. Reeve, of Galt, Ont., uses Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin with good results and is greatly pleased with it; and Mrs. K. Jennings, of Toronto, Ont., finds it very satisfactory. Bring a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin into your own home and let the family use it for constipation, biliousness, wind, gas, headaches, flatulency, and to break up fevers and colds.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try my Laxative Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 23 Caldwell Building, Toronto, Ont. Do it now!

LIKE TO GO BAREHEADED? WELL, YOU MUST BE INSANE!

SEATTLE, May 17. — When you visit Seattle be sure to bring along your hat. Otherwise a policeman is liable to approach you cautiously and say with a smile:

"Come King, the Queen awaits you!"

For in the ABC's of Seattle police instruction, according to words attributed to Chief Severyns, a hatless man walking on a street is a likely candidate for an insane asylum.

Students of the University of Washington are having their troubles. They believe in conventions all right, but can't be convinced that going without a hat on a nice, sunshiny day is exactly a crime.

Yet they claim cops stop them and submit them to a line of questioning that has a suspicious ring to it.

"Why have you no hat!"

"Why are you walking around the streets with your head naked?"

Those are dirty questions, aren't they?

Naturally the students are indignant. But when pressed for an explanation the chief replied:

"Well, the cops have good reason for stopping them. Bareheadedness is the first sign of insanity. We capture most of our lunatics in that manner."

So DO come to Seattle! You MUST come over! But bring your hat!

CHARLES O. STILLMAN ON THE OIL PROSPECTS

MONTREAL, May 18—(Canadian Press).—Charles O. Stillman, president of Imperial Oil, Limited, was in Montreal yesterday on a tour of inspection. Questioned as to the effect of the budget upon the Canadian oil industry, Mr. Stillman said: "The removal of the bounty on the production of crude oil in Canada by the Minister of Finance will have no effect upon our Western drilling operations. We never contemplated that we would receive a bounty if we found oil in the West or elsewhere in Canada in quantity. The question has never been what the Government should pay us but what we should pay the Government."

74 BODIES FOUND IN SCHOOL HOUSE RUINS TERRIBLE HOLOCAUST

Long Distance Phone Message Reports Terrible Disaster in Cleveland, South Carolina.

COLUMBIA, S.C., May 18. — (Special). — Sixty - six bodies had been taken from the ruins of a Cleveland school-house, eight miles from Camden, at six o'clock this morning, according to a long-distance 'phone message received here this morning from Chief of Police H. L. Whittaker, of Camden. The Chief said that the searchers were satisfied that at least eight or ten more bodies remain in the ruins.

Chief Whittaker said that persons from miles around were at the scene aiding in the rescue work, and that an undetermined number of injured had been brought to Camden Hospital. The confusion at the scene was such, he said, that it was impossible to get exact details of the disaster.

A later despatch says the disaster resulted from a fire which swept the structure during an entertainment last night. The search of the ruins is being continued.

In addition to those burned and trampled to death in the panic following the explosion of the kerosene lamp, dozens were in the hospitals to-day suffering from Broken legs and arms. Two persons, who leaped from the second story windows suffered broken backs.

The Chief of Police at Camden, near here, took charge of the rescue work.

Heart-rending Sight.

Sergeant T. Silton, of the Camden police force, stated at 8.15 this morning that 74 bodies had been counted. Most of them were so badly burned as to be unrecognizable, Silton said.

Between 400 and 800 persons were packed into the hall on the second floor of the schoolhouse for the entertainment.

"It was the most heart-rending sight I ever saw," Sergt. Silton told the United Press. "When I got there the schoolhouse was one mass of flames. People were screaming and groaning. Those who had got out were trying to get back to release those penned in."

"We tried to get them out, but the fire spread so fast that it was no use. The building burned like tinder. People who jumped out of the windows nearly all had broken bones. Some of them forgot all about their own injuries when they remembered the children or other loved ones left behind in the hall.

"You couldn't get at the facts about it for a long time, the survivors were so excited and grief-stricken. This was a country schoolhouse where they use kerosine for lighting.

"One of them got loose of the hook pulled out from the ceiling. It fell right in the middle of the crowd and exploded.

Screaming and Running.

"A lot of people were burned then and everybody started screaming and running for the doors and windows. They all got jammed on the stairways and in the hall leading to the street, and they didn't have a chance after they got in there.

"Nobody could help them, and the worse they fought and struggled the tighter they got jammed in. From the look of some of the bodies we took out they were trampled to death when the fire got them. We could not get into the building to get their bodies out for a long time. The fire was so hot. There was nothing left of the building at all. I never saw anything so terrible in my life."

The charred bodies of the victims were laid in rows on the ground as fast as they were brought out.

AUTOIST SENTENCED TO FIFTEEN YEARS

TORONTO, May 18—(Canadian Press)—Pleading guilty to a charge of manslaughter. Alfred John Dann was sentenced to fifteen years in Kingston Penitentiary by Justice Lennox yesterday afternoon for killing of Annie Fields on April 14th. The original charge of murder was changed with consent of the crown and sentence was pronounced following a strong plea for clemency by counsel for defense. The prisoner received sentence without a change in that pathetic expression which he has worn throughout the proceedings.

In summing up the evidence His Lordship spoke of the fact that Dann was patently strongly under the influence of intoxicants at the time of committing the crime.

SAYS PROGRESSIVES STOLE PLANKS FROM LIBERALS' PLATFORM

Hon. S. F. Tolmie Scathingly Criticizes Farmers' Amendment to Federal Budget—W. D. Euler Has Little Faith in Platforms.

DEBATE ON BUDGET.

OTTAWA, May 18 (Canadian Press. — Members of all parties joined yesterday in further debate in the Commons on the Budget. The Progressive amendment, said Hon. S. F. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture in the former Government, was interesting from the fact that Progressives had taken planks from the Liberal platform of 1919 to amend the Liberal Budget of 1923.

Dr. Tolmie, when first he heard of the amendment, thought there might be excitement at the vote, but on reading his terms he had come to the conclusion, so he told the laughing House, that the division would be as exciting as the waving of a red flag at a dead bull.

Expressing a personal view, W. D. Euler, Liberal, North Waterloo, told the House that he had "very little confidence in platforms anyway." He did not think that the Government should necessarily be asked to accept what might be "ill-digested planks" in any platform. For himself, he would say frankly that the 1919 platform "should not in public interests be permitted to shackle the Government responsible to all the people, whether it be tariff or anything else. He did not, however, believe that in his Budget speech Mr. Fielding had intended to convey the impression that the tariff was as unchangeable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. For laws of the Medes and Persians."

For the Progressives, R. J. Woods, Dufferin, Ont., criticised the Budget as a rich man's Budget.

J. W. Findlay, Progressive, of South Bruce, observed that he had been buoyed up with the hope of getting something in the way of a tariff reduction from this "so-called Liberal Government." The time might well come, he added amid Liberal cries of "Oh, oh!" when we may be prompted, perhaps from a spirit of revenge, to join our forces with the Conservative group, from which we have not hopes of getting anything.

ANGUS J. KENNEDY FOR TEMISKAMING

NEW LISKEARD, May 18.—(Canadian Press).—Angus J. Kennedy was the unanimous choice of Timiskaming Conservatives yesterday afternoon Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and Charles McCrea, Sudbury, and the popularity of the candidate were the drawing cards. Mr. Ferguson promised that the North would get in his government a Minister of Mines who had knowledge of and was sympathetic to industry. He scored Hon. Harry Mills administration. He gave definite promise of roads to new mining fields and of railway development. The Drury Government he said, had spent money like drunken sailors on the Southern Ontario speedways, but had woefully neglected the north.

Charles McCrea, Sudbury, gave rousing speech. He called Howard Ferguson, the "Hope of the North Country." He compared Ferguson's and Drury's timber records on the Shevlin Clake and Backus deals. The Drury cabinet minister who said he would not permit any of his six sons to come to Northern Ontario was the subject of caustic comment from all speakers.

There is a beauty in health that is far more attractive to men than mere regularity of features or a made-up complexion. Health should be the first essential of women who want to win and hold admiration, respect and love. FRENCH OCCUPATION TO COERCE GERMANY

Not Necessary for France's Security Declares Premier Poincare.

PARIS May 18 (Canadian Press). —Military occupation of the Ruhr by the French troops is not necessary to the security of France, Premier Poincare informed members of the Finance and Foreign Affairs Commissions in the French Chamber yesterday.

The occupation of the Ruhr is he added, essentially an operation designed to coerce Germany into paying reparations. He reiterated that the Ruhr could be gradually vacated in proportion to the payment of the German reparations.

The occupation of the left bank of the Rhine was considered by the Government as sufficient military security.

Incidentally, M. Poincare, in reviewing the four months of occupation and asking the Commission to approve the credits for the continuation of the operation, informed the deputies that the receipts from the Ruhr since 11th January had covered the strictly military expenses which occupation entailed.

The cost of the Ruhr troops to the treasury, after deducting the amount which it would have been necessary to provide for these soldiers had they remained in France amounted to 61,000,000 francs, and expenditures for civilians 2,650,000 francs.

TWO POLICEMEN SHOT BY ROGERS

NORTH BAY, May 18. Canadian Press. — Leo Rogers, who made such a sensational escape from the district court here on Wednesday morning, is still at large.

Constable William McGovern and Plainclothesman Fred Lefebvre, both of North Bay, are in the hospital here suffering from serious wounds coused by Rogers in a night long chase in which scores of citizens took a part, and which ended this morning when the fugitive, armed to the teeth with automatic revolvers, took refuge among the rocks in the country about two miles south of North Bay and near the shore of Lake Nippissing.

Plainclothesman Lefebvre may die. He was shot through the lungs just as the chase was resumed this morning after an all night siege of Rogers in the bush where he had ambushed himself since late last night.

Constable McGovern, who is a former member of the Royal Irish Constabulary, was shot through the right thigh from an ambush wich Rogers laid for the police last night, when an automobile load of the town force answered a telephone call from the east end of the town.

It was discovered afterwards that it was Rogers himself who had sent the telephone message to the police, talking as a "friend of Rogers," and having described minutely his own appearance, he told the police where Rogers would be when they arrived.

The moment the police car stopped in front of the garage behind which Rogers was supposed to have been hiding the fugitive opened fire from behind a tree and McGovern was wounded. This was a signal for a general mobilization of the citizens, and a possee was armed to watch the swamp where Rogers was believed to be in hiding. It was while closing up on Rogers this morning that Lefebvre received his wound.

Efficient Housekeeping

The modern idea of efficiency extends into the household as well as into every branch of business. Most housewives pride themselves upon the fact that their homes are conducted in an efficient, business-like manner.

Every housewife knows, too, that the business of running a house, providing for the wants and needs of the different members of the family and meeting the almost daily emergencies is second to none.

The Want Ads, in the Examiner are a great boon to the efficient housewife. In securing helpers, in purchasing various articles of household equipment, disposing of discarded furniture, in fact in countless ways, the Want Ads. are the housewife's most valuable assistant.

Don't let diapers irritate your baby's skin

NO matter how carefully you bathe and powder him—if his diapers are washed with harsh soap—his tender skin will suffer.

The diaper rash that is the source of such severe suffering to babies is caused by this very thing—washing diapers with harsh or impure soaps.

Safe for all his little clothes

Keep your baby's diapers soft and comfortable. Wash them in pure, safe Lux suds and thoroughly rinse.

There is no free alkali in Lux to stick to them and make them irritating. No harmful ingredient to inflame the sensitive skin. These pure flakes are safe for all the clothes that touch his tender skin.

LABOR ADVANCE GAINS GROUND.

Collective Bargaining Now Is Binding in Most of the European Countries.

LONDON, May 18. — Probably one of the most far reaching departures from pre-war industrialism the war has produced, is revealed by the steady growth of collective bargaining.

In the movement is demonstrated the advancement of power of the workers the world over. It is as though the war awakened in the workers the consciousness of interdependence, the realization of a dynamic force possession power potential. The psychological influence is not in doubt. To it is attributed much that is just, and much that is unjust, in relation to the unsettlement in conditions industrial in virtually every country.

In all the countries of Europe, excepting perhaps, those where chaos reigns, an examination of the position reveals analagous conditions. Italy, Spain, France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, the Balkans, Holland, Belgium, Norway, Sweden—they all synchronize, so possibly the coming of the League of Nations, bringing in its train the International Labor Conference, has had a salutory effect.

In England in 1917

It was near the close of 1917 when the movement in its present guise commenced to grip Great Britain. The question of the post-war relations between employers and employed was emerging, so a committee was set up to study the problem. It was presided over by Mr. Whitley, now Speaker of the House of Commons, and its report became known as the Whitley Report. The recommendations which were acted upon involved the setting up of joint councils representative equally of employers and employed in industries, called joint industrial councils. They in turn were to establish District Councils and works committees on the same basis. The idea caught on, though not at first, because trade unions were fearful of losing their powers.

Today there are approximately 80 of these councils in existence for as many different industries, employing about 4,000,000 workers. Then the trade boards act of 1909 which applied originally to only four trades, was extended, and the passing of the act of 1918 resulted in 63 additional boards being established before the end of 1921. These through the medium of collective bargaining lay down fundamentals in trades employing another 3,000,000 workers, the decisions thus arrived at being enforced on all employers by law.

In addition, in the trade union world, there has been the tendency on the part of the smaller unions to amalgamate with the more powerful unions to obtain improvement of conditions. With the regrouping of the British railways, for the first time probably in the history of railway administration workers committees are an integral part of the system of management. So the devolution goes on, industry entering a new era, a new phase, which it is hoped will head the country peacefully through the post-war trammels of reconstruction. Many assert that these measures have been instrumental thus far in bringing England through the crisis, but such an assertion does not do justice to the stolidity of character of the average British working man.

BRITISH WEARY OF IRAK AFFAIR.

Sir Percy Cox Hints Two Years Will See End of Mandate, and There's a Reason.

LONDON, May 18.—"Perhaps in four years' time British responsibility will end." Does this let the cat out? Has the British government put a time limit on its stay in Mesopotamia? If the observation quoting Sir Percy Cox is taken at face value, it has.

Sir Percy has for several years been the British High Commissioner for Irak, as Mespotamia is officially called. In January, this year, he was suddenly recalled to London at the instance of special committee appointed by the government to go into the entire question of British commitments in the Near East. His co-operation and advice was wanted because he has spent 15 years on government service in the Persian Gulf, and he had barely got back there again when the news was flashed that he is packing up his traps to return home for good.

The explanation from the Colonial office, that he has terminated his period of service, is hardly satisfactory. His return lends itself to various constructions and to say the least is significant.

A Costly Mandate

Since Irak came under the mandate it has cost British taxpayers about $650,000,000. Bonar Law is not responsible for this, but he is for future commitments, and since all shades of public opinion have combined in demanding retrenchment in this direction, he is faced with the problem of how to get out of the maze he is in. The King Feisal treaty has yet to be indorsed by Commons, and the issue is one of which the Premier dare not allow introduction. It would open up the floodgates which might lead speedily to governmental immersion, but Bonar Law clearly has the alternative of taking the definite instruction of Parliament and acting accordingly. When the question was the subject of heated debate, he staved off a possible defeat by entering the plea "give me time to think it over." He got time, which he is still using, and the only subsequent variation in the situation is the argument that it will be impossible for Great Britain to define her policy until complete agreement has been reached with the Turks on Mosul. Perhaps this will be at Lausanne. Even then the demand is for more or less complete withdrawal from Irak, limiting retention to a small area around Basra, and before Bonar Law could do that he must either honor Sir Percy Cox's signature to the Feisal Treaty or repudiate it. If he honors it, he is committed for 20 years.

Taxing British Goods

Latterly, fuel has been added to the fire, and placed a further lever in the hands of the formidable anti-Irak party. Mr. Gilbert put the question to the Under Secretary for State in Commons: "Does the government of Irak impose any import duties on British goods imported into their country; if so on what goods, and to what extent?" Ormsby-Gore was obliged to answer in the affirmative, though unable to go into details.

It came as a shock to some members that King Feisal's ministry had raised a tariff wall against the products of British manufacturers. The information is no news to the leaders of industry, but it was to the taxpayers, and increased determination to force the pace. They have been soaked for $650,000,000 to finance Irak, and now their industries are being forced to carry import taxes to get into Irak what few goods they want to sell. It is too much for them.

PARIS TO NEW YORK IN ONLY 15 HOURS

PARIS, May 18, (United Press).—Mail from Paris will reach New York within fifteen hours when the "phantom airplane," invented by Captain Maurice Percheron, has been perfected.

This is a question of only a couple of years, French experts declare. The inventor believes he will be able to control a small airplane flying without a pilot, as it now does for a distance of about seventy miles, right around the globe.

French aeronautical engineers, while admitting that Americans have done a lot to make the "pilotless airplane" a practical success, insist that it was in France that the first experiments were made and they do not intend to give up their title to pione ers. Toward the end of the war Captain Boucher sent up the first of these airplanes guided by means of Hertazin waves. On Sept. 14 of the same year an airplane thus guided remained in the air fifty-one minutes, covering a total distance of hundred kilometers, or sixty miles. It was guided from another airplane flying in the ordinary way.

Since that time enormous progress has been made. The "pilotless airplane" is now almost entirely automatic. The hands of the pilot have been replaced by a mechanism something like that of an automatic elevator, with buttons marked "up", "Down", "To the Right" and "To the Left." By pushing these buttons two experts who recently made a long flight were able to dispense entirely with the balancing and directing apparatus. The next step will be to send the airplane on its flight without having this mechanism or any persons aboard, everything being directed from a fixed station on the ground.

Besides the main idea of guiding the airplane from a distance, the machine in which the experiments have been made combines several features any one which would be regarded as an enormous advance in the science of flying. As the airplane comes to the ground a trailer strikes the surface first, cutting off the motor and acting as a brake for an easy landing. There is also a delicate piece of mechanism which prevents the airplane from taking the air if the motor power is not sufficiently developed. Still another sends the machine to a determined height and will not permit it to mount higher.

Captain Percheron, aided by another veteran aeronautical engineer, Captain Boucher, is now devoting all his time to the perfection of the apparatus which will enable him to send an airplane on indefinite journey with what might be called "written instructions, since they would take the form of a perforated music roll for automatic pianos, which will be executed mathematically and atuomatically. He feels sure that he will in time be able to launch a machine for a flight of two hours and a half from Paris to Marseilles, four hours across the Mediterranean to Algiers, fifteen hours to New York, and forty-eight, including landings at pre-arranged stations, to the Far East.

Looking at the military side of this invention the possibilities of terrific destruction without danger to the attacking force an without known means of defense are infinite. Thousands of aerial canoes, loaded with explosives, could be sent over enemy territory, their deadly charges to be dropped when and where the directing army desired.

What about the garden and its spring planting and care? Do you know where you can get some good ever-bearing strawberry plants? What about some lawn and garden fertilizer? Do you know who has a section of of lattice fence to sell, or a quantity of wire netting and posts? Where can you get the ready-to-hand makings of a henhouse or garage? Or, if you don't want to spend the time on your garden preparation yourself, do you know where to get a handy man willing to do the the work? If you had been reading recent "Examiner" ads. you wouldn't be wondering about any of these things.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

WEIGHING THE BABY.

In some recent letter a correspondent asked "how" the baby should be weighed, what kind of scales. This is really most important—as in accurate weighing on trembling scales is of mighty little value when one considers that the gain is usually but a few ounces a week.

The cheap scales on which the baby is "hung" precariously and which sways and fluctuates with every movement of the child is a nuisance and don't tell the mother anything. The scales should be of the platform type on which the baby's tub or basket may be weighed and then the baby added to it, the increased weight being the young hopeful. As good ones of this type are expensive, one can make use of the grocer's scales once a week by taking precaution to dress the baby exactly the same at each visit and be sure there are no wet diapers to add their weight.

This same mother asked how many ounces we use to the pound in weighing a baby. Sixteen, dear lady.

When the baby is weighed at home he should be dressed in as few clothes as possible. Put him in his basket padded with a diaper just before his bath at the same time and the same day each week. If care is taken to deduct the weights of all the clothes and the basket from the total amount, the gain of the baby from the preceding week is fairly correct. Weekly weighing of the baby is a most important rite and one which the mother cannot afford to neglect. By his weekly gain we know just how young son or daughter is progressing in his development.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

In Germany, there are many old superstitions still observed by brides.

For instance, it is considered most unlucky for a bride to wear pearls. For everyone she may wear, her husband will cause her to shed a tear.

Sometimes, however, the bride will risk wearing them enclosed in a small casket or locket. So long as they are covered she need not fear, but if exposed a flood of tears necessarily must flow.

GOOD MANNERS

While tardiness in keeping a dinner engagement is rightly considered rude, punctuality at a luncheon is less vital.

This is not to be interpreted as allowing complete latitude to a guest but a matter of a few minutes one way or the other is not regarded as of much importance.

In fact, many invitations are worded "please come to lunch," without the specification of any exact time.

CLEANING CAKE PANS.

To clean the corners of your square cake pans you will find a small brush, such as you use for vegetables, useful.

HEAT THE KNIFE.

When cutting fresh bread, if you will heat the knife first you will be able to make your way through the loaf with less difficulty.

TO AVOID RUST STAINS.

If you will paint your bed springs a white or very light shade you will not be distressed by rust stains on your mattress.

USE BOILING WATER.

With most vegetables it is a mistake to start them in cold water, as they lose their flavor. Put them into water that is already boiling.

In the Sunset of Life

A comfortable and happy old age, care-free and independent—such can be your recompense, too, through life insurance.

Canadian Government statistics show the need for this provision:

"Ninety-five per cent. of men at 60 are dependent upon their daily earnings or on others for support, and not one man in thirty who retires with a competency is able to retain that competency to the close of his life."

People are realizing this fact, and life insurance companies in Canada are beginning to pay out more money to living policyholders than they do in death claims, despite the thousands of death claims annually.

The present is the time to make provision for the future, so that the sunset of your life will not be overcast with shadows.

Any life insurance representative will be pleased to show you how to provide a sure income for your later years.

(By Jack Jungmeyer.)

HOLLYWOOD, May 18. It has become a happy custom of the Wampas—Western Motion Picture Advertisers' Association, if you must have it in full— to present thirty comely comers in the movies at their annual frolic as "The Baby Stars" of the year.

To appreciate the full weight of their star-picking judgment and their prowess as prophets, you must know that the Wampas are those indefatigable boys vulgarly known as press agents—the boys who day by day herald the merits of their patrons from Beverly Hills to Broadway.

The Wampas constellation for, 1923, just selected for demonstrated ability as well as pulchritude, are herewith presented for your inspection, pictorially and typographically:

EVELYN BRENT, born in Tampa, Fla., first appeared in Metro pictures and now with Douglas Fairbanks under long contract; Mary Pickford calls her a perfect screen beauty. First appeared on stage at age of 14.

DERELYS PERDUE of Kansas City, Mo., started in pictures two years ago. Played bits with old Fox-Finis company. Now one of most promising of younger leading ladies in Robertson-Cole productions.

MARGARET LEAHY, a Londoner, who was "found" by Norma Talmadge recently after considerable cinema experience with English and French companies. Now appearing with Buster Keaton.

VIRGINIA BROWNE FAIRE comes from an old New York family. Her striking beauty caught attention of eastern film directors and she made her debut with the Metro Corporation. She is under contract with First National.

DOROTHY DEVORE hails from Fort Worth, Tex. Coming to Hollywood determined to enter films, she was given a try-out by Al Christie. She made good with a bang, and is regarded as one of the promising young prodigies of the Christie comedies.

ELEANOR BOARDMAN is a Quaker City girl with both screen and stage experience. From high school amateur performance she jumped to the speaking stage via a stock company, from which she found her way to the Goldwyn studio at Culver City, where she is held in high esteem.

LAURA LA PLANTE left Kansas City for a picture debut with Christie, and then moved over to the Universal lot where she has been playing leads. Kansas City sustained a great loss.

JOBYNA RALSTON is one of Tennessee's choicest products. She is dispersing the naive charm of her native Cumberlands through the medium of Harold Lloyd comedies. Got into films because no one had the heart to keep her out.

BETTY FRANCISCO is one of those perfect natural blondes whose beauty is the open sesame to flickerland. "Eyes, hair and other features blend perfectly," says her particular Wampas. Jesse D. Hampton found her; Goldwyn has her.

HELEN LYNCH scores heavily for Billings, Montana, She began at the bottom of the ladder on the Lasky lot and has been rapidly forging toward the top. Lasky directors are giving her every opportunity to express a variety of talent, to say nothing of looks.

PAULINE GARON came to Los Angeles from Canada with her family, and no particular desire to enter movies. Selected for a small part with First National, she photographed so well and exhibited such promise that she was persuaded by contract to remain. A real baby star!

ETHEL SHANNON is still Irish despite long residence in Denver. Hollywood hailed her with delight. She made her initial bow with Metro, and is now being directed by B. P. Shulberg in a Perfect Pictures career.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

ALBERTA COAL.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly allow me space for a few facts re the editorial of the 14th inst., on "The reason for the nine dollar rate."

You seem to imply that the responsibility for the rate rests with the different unions employed on the railways. I believe a goodly number of the public are of the same opinion.

This is due to a large extent to not knowing the rates of pay and conditions under which these men labor. The article referred to would include nearly all classes of railway labor and particularly those of the transportation department. The Alberta coal would come under the through freight rate, which for trainmen is four dollars and forty-eight cents for one hundred miles, which is equal to the eight hour day that is in operation, making a rate of fifty-six cents an hour. I understand the firemen's rate is four dollars and sixty-two cents per hundred miles, making a rate of fifty-eight cents an hour.

Those men are skilled in their line of work and should receive the same as other skilled tradesmen. I understand that the carpenters of Peterboro signed an agreement for seventy-five cents an hour, which was the lowest in the province. And other tradesmen are receiving a much higher rate than the carpenters. The above rates for railroad men are considerably lower as you can readily see than any of those tradesmen. The railroad men, while receiving the blame for the higher freight rates have conditions altogether different from the ordinary worker. The transportation men before getting work have to pass an examination on the rules, another on the air brake, also pass an eye and ear test. Enginemen and firemen have also to pass an examination on the engine.

In the busy season transportation men are called out, rain or snow, and at all hours, day or night. In the dull season they are often laid off for months, sometimes as many as thirty or forty at one terminal. Others probably get two or three days' work per week. Brakemen and firemen often have to work twelve to fifteen years before promotion gives them steady work as conductors or engineers and from twenty to twenty-five years before having a steady mixed train.

There is an ever-increasing demand on the part of the public in recent years for anything that helps to eliminate accidents, such as overhead bridges, crossing bells, crossing watchmen, all of which help to keep up freight rates. In recent years the roadbed and equipment of all kinds has greatly improved.

I trust that this information will convince you we receive no more than our due.

Sincerely yours,
RAILROADER.

DRINK SIGNALS WRECK GANG OF BIG CROOKS

PARIS (By Mail to United Press). — When a member of Dan Norton's gang of international high-class crooks asked for a Scotch and soda or a green creme de menthe, it meant just that to the bartender and the innocent bystander, but to any other member of the band who happened to be within hearing it conveyed the information that the "deal has gone through," or "must see you right away."

This method of communicating with each other, when they were supposed to be total strangers, served the crooks well for quite a while, but it had disadvantages which resulted in the capture by the Paris sleuths of the leader of the gang and eight of his lieutenants, including "the little girl from London," who acted as the decoy.

French plain-clothes men had been on the trail of the crooks for months, but had been unable to connect them with the scores of robberies of money and jewellery reported from the best hotels of Paris, London, and Brussels, the victims being chiefly Americans and Englishmen.

It was the "bar-room telegraphy" which proved their undoing. Dan Norton, the "man with the cauliflower ear," had had so many messages to transmit to his pals that when he left the Hotel Continental after a big haul of gems he wasn't able to navigate the perilous crossing of the Rue de Rivoli, and was picked up by the sleuth. In the police station abundant proof of his profession was found in his pockets.

Meanwhile, Daisy Evans, so-called wife of an Australian member of Norton's confederation, had been transmitting similar messages to sundry gentlemen of cosmopolitan appearance in a bar near the Opera.

Having had to change her order many times to "get the story over," she was found an hour or so later careening down the Rue Daunou, shrieking "Tipperary."

The plain-clothes man specially accredited to her saved her from the regular "cop on the beat," and sent her to join Norton. Within an hour the others were all gathered in.

Frenchman Tells How He Dared Death Fighting Secret Agents in Switzerland.

By JOHN O'BRIEN

PARIS (By mail to United Press).—Wounded twice—Marne, Verdun—the Croix de Guerre and the Cross of the Legion of Honor on his breast, Second Lieutenant Rene Moncey presented himself one morning in May, 1916, in obedience to instructions, at the ministry of foreign affairs on the Quai d'Orsay, Paris. He had been picked for "special service" in Switzerland. The colonel in charge of the intelligence branch of the ministry said to him:

"Moncey, you are going where there is no glory. You will be one of the 'Sans Gloire.' There is only danger and hard work ahead. You will never get a word of thanks for whatever you may accomplish. You will be a spy. Yes, a spy. You will have no name, no personality. You will be a number, a zero. The service is hard, very hard. It is for men of the highest, the noblest qualities. You will be working in the shadows, against powerful and bitter enemies. Remember the watchword—no glory, no thanks. Are you ready?"

"Oui, mon colonel."

"All right. Now you are no longer a French officer. You are still a soldier, however, a soldier under iron discipline. No leave until the war is won. No discussion, absolute obedience. You will receive your orders regularly. Be here tomorrow morning at eleven. You will receive the necessary documents and verbal instructions and you will leave immediately for Zurich. When you arrive there the rest is up to you. Here are five thousand francs. Take off that uniform. Go out and have a good time in Paris this evening. It will be the last chance you will have for a long time. Be careful about women, especially here."

Called Slacker

When Lieutenant Moncey sallied forth from the department store where he had effected the transformation from a uniformed officer into a "civvie" he found that the process was not quite as easy as he had imagined. Running into a crowd of officers on the boulevard, his hand went automatically to his hat in a perfectly natural, military, regimental salute, which brought looks of astonishment from the officers and from Moncey the one word, addressed to himself: "Idiot!"

He had learned his lesson, however. A few minutes later, when he was reading a newspaper bulletin telling of the sinking of the Lusitania and had voiced his disgust by curt Parisian expletives, two young women turned contemptuous eyes on him, with the remark:

"Well, what's that got to do with you, slacker?"

Duty conquered pride and Moncey felt that he was ready for the work assigned to him. He said nothing.

The following morning he was at the ministry of foreign affairs. An employe told him the colonel was busy but had given instructions that "Lieutenant Moncey was to take his papers and go." Two days later he was in Zurich, installed in a comfortable villa overlooking the lake, and announced himself as "Monsieur Moncey, builder of motorboats."

DOG STEALS SEAT CHAPLIN'S PANTS

"Brownie" Is One of Most Intelligent Animals in Movies.

By JACK JUNGMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, May 18.—"Brownie" is the only dog ever to take the seat out of Charlie Chaplin's pants and get away with it.

By this tour de force, "Brownie" literally launched his way to stardom among Hollywood's four-footed screen players, whose number now is legion.

Right away "Brownie" felt he had a mission in life—to bring contumely upon all dog catchers. And after much dogged preparation, he has finally been cast in such a role.

* * *

As champion of the anti-vivisection cohorts, he will attack the canine kidnappers in a serio-comic film, soon to be released by the Century Comedies. Dog haters, even more than vivisectors, are the objects of his wrath.

A man has compounded a dog exterminating solution. He's about to test the poison on "Brownie's" little pup. Elected at a council of canines to steal the formula, our hero permits himself to be caught, gets the paper by stratagem and lures the would-be exterminator to a fatal plunge through a window. A tooth for a tooth.

* * *

"Brownie," one of the most intelligent animals in movies, is owned and directed by Charles Gee, who picked him up five years ago on the way to the pound and recently bought his release from Century for $1750.

During his progress from the bones and buffets of an "extra" to the biscuits of stardom, this high-schooled mutt dog has appeared in a dozen pictures. He has fainted at sight of a piece of limburger, rescued kids from burning buildings, caught crooks, confounded the wicked and abetted the virtuous.

* * *

"He has never been whipped nor taught tricks by cruelty," says Gee, who, as director of "Brownie" and eight other dogs in comedies, has the patient Job looking like a jazz neurasthenic. "Stage dogs do their stunts by rote, but movie dogs must do different things in every picture. The director simply tells me his angle, and I work out the details by treating and appealing to the dog like a human.

"Sometimes he gets temperamental, especially jealous. But I utilize that jealousy to make him perform when he gets sulky. He'll do anything rather than see me fondle another dog. And when I persist he tears up his blanket and gnashes the boards of his kennel."

But pangs of jealousy, after all, are small price to pay for the emoluments of stardom and immunity from dog catchers.

A HOT SUMMER DECLARE SOME

Although Less Heat From Sun There Should Be More Warmth on Earth.

This summer will be a hot one, despite the late spring which has been caused by the sun giving off 4 percent less heat than normally. So predicts Dr. Charles F. Brooks, the astronomer.

The reduced heat of the sun was to be expected, says Dr. Brooks, as a customary part of the "11-year sun spot period" which reached its greatest development in 1917 and recedes to its lowest point in 1923.

Brooks points out that the sun every 11 years normally goes through a period of excessive activity and then a recession from it. When Old Sol is hitting on all cylinders, sun spots appear. These wane when the sun slows down and its engine cools. Not scientific terminology, but we trust we've interpreted it so it is understandable by the millions who are tremendously interested in the weather but haven't time to "study up" on astronomy.

These spurts of activity (increased heat followed by subnormal heat) are staged by the sun every 11 years.

There was an abnormal radiation of heat from the sun on 1906 the same as 11 years later in 1917.

The next cycle will have its climax in 1928.

Dr. Brooks says: "There is a paradox that 'the cooler the sun the warmer the earth.' The period of sun spot maximum is one to two degrees cooler than otherwise."

One scientific explanation is that whe the sun has a mild chill , as at present, its ultra-violet rays have greater opportunity to escape through the sun's atmosphere. These ultra-violet rays form a blanket of ozone around the earth, far overhead. This ozone blanket absobs and holds much of the heat which the earth radiates or gives off. (The radiation is what makes nights cold even after a hot day.) The earth's heat starts returning back into space and the ozone blanket tends to keep it near us, the same as a thermos bottle.

So, says Dr. Brooks, there probably is at present a reduced loss of the earth's heat through space, despite a reduction of the amount of heat we've receiving from the sun. The ozone, formed overhead by nature to counteract the sun's chill, works like asbestos around a steam pipe.

"The net result," Dr. Brooks concludes, referring to the coming summer, "should be a higher temperature, considering the world as whole, than at the time a year or two ago when the heat received was greater."

Even the facetious who say, "Ain't nacher wonderful!" will have to marvel at nature's mavrelous system of checks and balances, revealed in this ozone insulation now forming above our heads to compensate for reduced sun's heat and keep us from acute suffering

BAPTIST WOMEN ARE GENEROUS

KANSAS CITY, May 18, (Associated Press)—As a result of missionary stimulus afforded by constant study of missionary topics throughout the past year, the organized Baptist women of the South contributed approximately $2,000,000 in cash to missions and benevolent works other than the work of their local churches, according to the annual report of Miss Kathleen Mallory, corresponding secretary of the Women's Baptist Missionary Union, presented at the thirty-fifth annual session of that body here today.

In addition to these gifts the women in their organized capacity sent $8,000 in special equipment to the Baptist hospitals on the mission fields of China and Africa, and $59,000 in cash and clothing to suffering Baptist familes in Europe, the report set forth.

The number of local Women Missionary Union organizations affiliated with the convention grew during last year to approximately 22,000, and a total of 15,033 study classes of one week each were held in the interest of home and foreign missions and other benevolent programs.

DEAN'S RENUNCIATION OF AN ARCHBISHOPRIC

Very Rev. Dr. R. W. Church Preferred His Deanery of St. Paul's to Elevation as Primate of All England.

One of Dr. Inge's predecessors as Dean of St. Paul, the Very Rev. Dr. R. W. Church, of whom Lord Morley of Blackburn has written that he was the finest flower of the culture of Oxford, was so proud of his Deanery of St. Paul, which he held for half a century, ending in 1890, that he absolutely refused elevation to the Archbishopric of Canterbury and the Primacy of the Church, which carries with it a salary of $75,000 a year, and one of the most historic official residences in London, namely, Old Lambeth Palace, on the banks of the Thames, almost opposite to the Houses of Parliament

The Dean is the presiding officer and senior of the members of the Chapter of Canons or Faculty of Divines, in whose hands the care of a cathedral church and of its revenues and property is vested. From time immemorial there has always been a jealousy between the Deans of cathedrals and the Bishops or Archbishops whose church the cathedral is supposed to be. Thus, the real head of St. Paul's Cathedral, whis is the Cathedral Church of the Bishop of London, is not that prelate but the Dean of St. Paul.

It is the same at Durham, where the cathedral is governed and administered by the Dean entirely independently of the Bishop of Durham. It is the same again with the beautiful old ministry of York, which is the Cathedral Church of the Northern Primate, the Archbishop of York, yet who has no orders to give with regard to the minister, the Dean of York and the Chapter of the Minster being in absolute control.

Dean Liddell

In the reign of that gorgeous creature, the six foot two Dean Liddell, one of the handsomest men of his day and presentin ; a most imposing appearance with his red robes, silvery hair and erec carriage, he was so jealous of his prerogatives that he declined to permit the celebrated Bishop Wilberforce of Oxford, nicknamed "Soapy Sam," to hold any confirmations in Christ Church, which ranks as a cathedral, and forced that prelate to hold the ceremonies in question at the Church of St. Mary's at Oxford. He even went so far as to refuse Bishop Wilberforce permission to pass through the choir gates in the cathedral, constraining him to creep round to his place in the chancel by aisles and byways.

Bishop Charles Baring of Durham brother of the first Lord Northbrook demanded that Mrs. Baring, his second wife, should share the episcopal throne with him within the chancel of the cathedral, and was prevented from this grave piece of ecclesiastical impropriety only by the determined and strenuous opposition of the then Dean of Durham—it was Dean Waddington—and by his entire chapter.

For, although Archbishops rank as Dukes, the Bishops of Winchester, London and Durham as Earls, and the other Bishops of dioceses as Barons—that is to say, as peers of the realm, or rather spiritual members of the House of Lords—their wives have no place in the official table of precedence and do not share in any way their husbands' honors and titles. In fact, they are officially ignored, this having been so ever since the days of Queen Elizabeth, who one day, when dining at Lambeth Palace with the then Primate, thanked his wife for her hospitality, but declared that she did not know in what fashion to address her.

Neither have the wives of Deans any share in their husband's titles or honors, and there is the story of a former Dean of Rochester whose name was Dr. Hole, also a frequent visitor to America, whose wife soon after taking up her residence at the Deanery at Rochester wrote to a local shop for some household goods on notepaper bearing the arms of the cathedral—three keys—but without mentioning the address. On the following day the supplies arrived addressed as follows: "Mrs. Hole, The Three Keys, Rochester," the shopkeeper being under the impression that his new customer was the better half of the owner of a "pub" or inn at the sign of "The Three Keys."

Deans are appointed by the Crown without any regard to the chapter, the post invariably carrying with it salaries which formerly amounted to as much as $25,000 a year, but which now average $10,000, including a handsome and stately official residence and a number of perquisites and allowances. Thus Dean Inge receives a stipend of some $12,000, and so, too, does the Dean of Canterbury, and alsd the Dean of Westminster Abbey, who valued his present post so much that he actually gave up the $20,000 a year Bishopric of Winchester in order to accept it.

Bishops are theoretically supposed to be elected by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of the Diocese, indeed, the sovereign, after having duly nominated some prelate to the sea that is vacant, proceeds to transmit his name to the Dean and Chapter with a document entitled, in old Norman French phraseology, "Conge d'Elire," which means permission to elect.

The words, however, are grossly misleading. For all the Dean and Chapter have to do is to ratify the sovereign's nomination, and there have been several instances where the Deans and Chapters, having taken the conge d'elire literally and having spurned the royal nominee and elected a man of their own choice, have not only had their vot: annulled by the Crown, and been severely reprimanded, but have even been thrown into prison for months together on a charge of "contempt of the Crown."

EYES OF THE MEDICAL WORLD ON DR. BANTING

The world of medicine has its eyes turned today upon a young Toronto physician, Dr. F. C. Banting, discoverer of the most effective antidote for diabetes yet known.

Modest to the point of understatement, Banting insists that "Insulin," as his preparation has been called, "is not a cure." However, by its use, specialists agree that diabetics are brought back to almost a normal state in a surprisingly short time. Sufferers, even into the last condition of coma, always fatal hitherto, have been restored as if by a miracle.

In short, as expressed by Prof. J. J R. MacLeod of the chair of physiology at the University of Toronto, "everything points to permanent recovery following 'Insulin's' use in cases not too far gone.

"Of course," Professor MacLeod concedes, "where the pancreas is completely diseased and the duct cells are all gone, regeneration is impossible."

Dr. Banting's discovery includes proof that the pancreatic principle is the same in the lower animals as in man, the isolation of the internal secretio in the former, and the manufacture from it of a non-poisonous extract which, injected subcutaneously, gives the amazing results the doctor has attained.

Though his theory was not a new one, Dr. Banting's methods were his own and it was upon himself, to make absolutely certain that the supposed antidote he had discovered would not kill, that "Insulin" was tried first. He lived, and without a thought of remuneration, immediately gave the result of his labors to the world. Offers of millions have poured in upon him, but he has rejected them all for a $6,000 position as clinical supervisor of the diabetic ward of Toronto Hospital.

Dr. Banting is 31 years old. In the World War he rose from the ranks to a captaincy and was wounded seriously at Cambrai. Back in Canada he accepted the post of assistant in physiology in Western University at London, Ont.

Disavowing, as he does, any share of credit for the discovery of "Insulin," an achievement for which he gives sole honor to his pupil, Dr. Banting, Professor MacLeod's support of the former efforts has been incalculable value.

Himself in the front rank among students of diabetes, MacLeod has had supervision, since the antidote's discovery, of preparing the refined anti-diabetic extract in adequate quantities, and has followed the discovery into all its important physiological bypaths. At present he and his associates are engaged in making an assay of "Insulin," necessary to determine the proper dosage in human treatment.

THE COLORED BOOT CRAZE

Ladies' shoes are being colored like Easter eggs this season. Brilliant and dazzling tones in footwear, with red predominating, are the rage.

The idea evidently is to make the feet as conspicuous as possible, although less seen of most of them the better.

In the good old days a young woma whose feet were nothing to brag about had sense and delicacy enough to encase them in plain black brogans and teach them to be neither seen nor heard. Today a girl with an 8DD foot adorns it with a boot no eye could possible skip.

Her low visibility is a knockout.

Shoe-store clerks are obliged to wear dark glasses. They are threatening to walk out on the cash customers unless the manufacturers of gay and gaudy footwear put a set of dimmers on each pair.

Up to this season a shoe clerk had a soft job. All he had to do was to smile sweetly, ask "Black or tan, madam?" shake a nimble can of footease, and take the ankle census. Today he has to be a color specialist. He has to know more about pigments than Sargent.

Thousands of shoe salesmen who have been years with the firm had to be let out last month. It was discovered for the first time that they were color blind.

"What color will you have?" asks the modern shoe clerk, as milady comes in for fresh blacksmithing.

"What colors have you today?" she asks.

"We have orchid, orange, carmine, violet, Nile green, lavender, purple, taupe, aquamarine, chrome, yellow cherry, and Alice blue."

"Haven't any new colors come in since yesterday?" she asks, peevishly.

"We have some exquisite Copenhagen blues that came in this morning," he says, "but Iwouldn't advise you to buy them, as they are apt to be out of style by tomorrow noon."

Size and shape used to have something to do with shoe selection, but today what a woman wants above all else is a boot that becomes her complexion.

Naturally red predominates. These are very razmattazz. They give the impression the wearer is standing with each foot in a Stutz racer.

Brilliant greens are running second. When you see a Sweet Creature coming com'ng down the street in a pair of these your first impression is that she is dragging a golf course fairway or putting-green along with her.

According to rumors, men's shoes will soon be similarly gaudy. The ice man may soon be loping around in rimson "dogs," the butcher in mauve shoes, and the milkman in red, white, and blue Oxfords.

It looks like a rich, dizzy, and colorful season from the ankles down.

The slogan seems to be "Hot Dogs! Also "Sizzling Sandals!"

THE REDEMPTORIST MISSION SERMON

"Eternal Punishment For Sin"

The Mission sermon which last evening was given to a crowd of women in St. Peter's Cathedral, was preached by Rev. J. O'Brien, C.S.S.R., who spoke on the doctrine of—Eternal Punishment. The words of Christ to the damned "Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire, which was prepared for the devil and his angels" sufficiently explain, the speaker said the existence and purpose of a place of eternal misery, which we call hell. This is a doctrine he said, that is decidedly unpopular with many at the present day. They dislike it. They prefer the more palatable things in religion and consider hell a good doctrine to leave alone. Many do not care to hear it preached or to think about it. It awakens an uneasiness and discomfort — a sense, possibly, of guilt and reproach. Such as these who wish to make out of hell, a mere myth or legend try to shield their attitude by crying out in mock piety "God is too good to punish a soul eternally." They should remember that the Almighty is not only Infinitely Good, but that He is Infinitely Just as well. And it is natural that such as these should not like the thought of hell. They were created for the Kingdom of Heaven, created for eternal happiness. That craving is innate in the human soul and so human nature of itself shrinks from reflecting upon an eternal misery, or even the possibility of it. But there is a hell, said the speaker, just as surely as there is a heaven.

Our own reason and common sense must convince us of it. Are all to have the same fate in eternity, independent of their manner of living here upon earth? In the early ages of Christianity hosts of women and girls in the Pagan Ampitheatres preserved their faith and morals in the face of death itself, shedding their blood rather than adore the idols put before them, or pander to the lust of their captors. Contrast these virgin martyrs with the modern twentieth century vamps who patrol the streets of large cities, themselves deep in depravity, and in quest of others to drag down to their own level. Are they who live and die in this manner to be sharers in the Beatific Vision for eternity, equally with those who died for the laws of God?

Man, at death, remains as he dies as far as his own merits are concerned, "As the tree falls so shall it lie." And so a soul departing this life in mortal sin, in enmity to God, is fixed in that dispostion for eternity. It has passed the time of merit; it has entered that "night when no man can work." The eternal lot of that soul plainly cannot be heaven; such a thought is repugnant to the Infinite Holiness of Almighty God.

Even if we could not reason our way to the existence of hell, if this doctrine were beyond the grasp of human intellect there are the Inspired Books of Revelation telling of it repeatedly t'If thy right hand scandalize thee cut if off and cast it from thee; better for thee to enter Heaven maimed than with both hands to be cast into eternal fire;" and again the Evangelist speaks of the "fire that is not extinguished and the worm that dieth not." Scripture gives an abundance of texts, conveying to us the certainty of the existence of hell. "So tha'," said the Reverend speaker "deny to me the existence of hell and I shall deny to you the existence of heaven." If Scripture is not telling truth in speaking of hell, neither is it true when telling of heaven and then were it surely time to discard the holy writings as misleading." No, whether we like it or not, there is a hell created by Almighty God for the eternal punishment of those who die in mortal sin, for those whose last disposition is one of irrepentence, whose last utterance is that of Lucifer's "Non Serviem"—I will not serve.

What is Hell? There is, of course, the infinite pain of loss, of privation. The lost soul is deprived forever of the Vision of God for which the soul craves and for which it was created. There are also the positive sufferings of the damned. Let sceptics who think God unable to so destroy and punish, look out upon nature and see the signs of His destructive powers. All the fierce strength of a winter storm at sea, the destructive sweep of earthquakes or of any of nature's upheavels are but merely as a spark of God's anger, they form but a shadow of what his angry wrath can do. What positive pain is inflicted there? Scripture says it is by fire, and from all the references to Hell in the Holy Writings, we know that the torments of the damned are so great in intensity as well as in duration that the human mind can form no adequate conception of it. There are sufferings met with at times by human beings that are so intense that were they of more than but a few moments' duration, the sufferer would lose this reason. We read of such, at times, when accidents occur that cause great loss of life. Such agony is but a shadow of the torments of the damned which will never end.

Souls of the damned that during life refused obedience to their Lord and Maker, and elected to follow their own perverse wills and passions, are now forced to do His will in bearing endless misery. "Thou art just, O Lord, and Thy judgments are right," is the admission that is made by even the damned in hell. Tortured in every sense and faculty that had been used to offend the Creator, even lost souls realize the justice of their sentence; knowledge of God's law had been given them, true faith or the means to arrive at it, the sacrifice of Calvary and grace sufficient therefrom to combat temptation, but these aids were ignored or abused with irreparable consequences.

It is a good and salutary thing, Father O'Brien said, to give a little thought and meditation from time to time during life on this fact of the existence of hell, quoting, in conclusion, St. Augustine's memorable prayer, "Cut, slay, burn thy servant in this life, O Lord, but spare him in eternity."

WILL LECTURE ON ESCAPE FROM REDS

Fred. B. Messing to Give Illustrated Talk at Murray Street Church.

Fred B. Messing, formerly Y.M.C.A. Physical Director, in Toronto, will visit Peterborough, Monday, May 21, when he will give his famed illustrated lecture at the Murray street Baptist church, on his experiences in Poland. This talk is highly commended by the press as interest-holding and informative, and should attract a large audience.

Mr. Messing has returned from Poland, where he has been carrying on work for 3½ years. He is visiting his wife's parents, at 134 Hebbourne street, Toronto.

Mr. Messing became interested in the Polish work with the despatching of the Polish-American troops from France to their native land after the close of the European war, and he undertook to institute a physical education course in conjunction with the army authorities. Prior to his arrival there existed an antipathy among the Polish officers to this form of work and particularly to games designed to assist physical development. In a very short time, due to the work carried on by Mr. Messing and his several associates, this condition was changed and at one time there were 15 American and 26 Polish - American instructors and assistants carrying out physical work at 20 different schools. The Y.M.C.A. stayed during the Bolshevik drive and after that time began to organize for permanent work. A charter has been granted by the Polish government and at the present time the work is progressing very rapidly.

During his stay in that country Mr Messing saw much of the advance of the Bolsheviks and was in Brest-Litovsk up until the moment the advancing Russian forces entered the town. As they were entering one side of the town he left in an automobile from the other side. At the present time, he said, Poland is rapidly recovering and particular attention has been paid to the re-building of the railways and bridges which had been wrecked by the Bolshevists.

For his work there Mr. Messing received the Military Medal from the Polish army, a letter of appreciation from the Minister of War, and several other tokens of commendation and appreciation.

ART CREATIONS FOR FAIR SEX

Not for several years have there been as many clearly defined silhouettes for spring, silhouettes that differ so radically that there is no meeting-place save in their common enthusiasm for the flat back—the flattest back we have seen for some time. The reason for this variety in outlines is, in part, that there are so many really great creators at work, each earnestly striving for individuality; in part, too, that the modern woman has seen the necessity for taking her age, type, and figure into account when choosing her clothes.

The classic silhouette, as illustrated in drawing number one, is something so beautiful that the mode never tires of reintroducing it, but it us never is—except for evening.

The silhouette shown as drawing number two, masses its fulness in front, giving the flattest back of all, and though it was Callot who first thought out this modern adaptation, many others creators are now showing its influence in various ways.

Jenny is largely responsible for the third silhouette, shown as number three, with its skirt gathered into godets at one side (very seldom on both sides, under a big chou, or a great bow or puff. This bow or puff is often used in evening dresses that are draped to one side.

The modes of the 'eighties gave the inspiration for the silhouette numbered four, associated in one's mind with Cheruit, who originated its present form. Long and straight from the shoulder to the knee, flaring from there (or a point above), some of the models are flounced all around, some in front only, and some in back.

The Straight Line is Still Good

Chanel is one of those creators whose influence on the mode is enormous. Simplicity and youthfulness are her watchwords; the straight line is her medium of expression. The silhouette dictated by her, illustrated by drawing number five, with its short skirt and its semi-low waist-line, is very often seen in daytime dresses.

Last of all, for frocks that live under the lights of night, there is Lanvin's pet creation, the robe de style. Few women wear it, but those who do continue to be enthusiastic about it. It has a most distinctive quaintness.

Skirts for silhouettes seen in street costumes, are worn at the graceful length of from eight to ten inches from the ground.

The Ways of the Three-Piece Suit

According to late news from the Paris office of Vogue, three-piece suits, around which the mode for the street is built, are more versatile than ever before. There are the favoured dress and coat model and the skirt-blouse-and-coat costume, of equal importance. The length of the coat is varied in three ways, and every way produces a slightly different, though, in the main, a straight silhouette. There are three points, however, on which all three-piece suits are adamant. Skirts must be from eight to ten inches from the floor. Whether pleated, or tiered, or plain, they must always give an effect of slenderness. And every back must be as flat as it is possible to make it.

The coat which is seen the oftenest, because it is the most generally practical and becoming, is the short, straight model. Sometimes this coat is belted; generally it isn't; often it ties with a sash at a point below the waist. The normal line is returning cautiously, but rather by means of suggestion in the way of ornament than by actual placing of the line.

The second coat of the moment is the three-quarter length jacket, whose future is fully assured. Almost every house in Paris is making it, both to complete a three-piece suit and as a separate coat. Most of the models are straight; a few flare at one side or in front. Many of them have a tied closing, as shown in the current issues of Vogue, for, since Vionnet began the business of securing her gowns on the shoulder with a bow and ends, this method of fastening has possessed an appeal that grows more and more irresistible.

The Question of Materials

Materials for the three-piece suit are, in the main, fine woollens, reps, gabardines, and wool crepe marocain. These are combined with plain and printed crepes. Newer still, and for wear later in the season, is the whole suit of heavy silk crepe.

The third type of coat is the bolero used by Jenny, Beer, Doeuillet, and Bechoff. Sometimes it has sleeves and comes to town. Sometimes it has none, and elects to go to the Riveria, developed in a cloth to match the dress, or in suede. The bolero is admittedly hard to wear, and is not for the mature woman.

Last of all—hardly to be called a mode because it is so beautifully conventional that, with slight variations, it is always appropriate—there is the severely tailored suit of the type made famous as the O'Roussen. This year's model is developed in grey or brown, not curved at the waist line, and without godets. It is short, straight, unbelted, and fastened with three or four buttons. A bandanna handkerchief is sometimes knotted over the shoulder in place of a fur piece. Vogue suggests an initialed white crepe blouse to be worn with such a suit, and for the woman to whom this costume is becoming, nothing else shas quite the same distinction.

The New Coat-Dress

The new coat-dress of gabardine, rep, or wool poplin has the tailored touch so appropriate for morning wear, and this season it has the added attraction of being made in several different silhouettes—tiered, or with circular godets, or narrow and plain. Such dresses are short (eight or ten inches from the ground), simple, and untrimmed, except for a touch of soutache, lingerie collar and cuffs, or a bit of brilliant material. Sleeves are mostly long, tight, and trimmed at the wrist. Neck-lines are either bateau or square, while occasionally a pointed decolletage is in evidence.

For the afternoon, Vogue has received an interesting rumour from Paris concerning the revival of the chemise dress, which, indeed, makes an ideal background for the embroideries drawn from peasant sources as well as from intricate museum pieces. Embroideries will have an immense vogue, not only for the straight dresses, but for others that are more or less simple in construction. Afternoon dresses are either very short or very long.

Godets, Drapery, Tunics, and Panels

If the chemise dress and the caught-in-the-front silhouette are not becoming in search of the bizarre, have forced upon women," declares Victor Perard, the New York artist, "I'm glad someone has had the courage to encourage improvement in their attire.

"A woman in a natty knicker suit has more freedom of movement, and so is more graceful and enjoys better health than her sister who's hampered by skirts. She'll make a better wife and companion."

Speaks for Men.

"I hope," indorses Charless Keller, the big Brooklyn merchant, "that the knicker plan succeeds and spreads into the country. I'd like to see men dress the same way."

But Mrs. George W. Reid of Nyack, N.Y., prominent in feminist circles, dissents. "The Bible," she insists, "tells women how to dress. Instead of compelling modern girls to attire themselves wrongly, we should try to get them back to right ideas, so that they may lead normal lives and be worthy to become real men's wives."

SHAPING FOR CHAOS

"The wars which have torn and wor ried the world during the past few years have left a trail of discontent in their wake. Countries and individuals are beset by vague, sometimes unreasonable ambitions. The laboring class clamor for unwarranted increase in its pay, blind to the fact that high wages have already forced up prices to an almost unsupportable level. The spirit of conciliation and fellowship seems to have perished, while class strife and lawlessness walk unrestrained. The people are crushed under a burden of taxation and the menace of revolution grows more threatening daily.

We know not where to look for leadership. Those in high places are tainted by the poison of political expediency, while the great middle class pursues its way with an apathy which blinds it to our ever growing perils. Indeed, unless a new spirit animates our leaders, the world must shortly be plunged into chaos."
—Extract from an English pamphlet written in 1794.

O'CONNELL HAVING HEAPS OF TROUBLE

Star Recruit of the Giants is Having a Tough Time in Getting Started.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, May 18. (United Press).—Jimmie O'Connell ,the $75,000 outfielder, has had heaps of trouble getting started with the New York Giants.

The prize youngster has psychology working on him and it's a tough ailment for a young ball player to overcome.

His price tag of $75,000 imposed a tremendous handicap, the commission of stepping from minor league stardom into a regular position on a world's champion club was an additional load, but the toughest assignment he was put up against was the job of keeping the fans with him when he displaced the most popular player on the Giants.

Even though he started out to hit the size of his hat and fielded hardly above the ordinary, New York fans were more than fair to young O'Connell and they treated him generously.

Old sentiment for Casey Stengel, the most popular player on the Giant club, whom O'Connell displaced as a regular, was shown noisily, however, whenever Casey appeared in the field or took active part in the game, and O'Connell apparently mistood the demonstration and took it for a personal reproof.

John McGraw knows the nature of O'Connell's ailment and he is using a sort of serum remedy and treating a psychological disease with psychology.

From the start, the Giant leader has left Jimmy alone and by word and action he is trying to convey to his young star that he is getting along well and will make good.

O'Connell is not a natural outfielder and probably he never will be. But he is a natural hitter, and as soon as he acquires the standpoint of the veteran player that a game is only a game and that a crowd is just there to occupy seats he may live up to all that was expected of him.

TO MAKE CREAM WHIP.

When the cream just won't whip for the dessert, add the white of an egg and chill thoroughly. Then the two will whip easily.

ON NEW HATS.

Ribbon is probably the most favored trimming for the first spring hats. It is used for bindings, cockades and bows.

YOU WON'T TASTE IT.

When the egg beater or meat chopper work hard, put a little glycerine in the bearings. This will act as a lubricant, but it will not taste in the food.

Comparison Between Provincial and Federal Elections

HOW ONTARIO VOTED IN THE FEDERAL ELECTION, 1921.

HOW ONTARIO VOTED IN THE PROVINCIAL ELECTION, 1919

The areas in black on both maps represent ridings that elected U.F.O. or Progressive members. The white areas returned Liberals. The shaded areas elected Conservatives. There are only 82 federal ridings as compared with 11 provincial ridings, so the electors are differently grouped a fact which alone, would give different results. The Conservatives did better in 1921 because of the reci-procity issue, the stronger party ties in federal politics and the lack of a federal Farmer leader in Ontario; also because the United Farmers and Liberals cut one another's throats by running candidates where they had little chance of success in a three-cornered fight. It will be noticed that all the ridings fronting on Lake Ontario went Conservative in the federal election. A different result is expected in the election next month.

REMOVE BLACKHEADS

By MME. HELEN RUBINSTEIN.

In every country where I am called upon to help women solve the riddle of good looks, I come across different skin conditions, but there is one trouble that persists seemingly in spite of all varieties of climate and conditions. I refer to blackheads.

Nine out of every ten women are vexed by these horrid little "black pests" as the French call them that not only make the skin dull and muddy looking but often lead to the dreaded pimples and spots called acne.

A blackhead is a tiny dust particle that embeds itself in the skin, held there by the natural secretion of the skin. The pores unable to rid themselves of these irritants send out a call for help to the little juice-secreting glands which respond by rushing their moisture to the affected parts. If the pores are still unable to dislodge the impure dust particles the secretions overflow onto the skin's surface and all the while the pores are stretching and losing their power to close.

That is why we seldom see blackheads without "shine" and enlarged pores.

The chief thing to be considered is how to purify the skin, reduce the pores to normal and regulate the secretions.

The opening and closing of the pores properly is the keynote of correction. To eradicate blackheads you must penetrate inside the pore where the black speck has made itself at home and as the blackhead becomes smaller and weaker through treatment close the pore so that no fresh invasion of dust particles and microbes can upset the skin.

Strong soaps are injurious because they dry the surface, thus causing wrinkles and lines without reaching the inner cells. I advise a special wash of gritty texture for the thick sluggish skin and a softer paste of equally cleansing strength for the thinner and more delicate skin. When the skin is thus cleansed, any preparation which follows will be unhampered in its action.

In the daytime use an astringent after washing and use this at intervals during the day in preference to both water and cleansing cream. At night after washing and before putting on an astringent put a small quantity of stimulating nourishing cream on cotton that has been soaked in hot water and wrung dry, then rub the skin with this until your face flushes. This will help you immeasurably as nothing overcomes blackheads as increased functioning of a skin that has become sluggish owing to their presence.

CIGARETTES AT THE SAME OLD PRICE

Improbable That Any Reduction Will Be Made For Some Time.

Cigarettes have not decreased in price following the reduction in tax of $1.50 per 1,000, a Peterborough dealer told the Examiner to-day, and it is improbable that any reduction will be made for some time.

Immense stocks of cigarettes are held by retailers, and they cannot afford, this man says, to reduce the price, having paid the high rate to the manufacturers. Whether the manufacturers will reduce the price on new stocks is not yet known. The reduction amounts to only one cent and a fraction on a packet of ten cigarettes, so it appears that no great relief can be hoped for. "The days of ten-cent packets of Players are a long way off yet," said the dealer.

OLEOMARGARINE

"The manufacturers of oleo say that it is cleaner than much butter offered for sale"; "other countries use it, why should Canada prohibit its use?" and "they are not making enough butter in Canada now to supply the domestic demand. Why shorten the market still further?" were other arguments advanced in a discussion which ended in a resolution to acquaint Mr. Gordon once more with the Council's views in the matter.

Address By Mrs. Seaton.

An interesting address on "Canadian Women in Elections" was given by Mrs. N. D. Seaton, whose brief, succinct, well-worded talk was listened to with profound attention. Referring to the old-time prophecies that the use of the franchise by women would tend to vulgarize the sex, and to the contrary prediction that the millenium would be realized when women had an opportunity to straighten things out, neither of these arguments having been realized in fact, the speaker urged on her audience the realization by women of the importance of the vote, and of exercising the franchise at the polls. Women should have enthusiasm, backed by interest and knowledge, for a better use of their privilege, means better Parliamentary measures and consequently, a better country. The burning question was: "Will the women have a point of view which will influence and modify parties, or will they merely swell the ranks of those already existing?"

A woman's attitude toward voting had been defined in two ways, one was the "Yes, dear," demeanor, the other the contradictory creature who said: "I don't believe it. I don't agree with you." The rule of the sea for centuries has been, "Women and children first," but for countless centuries, the rule of legislation by man has been a contrary attitude, the one that considers women and children last. It is woman's duty to correct this tendency. They have for centuries been the means of keeping things clean and tidy in the home. Now they have the same chance in the State.

Encouragement of Canadian literature was also recommended by Mrs. Seaton as a duty of Canadian women.

Should Attend Nomination Meetings

Following appreciative remarks on Mrs. Seaton's address, Mrs. Stevenson spoke of the importance of women attending political conventions where candidates were nominated for office, and said: "I don't think women will ever be tied to one particular party like the men are. They will not be so hide-bound in their political affiliations."

Miss A. Lancaster brought up the sugar question, advocating some action by united women that would tend to lower the price of the commodity. Although the refiners claim that they are not profiteering, "you will notice that they are markedly reluctant to have the costs and full facts published." It was decided to ask the affiliated societies to discuss this question at length, and to consider the advisability of curtailing the use of sugar in an effort to bring down the price, also to inform Mr. Gordon of the interest in the whole question taken by the Council.

A Signal Honor.

A signal honor to the Peterboro Local Council of Women was recorded by Mrs. Stevenson in the action of the National Council in nominating Mrs. Joseph Mills as convenor of the National Committee on Professions and Employments for Women. This is the first time in the history of the local society that a nomination from the Peterboro Council has been made for the National Executive. Mrs. Mills, however, felt obliged to decline the honor. Nominations voted for by the Local Council yesterday for the National Executive were as follows: For President, Miss C. E. Carmichael, New Glasgow, N.S. For Vice-Presidents: Mrs. Cummings, Toronto; Mrs. Gordon Wright, London; Mrs. Dennis, Halifax; Mrs. Chas. Thorburn, Ottawa; Mrs. Adam Shortt, Ottawa; Magistrate Emily Murphy, Edmonto; Dr. A. Stowe-Gullen, Toronto; Mrs. Dingman, Toronto; Mrs. Kirby, Calgary; Miss Crease, Victoria, B.C.; Mrs. W. J. White, Vancouver; Dr. Carrie Derrick, Montreal; Miss Tatley, Sweetsburg, P.Q.; Mrs. Welsh, New Westminster, B.C.; Mrs. Rapp Smith, Vancouver; Mrs. Allan, Moose Jaw. For Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Horace Parsons, Toronto. Recording Secretary, Mrs. Carpenter, Hamilton. Treasurer, Mrs. Sidney Tweed, Waterloo. Convenors of Committees—Conservation, Mrs. Hewitt, Canning, N. S.; Citizenship, Mrs. W. H. Becker, Toronto; Education, Miss M. L. Bollert, Vancouver; Films and Printed Matter, Mrs. Malcolmson, St. Catharines; Fine Arts, Mrs. Dingman, Toronto; Housing and Town Planning, Mrs. Bundy, Toronto; Laws, Mrs. Edwards, McLeod, Alta; League of Nations, Mrs. Clement, Brandon; Mental Hygiene, Mrs. Stead, Halifax; Professions and Employments for Women, Mrs. Lewis, Edmonton; Public Health, Mrs. Smiley, Ottawa; Soldiers' Dependents, Mrs. Muldrew, Ottawa; Taxation, Mrs. E. M. Murray, Halifax. For Provincial Vice-President in Ontario, Mrs. R. G. Smythe, Toronto.

The Council made three nominations of its own to fill vacancies, naming Mrs. W. R. Morris as convenor of National Recreation, Mrs. J. B. Mann as convenor of Household Economics, and Miss Hannington, of St. John, N.B., as convenor of Immigration.

RECIPES

(By Bertha E. Shapleigh.)

These potato chickens are very attractive to serve at a children's party. The ingredients are:

Three cups hot mashed potatoes, three table spoons of butter, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one egg, and the yolks of two eggs.

Add the butter, salt, pepper and eggs to the potatoes, and beat well. Cool and shape with the hands into chicks. Brush over with egg and set in an oven to heat. For eyes use whole black pepper or peppercorns as they are called, and for the feet whole cloves. Serve on a bed of parsley or watercress.

These chicks may be rolled in flour dipped in egg diluted with water and rolled in fine dried bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat and garnish as directed.

BOILED FOWL WITH VEGETABLES

Select a young fowl, weighing about four or five pounds, having a plump breast. Singe, clean and draw the intestines, being careful to remove the kidneys which lie close to the backbone. Sometimes these are not removed and the second joints of the bird are strongly favored. Sprinkle the inside with salt and place in it an onion peeled and washed. Truss the chicken, tying the legs securely to the body.

In the bottom of a kettle place a perforated pan or cover, on it place the chicken, surround with two quarts of boiling water, and add one slice each of carrot and onion, one sprig of parsley and, when half cooked 2 teaspoons of salt. Cook slowly until tender; place on a platter and pour around the following sauce:

3 tablespoons butter.
4 tablespoons flour.
½ teaspoon salt.
1-8 teaspoon pepper.
2 cups stock (water in which the chicken was cooked.)
2 egg yolks.
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley.

Melt butter, add flour, salt and pepper, and pour on the stock slowly. Cook until smooth and thickened, add egg yolks and beat until smooth, but do not allow it to boil after the egg is added. Add to this sauce one third cup each, cooked peas carrot and celery. Sprinkle chicken and sauce with the chopped parsley.

BRIDE 125 YEARS OLD

The Kidderminster (Eng.) Shuttle says:

The Persian carpet which is being presented by the people of Iraq (Mesopotamia) to the Duke of York and Lady Bowes-Lyon is a Kashan, over 125 years old, 12 ft. by 8 ft. of wonderful colour and design. The key-note of the design is the Tree of Life, with branches of flowering jasmine. The vase design around the border shows the date in Persian. The carpet is now on view in Basrah ,and will shortly be despatched to England in charge of an Arab Boy Scout, who will present the carpet to the Duke and Lady Elizabeth on behalf of the people of Iraq.

PROTECT THE SKIN

By Mme Helene Rubinstein
International Beauty Expert

Between the severe spring weather America has just endured and the brilliant summer sun which will soon be playing havoc with our skins one may look for the usual crop of wrinkles, lines, shriveled and dried up skins.

One cannot control the weather, bct at least one can protect the skin by the use of scientifically shielding powder base.

From the artistic point of view, no finishing touch can succeed without a foundation. The skin is full of pores which are like so many hungry mouths that swallow whatever is brought in direct contact with them.

Rouge and powder no matter how excellent their quality loose their effect by being drawn more and more deeply into the tissues instead of remaining on the surface. But, put something between the cosmetic and the skin and there is no reason why your powder should not last the whole afternoon and evening without your having to add the least mite.

Whenever you see a woman frequently powdering her nose or putting fresh rouge on her cheeks, you may be sure that either she hasn't used a foundation at all or that she has made a poor choice.

French women invariably use a foundation on their lips.

And now comes the question of the character of the foundation. If the skin is normal, your choice may be guided by perference so far as the question of whether it shall be a lotion or cream. But if the skin is dry be sure to use something containing soothing oils.

In the evening a vanishing rream is sometimes preferred to a base of any other kind, but for daytime I do not think it is as satisfactory as a balm.

When it happens to be windy or if the sun is shining brillantly far better results are obtained by using a scientific protective, either in the form of a non-disappearing cream or a lotion.

There are some skins, however, that do not easily discolor and if these happen to be of the oily type a lovely foundation can be made with liquid powder.

Dry powder and rouge should be put on before the liquid dries. This forms a very thin film that is good to protect the pores and is also becoming as it correct the tendency to shine.

Fashion Notes

NEW YORK, May 18.—(United Press).—"Accordions are replacing ukeleles," says a news item.

Accordion pleats are also the latest instruments of fashion. In the selection of summer frocks, nets, lace, pastel shades of chiffon and voile all play the role of the accordion.

One can buy these materials ready pleated by the yard at many of the department stores, in an assortment of colors and combinations of colors. Sometimes black and white net combined in layers are pleated in skirt lengths and used with plain bodices of black net for the summer afternoon gown.

For Dance Frocks.

Dance frocks also dance to the tune of the accordion with skirts of pleated chiffon in pastel colors attached to plain bodices of the same material. These simple dance frocks are more popular just at present than the beaded effects with clinging lines, as they are more summery and allow more freedom of motion for the dance. White, lemon and almond green are the favorite colors used for the dance frock.

The pleated sports skirt has never met with such popularity as it has this season and often it is matched with a pleated cape of finger-tip length.

Dressy gowns for street wear are not without their share of pleats, which often begin at the knee, giving the new flounce effect. A dress of this sort appeared recently on the Avenue. It was made of black silk crepe in straight line effect with a pleated flounce set on at the knee. Sprays of appliqued flowers made of several thicknesses of chiffon in colors mauve, red and green adorned the upper portion of the frock, adding a touch of brilliant color to the black which is such a popular idea at present.

Following the Parisian fancy for combining black and brown, American designers are introducing black crepe gowns beaded in bronze beads. Worn with bronze shoes and hat the effect is bound to be stunning.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A few weeks after Sir Henry Thornton had secured the appointment as President of the Canadian National Railways, an uncle of mine who has served the Great Eastern Railway for almost half a century, wrote me, complimenting Canada upon securing such an able railway man, and concluded his letter by referring to Sir Henry Thornton as a hundred per cent. man, and a man among men.

Knowing this relative of mine to be somewhta hard to please, I concluded that Sir Henry Thornton must be, as our American cousins would say, "some man." On Tuesday next Peterborough is to be favored by a visit from this "hundred per cent. man" and I think I am safe in saying that one hundred per cent. of his employees will be delighted to meet this man among men, and to assure him of the same loyalty that made the old Grand Trunk the "Smiling Railroad."

Sir Henry Thornton never took over a railroad where his subordinates were more anxious for the general success of the road, or where the esprit de corps was higher, than he will find on the Canadian National among the old Grand Trunk boys.

We are out to make the railroad a success, and we will make it successful with a skipper like Sir Henry Thornton at the helm.

Let us hope that his visit to our fair city will leave a favourable impression with him so that we will be able to say, "Will ye no' come back agin."

Yours truly,
W. H. HOWARD.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

AN UPWARD TENDENCY.

NEW YORK, May 18.—(United Press.)—After another lifeless opening the stock market developed an upward tendency, but not a great deal of activity to-day.

With Steels and Oils going upward, fertilizer stocks sold off. Initial prices as a rule were fractionally above yesterday's close.

Steel opened up 1-4 at 98 and gained another 1-8. Republic also did better. Reports of improving conditions in the copper industry helped these stocks, Utah opening up 1-4 at 64, while Anaconda starting at 44 unchanged, gained 1-2 point shortly after trading started.

The market continued lifeless during the early trading. Stocks had their opening gains and in some instances made further slight advance, Baldwin going to 129, up 3-4, Jones Tea to 58 1-2 and then dropped to 5 71-2, where it was still up 1-2. American Can went to 94, up 7-8 and American Locomotive to 137, up one. New York Airbrake was a weak spot, selling down to 35 1-4, off 3-4. This probability was due to setting of weak speculative holdings. Airbrake is earning at the rate of over ten dollars a share on its entire capital and is well booked ahead and probably will be paying dividends on the common before the close of the year. Insiders have been buying stocks on the weak spots for some time and there is reason to believe they are not disposing of any of their holdings. Railroad issues were dull and little changed.

The market continued working into higher ground throughout the first hour. Republic led the Steels, selling 1 3-4 up at 51 1-2, while U.S. Steel sold at 98 1-2 and Bethlehem at 54 3-4. Rails also gained both in activity and prices. Canadian Pac. going to 153 1-4, up 3-4, and N.Y. Central 94 3-8, up 3-8.

Fertilizer issues did not follow the market, however, American Cotton Oil losing over a point at 6 3-4, and Pfd. 1 1-2 at 14 1-2. Oils were strong. Pan American was 1 1-8, California at 95 1-8, was up 1 5-8 and Phillips Petrolemum at 50 7-8, was up 1 1-8.

KING GEORGE'S MESSAGE TO CANADIAN CHILDREN

As a striking instance of modern progress and world-wide organization, the manner in which King George and Queen Mary are delivering their Empire Day message to the children of Great Britain and the overseas Dominions is noteworthy.

Their Majesties had a strong desire to speak in person, if such a thing were possible, to every school child in the Empire on May 23, but this being physically impossible, it occurred to them, presumably as they listened to the Victrola, which is in the Royal Music Room, that they could have their voices heard by every school child by having a record made which could be sent everywhere.

To accomplish this, it was necessary to employ an organization with world-wide connections; hence, they chose the "His Master's Voice" manufacturers, who, through their connections throughout the British possessions, can give a world-wide distribution in each country, through their dealer organization, to every city, town and village in their respective countries.

The message which the record conveys is not to be played to anyone before it is heard by the children on May 23rd, after which it may be heard by the rest of us. Royalties will be paid by the manufacturers on each record sold, and the entire proceeds of such royalties are to be devoted to the King's charities.

Thus "the King's Messenger" instead of the old-time official speeding upon his faithful steed, is personified in the local dealer in "His Master's Voice" products, who supplies first his local schools and afterwards his regular customers with the message of our Sovereign, not in engrossed characters upon a roll of parchment, but in the actual living tones of the King and Queen; the message being capable of repetition thousands of times to those of their subjects anxious to hear the message.

CONFERENCE OF POLICE

with the council. It was not a new matter, but had been going on for some time. The council was amenable to the people, but the commission was not. If the commissioners had to go before the people, he said, they would find out the people's opinion.

Would Welcome Release

"I assure you," Judge Huycke spoke, 'that I didn't want to be chairman of the Police Commission. I don't mean to say it is a nuisance, and yet it has been on more than one occasion. Ald. Maher says there has not been co-operation. That may be wrong or it may not be, but there is nothing in the act that says the Police Commission must co-operate with the council. I want to say this that I have been a member of the commission for fourteen years and in that time there has not been one whisper of dissension until the last year or two. I don't know what the reason may be, and I don't care. For myself I'd be glad to get out of it, but while I have a duty to perform, I am going to do it, and I'm not going to interfere with th council performing theirs.

Tribute to Police

"I have made a statement of the police method and organization. I want to say that I appreciate Ald. Crowe's statement. He has been around the city a great deal and he has observed that it is peaceful and quiet. Women and children can go about the streets without being molested. He didn't say that, but that's what he meant. It is true that the city is peaceful and orderly and law-abiding, and if that is true it is the highest tribute I have heard to the city police. If it were not true then the police force should indeed be increased.

Kept Force Small

"In Toronto and Montreal the ideal number of policemen is one to every five hundred persons. That is their objective, and all police authorities will tell you that in large cities one policeman is necessary for every five hundred people. In the cities of twenty, thirty or forty thousand the proper number is one to every one thousand. We have say 25,000 people in the city and immediately outside. The essential duty of the police is to protect the people their lives and their property. If we had the requisite number of one policeman for every one thousand people you can see how the force would be. But we have kept that number down. We don't want to be reckless. We have tried to be economical, but not economical at the risk of losing sight of the best interest of the city."

No Serious Crime

Judge Huycke told Ald. Crowe that police protection was not merely arresting wrong-doers. It was the protection of the lives and property of the citizens, of keeping the city safe for women and children, and not merely collecting fines. His Honor referred to the detail of police patrol by which the factories were visited, by means of which the constables on their beat were in frequent and regular touch with the police station. If anything happened to any of them whereby they failed to telephone to the office at the appointed times an immediate investigation could be made. The Judge suggested that Peterborough's record be compared with that of other cities. There had been no bank robbery, and serious crime was detected. As for the gasoline bill for last year he pointed out that the police car and motorcycle were in use day and night, and the car did the work of six men in the night patrols of the outlying sections of the city.

Judge Huycke said he didn't care a snap of his fingers if the police administration was changed. "If it is changed and I am put out it will be a comfort to me. If it is put in the hands of the council I'll be the last to complain. I don't think it wise, but it will be a comfort to me personally."

Red Agitators

The times were not peaceful, he continued. There was an element of unrest in the country, he asserted, and referred to the statement of a Catholic priest at Welland that there was a hotbed of revolution among foreigners there. To some extent that spirit existed here, and it must be put down.

"We won't have a Red country here, and please God we shall not," His Honor declared. "The Police Commission have done their duty honestly and economically, and I purpose doing it honestly and economically and fearlessly. It is a matter of conscience, and we would be recreant to our conscience if we allowed anybody, any person or any set of persons to interfere with the Police Commission's duty as we see fit to do it. It would be false economy to cut off any member of the police force or to cut off the automobile. Think of even one bank robbery, or anything that might happen at any of the factories, the salary of a few policemen is not to be compared with loss of life or property. Besides, more men are needed for traffic duty," said the Judge, mentioning an incident illustrating the responsibility of following up cars in the event of children or other persons being run down.

"I hope I haven't spoken heatedly," he concluded. "I want to speak kindly. I don't think we can allow you to interfere with us."

Orillia's Cost

Reverting to his Orillia experience, Ald. Crowe said he found conditions peaceful there, although the town had its own foreign element. And the cost of the police was $2,089 for a population of 8,000.

"It's my opinion that you want to be up to the standard," he remarked.

Judge Huycke—If we did we'd put on 27 or 28 men.

Ald. Crowe—We could have a try for this year, anyway.

Judge Huycke—Why not touch the public and separate school boards?

Ald. Crowe—The teachers are pretty well united and certain salaries have to be paid.

Judge Huycke—Pardon me, it's because the School Board has absolute power.

Ald. Crowe—I'm strongly of the opinion you could fall in line if you wanted to.

Judge Huycke—If we wished to sacrifice the public welfare we could dismiss the whole of them.

Ald. Meyers Looks Back

"It all goes to prove that this could have been avoided if it had been taken up the way we are doing now," said Ald. Meyers. "We could have had a friendly meeting and arranged the estimates accordingly and struck the rate then. We talked about meeting the commission. Word came to me that the commission would not meet the council. Whether that's so or not I'm not prepared to say. We took the first part of the act which said that the council had to pay the salaries of the police. We couldn't get around that. The second part said that the estimates should be referred to the council for approval. It didn't say what we should do if we didn't approve. We wanted to try how it would fare if the estimates were cut down. I'm sorry we didn't insist that we have it settled at the time."

"We shall be glad to consider any items if you give your reasons for objecting to them," Judge Huycke said, cutting back to the beginning. "Otherwise I don't see what can be done."

Magistrate Langley pointed out that the duty of the commission was prescribed by statute in contrast to the council's which was not fixed hard and fast.

What Toronto Did

Ald. Holloway recalled a conversation he had with Controller Hiltz, of Toronto, at the conference of municipalities held in London some time ago. The Toronto Police Commission's estimates amounted to two millions and the Board of Control advised them to lop off 86 men. Ald. Holloway wasn't sure of the exact number, but he quoted approximately.

Mayor Taylor—The people and the aldermen would like to see two less policemen.

Mr. Langley—Wouldn't the people like to see the police force run for two dollars a year?

Judge Huycke—We had a resolution from the Police Commission before you gentlemen, stating that we felt the present number of policemen was necessary, and it was a unanimous resolution, I may say, Mr. Mayor.

His Worship said he had moved for the elimination of two men.

To Ald. Phelan's reference to certain legal opinions upon which the council had depended, Judge Huycke replied that the only opinion binding on the council would be a judgment given by a judge. An opinion from anyone else would be of no more value than Mr. Widdifield's.

"Probably not so much," His Honor added, "for Mr. Widdifield's was a studied opinion. If there is anything in the estimates that is not legally there, something that has not to do with the administration of the police affairs you could strike that off. The general legal opinion is that other matters are entirely discretionary with the Police Commission.

Ald. Phelan—We figured that the Ontario Legislature meant to give the council certain powers over the Police Commission.

Judge Huycke—Why didn't they say so?

Ald. Phelan remarked that probably the man who handled it didn't know about that aspect of it.

Judge Huycke—Wasn't that some of Mr. Tooms' handiwork?

Ald. Phelan—I guess he had something to do with it.

Judge Huycke—Like a cake mentioned in Holy Writ that was baked only on one side, this is only half-baked. Some people say you misinterpreted the amendment. I am not going to express any opinion about it.

Enforcing O. T. A.

Mayor Taylor next took up the council's other item that the city solicitor be used by the chief constable n O. T. A. prosecutions.

Judge Huycke replied that according to the advice and instructions of the attorney-general the crown attorney was to take charge in such cases.

Mayor Taylor—We'd save money. Why not use someone else?

Judge Huycke—I suppose because the act says so.

Ald. Maher—Mr. Wearing is employed by Inspector Stewart.

The Mayor—Our by-law says the city solicitor should do the work without any fee.

Ald. Holloway—Mr. Hatton's fee has been very small for the years of prosecutions that have brought in a lot in fines.

Ald. Phelan's Resume

In a final query Ald. Phelan outlined the prospect for some time next November when the Police Department's appropriation of $25,000 runs ont. They had already spent more than $9,000, and at that rate would not have sufficient credit in the city treasury to carry through the entire twelve months. Ald. Phelan asked whether the commission could arrange to keep within the $25,000.

Judge Huycke—It's entirely out of the question. At least I don't see how we could do it. We disclaim any responsibility for that position. Our estimates were in for a certain amount. If you choose to play fast and loose with it that's your fault, not ours. The policemen might sue the city for their salaries.

Ald. Phelan—I'm not worrying. I think we did what was right.

Judge Huycke—No one's worrying. If there are any items in the estimates that are not justified, let us have a memorandum of them and we'll see what we can do with them.

Magistrate Langley—We have been economical, but we made a mistake in fixing the estimates just at our needs. If we had made them higher as some do and you cut them we would have got what we needed, and everybody would have been satisfied. We cut them down from the start.

Ald. Phelan—We understand each other. When the $25,000 is exhausted in November there'll be no more funds for the Police Department and things will have to take their course.

Judge Huycke—Use your own discretion. We've been good-natured here, anyway.

Ald. Crowe, in a parting sally to the Judge as he went out—"Try to see your way clear to meet us a bit."

ENGLAND DEVELOPS AIRPLANE CARRIER.

Makes Every Flat Roof a Potential Airdrome—Is Practical.

LONDON, May 18.—Every building in London with a flat roof has become a potential airdrome by reason of the invention of apparatus to facilitate the landing and taking off of airplanes from the decks of Britain's aircraft-carriers. The business-man of the future, English air experts predict, will ride in an elevator to the roof of is home and leave by airplane. The invention which will make this possible will enable every navy of the future to put to sea with not only a vast number of airplanes flying-boats and seaplanes but its own airdromes and workshops, say these writers.

Already some vessels have been converted into aircraft-carriers by the United States, Great Britain and Japan, but the British admiralty has laid down ships of this kind which are held to be better than those of any other power. They have not only been provided with airplane landing facilities, but are as well equipped to carry out repairs as is any ground station of the Royal Air Force.

The decks of these aircraft-carriers are entirely free of all obstructions. The funnels for carrying away smoke are set on the starboard side. The recent appearance of two of these huge aircraft-carriers in the Dadanelles threw a fright into the Turks, who believed them to be strange monsters of the deep.

In the new type of aircraft-carrier there are two decks connected by huge lifts The upper is the airdrome deck and the lower is equipped with work-shops for carrying out repairs There are also supplies of necessary spare parts, ranging from a propeller to a complete engine, all ready for instant use. The flying deck is fitted with a searchlight and landing light tower, which make it possible for a machine to land at night, the light illuminating the deck of the vessel and the surrounding water. There are also cranes for hoisting on board flying boats, which need repair.

It is now possible for the fastest machines to land with safety on the deck of an airplane-carrier An arrangement of nets brings the airplane to a standstill without danger and a machine which attains a speed of three miles a minute can land in a distance of not more than 40 feet.

SWEDISH WORKERS WANT SAY IN THE COMPANY AFFAIRS.

Would Establish Councils in Industrial Plants to Whom Employer Must Report.

STOCKHOLM, May 18.—(Associated Press.)—Organized influence and participation of workmen in the direction and control of Swedish industrial enterprises which employ 25 persons or more is recommended in a plan just submitted to the government by the official committee on Industrial Democracy. The recommendation involves more general recognition of labor unions, while forcing the employer to heed administrative and executive advice from his employees.

According to the committee's scheme, so-called councils may be established in industrial plants of 25 or more employees, providing such a measure is approved by the authorized labor union concerned. In the larger concerns these councils shall consist of three to nine delegates for the workmen, sitting with not more than three representatives of the employer. It shall be the duty of the operation council to utilize the technical experience of the individual workman for the good of the concern, and the employer must furnish the council with necessary information regarding production. The council also may pass on questions of change in the equipment and methods of the plant.

All waste in production is to be eliminated as far as possible by the council, which shall be assured the delivery of information from the employer regarding the costs of operation, except in cases in where the surrender of such information might harm the enterprise. It is provided that the employer must render a report at the end of every third month on the general business and prospects of the concern.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

The Mysterious Martine mystified the audience at the Grand last evening with his escaping feats, using strong box locked, enveloped in a canvas cover and bound with rope, a pillory, steel collar and handcuffs

The feature of the act was his entrance into a solid wooden box, double locked by a member of the audience tied with 75 feet of rope, then enveloped in a canvas cover fastened with 18 straps and buckles and then bound with another 75 feet of rope. Martine claims that this is the only feat of its kind still unsolved and offers $500 to anyone who can expose his method of performing it. To-night and to-morrow night he will attempt to enter the box after being bound by a committee from the audience.

He also escaped quickly from an old-fashioned pillory, locked and sealed while hand-cuffed and with a steel collar locked about his neck.

A motion picture program is also presented.

THE GREAT MARTINE A FEATURE "WORTH WHILE"

Young in years, but a master of the mysteries and direct from New York, the wonderful Martine, world's leading exponent of mystifying stage phenomena, held his audience at the Grand Opera House last night spellbound and puzzled during an entertainment really in a class by itself. While his programme constitutes amazing exemplifications of numbers which may be each classified in the excelling feature class, Martine specializes with a remarkable $5,000 box feat which has set agog scientists all over this continent, to say nothing of his pillorium and steel collar mystery

The great Martine can consistently be said to rival Harry Houdine as an escape artist, in which feat, together with that of finding access to a box apparently unbreakably sealed against entry by any conceivable human agency, elicited from his audience last evening generous endorsive response.

Martine, together with a picture presentation of the premier class, will be the attraction at the Grand for the balance of the week, and the whole programme is worthy of generous patronage.

PACKERS EASY FOR THE QUAKER OATS

C.P.C. Defeated in League Game at King Edward Park By Score of 3 to 1.

The Quakers sent the C.P.C. down to the tune of 3 to 1 at King Edward Park last evening. The Packers showed signs of their hard encounter of last Tuesday and the Quakers had the best of it through out.

The Quakers won the toss and started with the wind in their favor. Their forward line, which is well balanced one soon had the ball in the Packer's territory and gave Curtis plenty to do. Logan, the Quaker's captain was the first to find the net. Montgomery soon made it two for the Quakers when he beat Curtis with a fine shot. For the remainder of the first half the Quakers had the best of it and gave the C.P.C. defence line plenty of work to do.

The Packers attempted an attack in the opening of the second half but the Quakers soon sent them back again and Montgomery again found the net with a splendid shot. Fallis got in a shot but sent it high over the bar. The Quakers were taking things easy and Fallis got another opportunity with better results sending in the only goal for the Packers. Oxley also had a good opportunity with an open goal but kicked over the bar.

In the last few minutes of the game the Packers forced a couple of corners without results and the game closed with the Quakers easy winners by a score of 3 to 1.

The players were:

C.P.C.—Goal, Curtis; backs, Mann and Oxley; halves, Bradbury, Shaw and Underwood; forwards, Hanson, Fallis, Marsden, Downer and Hotstone.

Quakers—Goal, Pellow; backs, J. Willshaw and R. Willshaw; halves, R. Logan, Craig and Hepburn; forwards, Mitchell, Montgomery, G. Logan, Croft and Foster.

Referee—G. Griffin.

DIAMOND ARTISTS IN SQUARED CIRCLES

Many Champs Think They Could Have Made Their Mark in the Fistic World.

It has often been told how Jack Dempsey thinks he is a great wrestler, how Willie Hoppe would rather be a major league baseball catcher and how Eddie Foy would rather be a Shakespearean. Now Carl Mays has aspirations for the prize ring.

The Yankee pitching star told newspapermen in Washington recently that he was a good fighter and he put on a pantomime of how he could beat Floyd Johnson. He insisted seriously that he felt he had the qualifications for a fighter.

When Babe Ruth heard about it he let it be known in a whisper that could be heard several city blocks that Carl could be accommodated without leaving the ranks of ball players.

Ruth himself has an idea that he could have been a swat king if he had chosen the ring instead of the diamond.

Mays may hear plenty from the Cleveland ball club when the Indians get their first chance to razz him about his leaning toward fisticuffs. The Indians do not like Mays.

Perhaps a match might be arranged between the blonde Carl and Steve O'Neil, the stocky Indian catcher.

Johnny Kilbane, the bosom pal of O'Neil, once said that Steve was the best man with the gloves he had ever seen out of the ring.

The players around the American League say that Wally Pipp is one of the handiest boys on the circuit in an emergency, but the quiet Wally is not one who seeks emergencies.

Mays might start something with his little blast that will cause a clause to be inserted in the players' contracts giving the magnate a cut of their purses and first call on their ring services.

LINDSAY MEETS PETES TOMORROW

Greybirds Will Clash With Local Central Leaguers at Riverside Park.

Warmer weather is expected for tomorrow and it is hoped that the conditions will be right for fast baseball so that the Lindsay-Peterboro clash can be pulled of to best advantage. There is much interest in the appearance of the Lindsay crew here as Manager Williamson of the Greybirds has dug up a lot of material new to the Central loop and the local fans knowing this may be the only appearance of Lindsay at Riverside Park this season are anxious to give the recruits the once over. Manager Williamson is not sure whether he will start Garlow or Begg or Sova against the Petes tomorrow and will likely work all three of them in during the game. Manager Solomon will use his whole squad against Lindsay and the fixture will be a big help in conditioning the Petes for their clash with Cobourg next Thursday. A big crowd of fans is a certainty for tomorrow if the weather is anywhere near right. The game is called for 3 o'clock sharp.

The following Petes are expected to be on hand early: Swanston, Heckman, Summerfeldt, McElroy, Comolli, Johnston, Ansaldo, Collins, Helson, Legon, Wolfe, Lowe, Shaughnessy and Manager Solomon.

COBOURG TO OPEN SEASON SATURDAY

Mayor Boggs Will Officiate at the Opening Ceremonies.

COBOURG, May 18. — The exhibition ball game which was to have been played here yesterday between the Toronto University team and the Cobourg Central Ontario team was postponed owing to the condition of the grounds. It was staged for Horse Show Park, and its announcement had awakened a considerable amount of interest, as the University team is considered to be a fast aggregation.

But this postponement is not the only crimp that Jupiter Pluvius has put in local baseball affairs, the Cobourg Town League was to have opened last Saturday with official paraphernalia at Victoria Park diamond, but rain and wet grounds interfered.

However, it is expected that on Saturday next, 19th May, Mayor Boggs will fetch the first ball, and the four teams will each have a game.

Longslow, Ltd., is to meet the Matting-Felt team, and the C.N.R. the Dyeing Company. Cliff. Boundy will umpire the first game, which is to be played at 2 p.m., and Bruce Thompson will handle the indicator in the second.

The Cobourg Town League is affiliated with the O.B.A.A.

TWO MOTOR TOWNS RETIRE FROM FIELD

Leaside and Oshawa Tender Resignations Central Ontario Baseball League.

OSHAWA, Ont., May 18.— The two motor towns, Leaside and Oshawa, began a bear movement on the baseball market yesterday afternoon by filing with the secretary of the Central Ontario Baseball League notices off their retirement from competition for the coming season, at four-thirty a wire was received from Leaside as follows: "We understand Oshawa and Port Hope have withdrawn from Central Ontario League you will appreciate the fact that it would be an impossible proposition for us to operate under the circumstances and we must drop out. This telegram will constitute the resignation of the Leaside Club from the Central Ontario League, signed Geo E. Peacock, President."

At five-fifteen Errell Trew secretary of the Oshawa Baseball Club, handed the League Secretary the following letter: "I am instructed by the officers of the Oshawa Baseball Club to withdraw our club from the Central Ontario Baseball League, kindly return our bond and entrance fee as agreed upon at the executive meeting of May 16th."

No official word has been received from Port Hope as to withdrawal but it is expected as their representative hinted such would happen while attending the executive meeting in Oshawa on Wednesday these three teams have fought the first of the January residence rule from the beginning with the result that two have declared themselves out of organized baseball for this season.

At 6.15 President Dedman of Lindsay, and Secretary Nott, Oshawa, were in communication when an application from another local organization was received for the Oshawa franchise who said they were willing to work under the O.B.A.A. residence rule of January 1st and abide with the Central League constitution and same is held pending the 48 hours set by the League for teams who wish to withdraw, when same will be considered. Last night Secretary Nott as in Bowmanville attending a meeting of ball fans and explain the situation to the Eastern team.

TWO BASEBALL TEAMS IN A MUSICAL CONCERT

WHITBY, May 18.—A musical concert was held in Regent theatre, Oshawa, by the basketball team of Oshawa and Whitby. The following girls taking part were:

Miss Eva Hennessey gave a musical selection on piano; Miss G. Rees a violin selection; Miss E. Kennedy favored the audience with a song entitled "My Rose of Love." Oshawa girls put on a short sketch entitled, "The Flight." M. McFadden a solo; E. Lang a monologue; B. Armstrong a comic selection.

The concert ended with both teams singing the chorus "My Indiana Home."

WARMOUTH IS A ROOKIE TERROR

Washington's New Southpaw May Be One of the Great Finds of the Year.

The I.W.W. holds no more terrors in the industrial world right now than the letters "W.W.W." in baseball, the W.W.W. referring to Walter W. Warmouth, rookie southpaw pitcher with the Washington Willow Wielders.

Ask the New York Yankees.

When the season was but a few days old the Washington club invaded the new ball park in New York and took on the Yankees, "Babe" Ruth, Bob Meusel, et al. And when Clark Griffith sent this Mr. Warmouth out to the mound strong men wept and women turned their heads away in fear. "They'll murder the poor boy," sobbed even the strongest fans.

Murder was done, all right. But Mr. Warmouth was the perpetrator. He strangled the murderous maulers of the Yanks and let them down with three hits—one double and two singles.

"Babe" Ruth went hitless. So did "Whitey" Witt, Wallie Schang and Wallie Pipp.

The Yank wrecking crew was so helpless and pitiful to gaze upon that in the eighth Warmouth walked Joe Bush, Witt and Ruth with two out, just to let them stretch their legs. Then he forced Pipp to pop to Peckinpaugh.

Warmouth was with the Little Rock club, in the Southern Association last season, when he won 17 and lost 22 games. He was very much the same easy pitching motion—with reverse English—that Walter Johnson has, which speaks well for his chances of sticking a long time. Which ought to be bad news for the Yanks, and probably won't make any other players in the American circuit cheer.

Brinton Team Won Five-Pin Match.

The picked Brinton Carpet five-pin team defeated the Lawn Bowlers in a match game last evening by 170 pins. High scores were the order of the evening, Marsden being the high man with 669. His high for a single game was 293. The scores were:

Swimming Knowledge Saved Entire Family.

Dr. Frank Crane, in an article appearing in a recent number of Physical Culture, stresses the importance of a knowledge of the art of swimming. Dr. Crane cites the instance of the family of Prof. Edwin Kremmer, of Princeton, who, with his wife and family, was travelling on a South American steamer which took fire from an explosion. Clad only in scanty apparel the entire family were thrown into the water and managed to reach shore. They were the only first cabin passengers saved.

Realizing that it pays to know how to swim the Y.M.C.A. each year endeavours to instruct the boys of the city in the art. Commencing next week a special class for boys in the membership will be organized and when this course is completed the boys of the different schools will be taken care of.

Situated as Peterboro is, no boy or girl should be permitted to grow up without receiving some assistance towards learning the art of swimming. Of course, each year sees a goodly number of our young people learn to swim at the bathing beaches and elsewhere but the more timid have need of the special sympathetic instruction of the indoor pool.

Weather permitting, the boys of the Y.M.C.A. of all ages will participate in an outing to the woods on Saturday next. It is proposed that the party leave the Association building at 10 a.m. and after lunch in the open indulge in a program of soft ball and group games.

HASTINGS SPORTS

HASTINGS, May 18.—The Hastings A.A.A. are making preparations for a big day on June 4.

Campbellford intermediates will cross sticks with Hastings and with some of the players of their last year's team on the lineup a grand exhibition of lacrosse will be staged.

Colborne are billed for a league game and Dr. J. H. Hess, manager of the local team, expects to pull a victory.

The association are working to make this one grand day.

The Hastings juveniles will play an exhibition game at Deseronto on May 24, at the big celebration in Deseronto.

JEALOUSY SEEN IN CENTRAL LOOP

Port Hope and Oshawa Are Busy Taking Wallops at the Greybirds.

The Belleville Ontario has the following to say regarding "A" Section of the Central League.

With all teams in the Big Four section of the Central League Loop going strong, it has remained for "A" Group teams, the little fellows, to show themselves green with envy and jealousy to the nth degree of one another. Was it ever so? Verily it was.

It has remained for Port Hope team of "in-an-outers" for years to declare that "probably Lindsay would be dropped" with Port Hope not able yet to produce a pitcher of any calibre though baseball of sorts has been played there "since the wet spring of seventy-eight."

Oshawa has been casting slams of varying degree at most everybody — Oshawa, the "horrible example" of last season. And Lindsay not being a busher, comes back. Comes back strong, and has a home brew team. Here's wishing Lindsay luck on its "home brew" team which the Post of that town says, lines up as follows:

Pitcher—C. Begg of Lindsay, Andy Garlow of Lindsay, Dan Sova of Lindsay.

Catcher—Murchinson of Oakwood, D. Begg of Lindsay, Warner Myers of Rochester, N.Y.

1st BaseBAl. Weirdrick of Rochester, N.Y., B. C. Stone of Lindsay.

2nd Base—Orville Ashton of Lindsay.

Shortstop—Bruce of Lindsay, McDonald and McMahon of Lindsay.

3rd Base—Dawson of Lindsay.

Outfield—Dawson of Lindsay, McDonald, Richman, McMahon, W. Hunter, McBrien, Ryley, W. Weldon, W. Mark, A. Gage, Workman, Miles, Dr. Shier and Abbs, all of Lindsay.

Paddock Case May Need Explaining.

In attempting to justify its position in the Paddock controversy, the American Olympic Committee will have a hard time explaining how it came to raise no objection over the trip of Wiliam M. Johnston to the European tennis championships. The United States Lawn Tennis Association belongs to the committee and its president is an active member. It seems more and more that the A.A.U. and its interlocked A.O.C. was out looking for grounds to punish Paddock.

Paddock told an interesting story of an incident that happened when the A.A.U. had him on the carpet before he sailed for France. He was told that it was to the best interest of the 1924 Olympic team that he remain in the United States this summer. During the conversation one of the committeemen stood up, peered intently at Paddock, and said:

"Young man, do you love your country?"

Paddock said it was such a sham play at firewords that he laughed out loud, and the committee said it was outraged and that the nation had been insulted.

Too Many New Balls Put in Play, Says Meadows.

"Pitching has changed in the last few years" observes Meadows, "and the ball has something to do with it. In the first place, the rule makers put a ban on a pitcher putting any foreign substance on a sphere or cutting or nicking the cover. With this ban in effect the ball wouldn't curve or sail as it used to.

"Then, again, it used to be not more than four or five balls were used in a single game. Now a new ball is thrown out every time one is fouled. The result is that a pitcher has a new ball in his hand almost all the time. It not only is a good ball with which to pitch but it is a ball that has been batted around a bit.

"This means he can't throw as sharp a curve as he could with a used ball. I know I can't curve as I used to, and I blame it on the unending flow of new baseballs in a game.

"It's the change-of-pace pitcher who is at the top of the heap today. Take a pitcher with a slow curve and good control and he's going to win.

"That's all Donohue, Cincinnati's successful young pitcher, has—slow and control."

Mercantile Opener Again Postponed.

The weather man again delayed the opening of the Mercantile League schedule when owing to weather conditions the Westclox and C.P.C. were unable to start their scheduled game yesterday afternoon. So far this week the continued rain has upset all schedules, the juvenile and midget teams suffering as well as the Mercantiles. The next Mercantile fixture is scheduled for Monday evening at 6.15 o'clock when the Lock Works and C.P.C. will meet.

Efforts are being made to obtain other grounds for one or two games before Victoria Day, but so far have met with but little success.

Do you know Baseball?

by Billy Evans

Questions

ONE—Is it possible for a pitcher to be shifted to some other position and then be recalled as a pitcher?

TWO—If the umpire calls a balk on the pitcher, as the pitcher delivers the ball, which the batter hits for a home run, what happens?

THREE—If a runner going over from second to third be retired at that base, because the shortstop obstructed him just enough to cause the out, what is the ruling?

FOUR—When a fielder hits a batted ball with a thrown glove, what is the ruling?

FIVE—Is there any difference if he partially stops a thrown ball with his glove which he has detached from his person?

Answers

ONE—A player can be used at any position provided he remains in the game.

TWO—The moment the umpire calls a balk the ball becomes dead, making no play possible and rendering void the home run that was hit.

THREE—The runner is entitled to advance to the base to which he was going if the fielder obstructed his way and prevented him from making that base.

FOUR—When a fielder hits a batted ball with his glove the runner or runners shall be entitled to three bases.

FIVE—If it is a thrown ball the runner or runners shall be entitled to only two bases.

BUYING PLAYERS IS ALL A GAMBLE

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, May 15 (United Press). — When George W. Grant owned the Boston Braves he used to like to philosophise on the gambles that baseball presents for a magnate. No being financially fixed as well Not being financially fixed as well as some of the more wealthy clubs, Grant used to do most of his gambling on gathering in young unbling on gathering in young unknowns from the rookie world.

"It's all in luck," Gran said one day last winter. "It's all in luck." Grant said one day last winter. "Pat Moran got a whole team of fine young rookies, who made regulars for him in one big sweep of the minors. Maybe he'll never find another one. They all come in bunches and some day I'll get mine."

He didn't stay in baseball long enough to see his hopes fulfilled at least partially. He sold the club during the winter and the expected strike of the Braves in the rookie market followed his retirement.

The Braves are disporting as classy a bunch of young players this season as are to be found in numbers on any major league club. In Outfielders Bagwell and Felix, Second Baseman Conlon and Pitcher Genewich the Braves have a bunch of jewels.

Conlon, especially, seems to be a prize find. The former captain and star of the Harvard 'varsity nine was secured for a small bonus and he looks like the best fielding second baseman that has come into the majors since Eddie Collins made his debut.

The Harvard star stepped right off the campus at Cambridge into a big league uniform, and while he may have much to learn, he has the mental qualifications to absorb his lessons quickly and he has natural baseball ability.

Bagwell looks like another sure star.

The most striking commentary that can be made on Jim Genewich is that he cost the Braves ten cents, representing his carfare to and from the club offices, and he won his first two games in the big-time—both against the Giants.

Jack Bentley cost the Giants $65,000 and he is no youngster. Genewich, as has been said, cost a thin dime and he is only nineteen. Bentley lost his first two games and Genewich won his first two.

Maybe that doesn't mean anything, but any rookie pitcher who has the nerve to go in and pitch against the world's champions with the abandon and carelessness that Genewich used against the Giants has something and a lot of something.

In the hands of Fred Mitchell, one of the best pitching coaches among the major league managers, and with Dick Rudolph to wise him up, young Genewich might develop into the pitching sensation of the year.

SOCCER NOTES

Both Junior games will be played at the Oval tomorrow. The Peterboro United and C.P.C. juniors will play the first game with the kick off at 1.30. The referees will be Sam Berry and Sam Jones.

The following team will line up for the Peterboro United: Cooper, Slaughter, Bradley, Sweeting, Connor, P. Vinette, Montgomery, Cordery, H. Vinette, Dundas, Smith.

AT CODRINGTON AND DISTRICT

Major Belford Has Not Yet Opened Election Campaign — Farmer Claims Porker Was Stolen.

CODRINGTON, May 18.— John W. Hennessy, who resides on a farm near this place, has invoked the aid of the police at Trenton to recover a pig which he claims has been stolen from him, the alleged thief being a commercial traveller who represents a wholesale grocery firm in Belleville.

Mr. Hennessy's pig, a young animal, was injured in an accident. Putting it in a bag he placed it in the rear of his buggy and started for the home of Dr. West, a veterinary surgeon near Warkworth. When he reached his destination pig and bag were missing and he started back to search for his property, believing that the pig had jumped from the buggy and that he would find it along the road.

The first trace he got of it was when a farmer near here told him that a commercial traveller, well known in the district, had offered to sell him the pig, easily identified by its injury. The drummer, who travels in an auto, told the farmer that the pig, together with $5 in cash, had been taken in settlement of an old debt for $10 and he offered the animal for the latter amount. When the pig was removed from the bag for inspection the injury was disclosed and the negotiations were abruptly broken off.

Mr. Hennessy laid the case before the Trenton police and secured the promise of official aid to recover his property and punish the drummer who appropriated it after, it is thought, finding it on the road.

A Modern Cincinnatus.

Major J. F. B. Belford, Conservative nominee in Northumberland East, who resides on a farm about a mile from here, has not yet started his campaign. Ever since the season opened the Major has been engaged driving a team of four horses getting in his crop. He is an Anglican clergyman having won his military title as a chaplain in the late war, and besides working six days a week on his farm, preaches twice on Sunday, at Wooler and Warkworth. This pastoral work is entirely voluntary on his part as the parishes referred to are without regular incumbents.

"Mike" Stole All the Spotlight and Tommy Had a Hard Time Getting Recognition as a First-Class Boxer.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, May 18, (United Press.)—Tommy Gibbons had one of the most discouraging battles to get recognition as a first class boxer that can be found on the pages of ring history.

He had that tremendous handicap of an older celebrity in his family and it took ten years of exasperating experience for him to earn recognition as Tom Gibbons, instead of "Mike Gibbons' brother."

Mike, "the phantom," regarded as one of the greatest boxers of all time, achieved such fame and drew so much notice to himself that it was considered enough for Tom, when he started out, to flatter him with an association of the family name.

It was not until Mike retired from the ring, a wealthy and substantial man of affairs in St. Paul, that Tom had the chance to step out as an individual and get some recognition for himself by winning thirty out of thirty-four contests with a knockout.

The Tide Has Turned

Perhaps now the tide has turned and if Mike goes to Shelby to see Tom go against Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight championship, he will be pointed out as the brother of Tom Gibbons.

As he overcame that 'famous brother" handicap, so Tom has cleared other obstacles in his path by patience, by zeal in his work and above all by respecting the rights of others to their own opinion.

Tom Gibbons has been criticized more bitterly and with less justification than any of the modern boxers. The old timers did not suffer it as much either because the writers in those days were not given such latitude in newspaper column for the expression of their own opinion. Gibbons weathered it all, however, on the theory that he was a public character and that criticism was just as much the right of those who saw things that way as praise was for those of contrary belief.

His attitude was shown after one of his bouts in New York. His friend were passing in and out of the dressing room, giving him a word and a pat on the back.

"You looked fine tonight, I never saw you so good, said one.

"I thought so, too," Tom replied.

The next one in remarked:

"Tom, you were off tonight. You didn't look a bit good. What was the matter?"

"I just wasn't good, I guess," he answered.

He never grumbled about anything that happened in the ring or about what was written.

After he had lost the decision to Harry Greb in Madison Square Garden some time back, Tommy was crushed and almost heart broken. All his friends were condoling with him and some of them told him he had been made the victim of a very bad decision.

Telegraphed His Wife

He turned to the writer and asked him to take down a telegram to send his wife. The thumb on his right hand was swollen and out of place and he could not handle a pencil.

He dictated a message reflecting the spirit of a gallant loser. He did not alibi or seek sympathy and said merely that he has lost the decision, that he was not hurt or marked and that he would be home as soon as possible.

Gibbons has been censured for picking his spots and his set-ups, for piling up a great paper record on nothing and for dodging opponents of class. These things have all been related in the past and they are part of the past. Tom never replied to criticism, except when it came to misstatements of his age.

"The boxing records have me down as thirty-four but I am only twenty-nine. I was born on March 22, 1894 and I am not a day older than that" he says.

Contrary, also, to many things that have been printed about him and his career, Gibbons did not start as an amateur boxer. He really was steered into boxing as a profession by working out with his brother, Mike.

He started at the age of nineteen and he learned much about boxing from his skilled brother, but he never had the opportunity to develop a great punch for almost seven years.

Fought for $15

His first real fight was staged ten years ago in Minneapolis against Cyclone Kelly and he won by a knockout in three-rounds for which he was given the exorbitant purse of fifteen dollars.

The next week he took on Knockout Brown, a colored boxer, and he won that bout also in the third round with a knockout. He was promised fifteen dollars, but the house was so small he was given a "V" and promised the rest. He also came out of that bout with a broken rib and he laid off for six months.

It was at this point of his career, that the "accident" occurred which made him decide to go into the boxing business seriously.

It happened that Billy Gibson, Benny Leonard's present manager, who was then running the Fairmount A.C. was in one the "accident" and it is one of Gib's pet stories.

The tale is an interesting one and will be made the subject of the next story.

FIGHT TOWN IS A TOUGH PLACE

Shelby, Selected as Scene of Dempsey - Gibbons Bout, Is Second Goldfield.

SHELBY, Mont., May 18.—Main stree here, where Jack Dempsey will risk his title in a fifteen-round bout to a decision against Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul, on July 4, looks like the average main street of the average western small town. Tents vie with one and two-storey frame buildings for vantage points, the street is unpaved and lined with narrow, concrete sidewalks.

Cowpunchers. Indians, gamblers, bootleggers and oil stock salesmen elbow each other up and down Shelby's one street. Shelby is in the heart of northern Montana's oil fields Fifteen miles to the northward oil was discovered a year ago. Today 40 wells are producing and 100 more are being drilled. Gas from a huge well five miles distant supplies Shelby with light and heat.

Is a Second Goldfield

Shelby is merely a second Goldfield, Nev., which the Gans-Nelson fight made famous years ago. Take 3,000 persons, less than 100 buildings and more than 500 tents dropped on a barren plain, dotted with bunch grass and low hills. 2,400 miles from New York City—that's Shelby.

Midnight at Shelby finds scores of men sleeping on the floors of hotels and garages, on billiard tables, in church pews, on the streets. Some of the men have no beds because they are "broke". Others are bedless because a king's ransom cannot purchase a couch.

There are three hotels in Shelby The proprietor of one of them was arrested last week for openly selling Canadian beer. He was released on bonds, and after the United States deputy marshal who 'pinched" him left town "business as usual" went on at the resort.

There is one unique rooming house in the town. A woman rented a base ment under the postoffice building and installed 50 cots there. She rents these at $3 a night each.

Food Prices Prohibitive

One may purchase a good meal in Shelby for $2. Ham and eggs with bread and butter extra, costs $1 a throw. Coffee is 15 cents a cup and the cups are small and thick.

There is one thing that is cheap in Shelby —as cheap as it is in Cuba. It is "booze." Bourbon and Scotch whiskeys, famous long ago in every state of the union, are sold openly in Shelby The liquor comes from Canada, which is only 30 miles away. Daily high-powered motor cars arrive at Shelby with loads of whiskey gin and beer Good whiskey may be purchased for $10 a quart fair quality for $5 Gordon gin in the original bottles is $7 a quart. Beer ith a kick, made in Lethbridge. Canada, sells for 50 and 75 cents a quart. Whiskey is retailed by the drink at from 35 to 50 cents.

In the nearby hills a-plenty of moonshine whiskey is manufactured This sells at Shelby for $5 a gallon and up, and from 15 to 25 cents a drink. The moonshine whiskey is made from corn, rye and wheat generally from corn, however Some of it is colored to resemble bourbon bottled in bond goods.

Gambling Only Business

After dark, gambling is the only busines in Shelby. Gambling dens are found everywhere in back rooms of cafes, stores, pool-halls, soft drink parlors, hotels and garages. Frame shacks are thrown up here and there on the main street, which are used for nothing but gambling. The stakes run high, $3.000 and $4,000 exchanging ownership on the playing of a single hand. An oil operator dropped $55,000 in a game a night or two ago Saturday night the workers in the oil fields generally leave a week's pay with the profesional gamblers, who are found everywhere, in back rooms.

Poker is the most popular game, "Draw" and "stud" poker both are played. There are to be found roulette wheels and dice games, as well as resorts where fan-tan and other card games are popular At the hotels wealthy oil men may be seen playing bridge at a dollar a point.

Then there's the other side of Shelby—churches, a chamber of commerce, schools, newspapers and welfare societies, and the law, too! A woman was fined $150 and sentenced to serve 30 days in jail last week for selling Canadian whiskey.

Ask for the wildest town in the wild and wooly west and there's only one answer—Shelby, Montana.

TAKES MONEY TO BUY BALL PLAYERS

Several of Bush League Stars Have $100,000 Price Tags Attached to Them.

When all records were broken last year by a flood of almost a million dollars from major league treasuries for minor players, close followers of baseball predicted the demise of an orgy of spending and held out the opinion that the days of high-priced ball players had passed.

On the contrary, early development this season seem to indicate that the major league magnates will have to pay even more money next for the the privilege of picking the prize plants from the bushes.

Jack Dunn, who sold Jack Bentley to the New York Giants for $65,000 last winter, laughed at Charley Ebbets when the Brooklyn owner offered $100,000 for his short-stop, Joe Boley. Everyone laughed, however, when Ebbets showed an inclination to spend more than a quarter.

Indications that Dunn wants bigger dough than ever for his stars were further strengthened when he broke out with another chuckle of mirth when the Detriot Tigers said some thing about a willingness to produce about $100,000 for "Lefty" Groves, Dunn's sensational southpaw, who ran up a record of 59 strikeouts in four games.

From the Pacific Coast league comes the word that $100,000 will be considered only as an evidence of good faith when the major league buyers visit the coast market next fall and start negotiating for Gene Valla, the outfielding sensation of the San Francisco Club.

Minor league magnates are wise and fortunate in the position they now hold. They have all the valuable young players and the major league magnates have all the money. The Major leagues are in desperate need of new young players and the market price will run higher when three or four clubs in both big leagues are pennant contenders.

If the major league mgnates had been wise enough several years back to increase the draft price to a size that that would satisfy the minor leaguers, they would have saved themselves a million dollars and a lot of humiliation.

STEEL SUPPLANTS FLINT IN GRINDING OF ROCKS

CHICAGO, May 18 —Just as iron gave way to steel a decade ago, now flint bows to the superiority of this competitor and steps gracefully out.

Importation of flint pebbles from France and Denmark for use in industries dependent on the grinding of rock, has practically been abandoned, due to the development of steel balls for this purpose, according to the Structural Materials Research Laboratory of Lewis Institute here. Some years ago there was a heavy demand for the flint stones, the bulk of which was obtained abroad.

These flint pebbles, according to the announcement, were used in the cement industry in the finer grinding operations, where limestone, shale and clay are reduced to fine powder Preliminary crushing is done by a variety of methods, but the pulverizing was the work of the pebbles. Now steel balls are used. Long cylinders, known as ball or tube mills are half filled with steel balls, and when the raw materials are put in, the cylinder is revolved. The balls climb the side of the cylinder and fall back on the raw material pounding and rubbing it to powder. Some of the smaller machines will contain 10 or 11 tons of balls, while the largest ones need 34 to 38 tons So thorough is the operation of the tube mills that the rock powder produced is finer than flour, and will pass through a sieve finer than silk. Similar machines are used in grinding the glass-hard clinker to finished cement, which must pass an equally fine sieve test.

Although some of the California mills still use flint pebbles, which are found in that state, the majority of the plants use steel balls, from 7-8 of an inch to five inches in diameter. Last year well over 35,000,000 tons of raw materials and 20,000,000 tons of clinker were pulverized by the cement industry in machines of this type.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

CHAPTER XXXII

Four days before Thanksgiving Brother Anthony returned from El Toro with Father Dominic's little automobile purring as it had given the little car a thorough overhauling and equipped it with new tires and brake lining at the expense of Miguel Farrel. Father Dominic looked the rejuvenated ruin over with prideful eyes and his saintly old face puckered in a smile.

"Brother Anthony," he declared to that mildly crack-brained person, "that little conveyance has been responsible for many a furious exhibition of temper on your part. But God is good. He will forgive you, and has He not proved it by moving our dear Don Mike to save you from the plague of repairing it for many months to come?"

Brother Anthony, whose sense of humor, had he ever possessed one, had long since been ruined in his battles with Father Dominic's automobile, raised a dour face.

"Speaking of Don Miguel, I am informed that our young Don Miguel has gone to Baja California, there to race Panchito publicly for a purse of ten thousand dollars gold. I would, Father Dominic, that I might see that race."

Father Dominic laid his hand on poor Brother Anthony's shoulder. "Because you have suffered for righteousness' sake, Brother Anthony, your wish shall be granted. Tomorrow you shall drive Pablo and Carolina and me to Tia Juana in Baja California to see Panchito race on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day. We will attend mass in San Diego in the morning and pray for victory for him and his glorious young master."

Big tears stood in Brother Anthony's eyes. At last! At last! Poor Brother Anthony was a human being, albeit his reason tottered on its throne at certain times of the moon. He did love race-horses and horse-races, and for a quarter of a century he had been trying to forget them in the peace and quiet of the garden of the Mission de la Madre Dolorosa.

"Our Don Mike has made this possible?" he quavered.

Father Dominic nodded.

"God will pay him," murmured Brother Anthony, and hastened away to the chapel to remind the Almighty of the debt.

Against the journey to Baja California Carolina had baked a tremendous pot of brown beans and fried a hundred tortillas. Pablo had added some twenty pounds of jerked meat and chilli peppers, a tarpaulin Don Mike had formerly used when camping, and a roll of bedding; and when Brother Anthony called for them at daylight the following morning, both were up and arrayed in their Sunday clothes and gayest colors. In an empty tobacco sack, worn like an amulet around her fat neck and resting on her bosom, Carolina carried some twenty-eight dollars earned as a laundress to Kay and her mother; while in the pocket of Pablo's new corduroy breeches reposed the two hundred-dollar bills given him by the altogether inexplicable Senor Parker. Knowing Brother Anthony to be absolutely penniless (for he had taken the vow of poverty) Pablo suffered keenly in the realization that Panchito, the pride of El Palomar, was to run in the greatest horse race known to man, with not a centavo of Brother Anthony's money bet on the result. Pablo knew better than to take Father Dominic into his confidence when the latter joined them at the Mission, but by the time they had reached El Toro, he had solved the riddle. He changed one of his hundred dollar bills, made up a little roll of two ten-dollar bills and slipped it in the pocket of the brown habit where he knew Brother Anthony kept his cigarette papers and tobacco.

At Ventura, when they stopped at a garage to take on oil and gasoline, Brother Anthony showed Pablo the roll of bills, amounting to twenty dollars, and ascribed his possession of them to nothing more nor less than a divine miracle. Pablo agreed with him. He also noticed that for reasons best known to himself, Brother Anthony made no mention of this miracle to his superior, Father Dominic.

At about two o'clock on Thanksgiving Day the pilgrims from the San Gregorio sputtered up to the entrance of the Lower California Jockey Club at Tia Juana, parked, and approached the entrance. They were hesitant, awed by the scenes around them. Father Dominic's rusty brown habit and his shovel hat constituted a novel sight in these worldly precincts, and the old Fedora hat worn by Brother Anthovy was the subject of many a sly nudge and smile. Pablo and Carolina, being typical of the country, passed unnoticed.

FASHION NOTES.
Matrons who are weary of the batteau shaped necklines will be interested in the surplice bodice effects which are gaining foothold in the fashion world lately. So often the V-shaped neckline is more becoming than the rounded or batteau-shaped one and the surplice front offers an interesting change.

To be just a trifle dressy, the sports jacquette must have sash ends embroidered in colors and tying in front in draped Egyptian effect. The sash is attached at the side seams—leaving the back plain and unbelted—and drapes across the front of the jacquette with wide ends tying in front.

One-piece Jersey bathing suits monogramed in wool on the left side are among the new wrinkles in bathing attire.

A pretty finish for the batteau neck is the unstanding bias fold of organdy which ties in a bow on the left shoulder with long ends falling to the waistline. Pecot-edged ribbon is used in this same manner.

Colored voile undergarments embroidered in tiny rose-buds like the handkerchief rose-buds are as pretty and summery as they are new. Green, yellow, orchid and pink are the most effective colors for voile undergarments.

New Society

Mr. Gordon Lamb of Detroit, is in the city attending the funeral of his grandfather, the late Mr. Chas. Corneil.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., will be in the city to-morrow.

Yesterday's Toronto Telegram, speaking of the "second evening's programme in the closing exercises of the Toronto Conservatory of Music in Convocation Hall, said:

"Miss Agnes Logan, pupil of Mr. Carlos Buhler, was associated with her teacher in the Allegro from MacDowell's A Minor Concerto. If this young lady's gift were to be described in architectural terms we would say she was a cathedral builder. Her rhythmic sense is definite as chiselled granite, and it is hard to say in what form her matured sense of beauty will find expression. She is an artist who challenges you."

Mrs. C. E. Jamieson was hostess at a high tea and bridge yesterday in honor of Miss Phyllis Robertson.

Miss Blanche Graham of Lakefield, attended the A.Y.P.A. District Council meeting last evening.

CONTRACTS ARE LET FOR POWER PLANT

20,000 H. P. to Be Developed as First Unit at Des Quinze.

COBALT, May 18. — In an interview with J. H. Black of the Northern Canada Power Company, your correspondent learned that contracts have already been let to proceed with the development of a first unit of 20,000 hydro-electric horsepower at Des Quinze.

The firm of Morrow & Beatty, of Peterboro, has been awarded the contract to build the plant, while Sutcliffe & Neelands, together with Gordon Summers, have been engaged to survey the transmission line.

It has been decided to develop 25-cycle energy, to conform with the plants of the Northern Canada Power Company in the Porcupine district, and that in the event of energy from this source being required for Cobalt, South Lorraine or Kirkland Lake, a regenerating plant may be installed to conform to the 50-cycle energy in thees fields.

It has also been decided to erect a steel tower transmission line as added precaution against fire and to lend durability to the line.

VOL. LII., No. 118 PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1923 PRICE THREE CENTS

INDIAN RIVER MAN OBSERVES HIS BIRTHDAY

Writes Record of Uneventful Life for the Benefit of Readers of the Examiner.

IS WELL KNOWN

On 19th of this month, P. G. Walker, of Indian River will celebrate 74th anniversary of his birth. There may be those in Peterboro who do not know P. G. Walker, but to many he has been a familiar figure for many years, travelling to and fro on the roads of Peterboro county.

The subject of many loud-voiced conversations on current topics. For P. G. Walker, has been quite a deaf man for nearly half a century now.

In the "strange life of P. J. Walker, written for The Examiner," in which an entire scribbler is used up, from which these paragraphs have been taken, he used a faithful a'y of his, the lead pencil, and says: "I have carr ed a page and pencil in my pocket for forty years. I have been on the road off and on for 35 years. I have sold thousands of do'lars worth of goods and made hundreds of bargains, all by the pencil."

In the section of his narrative devoted to a comparison of the relative disadvantages suffered by the loss of either "eye or ear," he concludes that a loss of hearing s a lesser misfortune, for, as he truly says, "Tom Ed'son is deaf, Beethoven was deaf, and P G. Walker is deaf, and he has had as strange a life as any of the lot."

Born on May 19th, 1849, in the township of Asphodel, "on the lot 'ying north of the farm owned at one time by Tom Lynch," he went to school in Westwood, over a road "about six miles too long for little Pete."

Much of his reminiscence centers around memories of the bird and fish life of a time three quarters of a century back.

There is a curious flavor of familiarity about an anecdote in a section which recalls the shooting by his father of eleven timber pigeons, birds that are gone now for 55 years to somewhere unknown by man. I have seen flocks that would reach ten miles half a mile wide, going to their winter quarters, a beautiful b'rd large, dark green, all alike.

I saw my father shoot eleven pigeons at one report with a ball. There were thirteen birds sitting on one rail, two of them had long legs, after my father had fired, eleven were dead, but the ball passed under the long legged birds. They were so frightened they could not move."

Wild ducks covering acres of Rice Lake, partridges by the thousands, wild geese, black squirrels, bears, deer, wolves and lynx, "all gone," catches of fish that would total in a night of spearing up to seventy bass and lunge, were common sights in those days. Mr. Walker says:

"What is it like now? We can't get a fish if we were dying for one. The game laws came in and since that time the fish has got so scarce there is none for to get, so it looks as if the game laws is a hindrance to the breeding of game rather than a help to save it."

A tale related in recent times by a writer in the Toronto Daily Star, who describes a woodcock is treated by Mr. Walker with disrespect. "The writer of that description, "he says," doesn't know one thing about a woodcock, nor did it seem that he ever saw one. If he did, he has a very short memory. The bird he saw must have been a grey woodpecker."

The proper woodcock, Mr. Walker asserts, "is a large bird about the size of a common farm rooster, with a red head and about two or three inches of the neck is also bright red, the balance of the bird is jet black. That bird never will sit on the ground, but perches on the top of the tallest dead tree he can find, so he can see danger when it does come." The assertions by the unfortunate Star writer, that a cat can catch a woodcock and that it is a whistling bird are also refuted by Mr. Walker, who goes on to say that, with its short stubby beak, the bird will dig out a hole for a meal in the side of a dead tree, and that the male bird has a black eye like a weasel, while the female has a grey eye.

Of the timber of seventy years ago Mr. Walker mentions one oak tree "standing on Richard Short's farm" which measured twenty-two feet around and of a blue oak on the farm of John Spears which was five and one-half feet across the stump. "There was one fine tree that made 28,000 shingles, 18 inches long, half an inch thick, made with a knife; That tree was taken off the farm belonging to Alfred Fife, three miles west of Norwood, and the shingles are this day on the barn owned by John Spears. They have been there for eighty-nine years now, and by all appearances will go a hundred years."

To "Sugar making time" Mr. Walker has devoted a fond section. "On the farm now owned by Tom Davidson near Birdsalls station, Tom Lynch

THROW LIQUOR IN THE OCEAN

That is if any is Left When Ships Reach Three Mile Limit.

NEW YORK, May 19.— (Canadian Press)—All foreign owned steam ship lines are expected to follow the lead of the Cunard in the deciding to refrain from bringing liquor inside the three mile limit in defiance of the supreme courts ruling. The Cunard Line has announced that after June tenth no liquor will be carried inside United States territory waters. This means that if any is left when the three mile zone is reached it will be thrown overboard. On the east ward trip the ships will be bone dry except those which call at Halifax. The latter will take on liquor supplies there

LOCAL GUN CLUB HOLD FIRST MEET

McGaw Challenge Cup Will Be Put Into Competition Again.

The Peterborough Gun Club opened the 1923 season with a practice shoot at the traps last night and some very good scores were handed in.

Tom Curvin and Chris. Graham were tied for first, breaking 33 out of 35, and Stan. Coon came along with a good 22 out of 25. E. Symes and H. Routley broke 20 and Harold Rye and Jim Fowler were next with 16.

The annual meeting of the club took place after the shoot and the following officers were elected:

Hon. President, Chris. Wood; President, Thomas Curvin; Vice-President, Herb. Routley; Secretary-Treasurer, C. G. Graham; Captain, E. Symes.

The club decided to hold a regular shoot every Friday evening, and Mr. Stan. Coon, who has been the holder of the McGaw challenge cup for a number of years, kindly offered to put the cup into competition again, and arrangements are being made to draft a set of rules for the cup competition. The club certainly appreciates Mr. Coon's sporting attitude and expect it will produce some good shooting this season.

The club may hold a shoot on the 24th of May, and notices will be sent out in time.

The secretary will be glad to receive names of those desiring to become members for this season.

It is estimated that in France there are from seven to eight million land owners out of a total population of about 40,000,000.

ROGERS STILL ELUDES POLICE AT NORTH BAY

Fifteen More Men Rushed to the Scene—Province Adds $1,000 to the Rewards.

MAY HEAD EAST

NORTH BAY, May 19.—(Canadian Press).—It looked at noon today as if Leo Rogers, hunted desperado had shaken off his pursuers. He has not been seen by any of posses in chase since last night, according to news reaching here. He is believed to be heading east in direction of Mattawa and there is one report that bus driver saw him at Bonfield, a C.P.R. station, 16 miles east of here The province is offering a reward of thousand dollars for his arrest in addition to $500 offered by town of North Bay. Another squad of Provincial police are leaving Toronto, this afternoon for the scene of the man hunt. Opinion is expresed here that Rogers will eventually endeavor to double back to his old haunts about North Bay.

General Victor Williams, Commissioner of Provincial Police will demand an investigation into why Leo Rogers was released from Kingston penitentiary. "He should have never been released," stated the Commissioner.

"He beat up Inspector Walter Duncan in Kingston and was given 15 years. Dr. Clarke examined him and pronounced him insane, yet in face of Dr. Clarke's report, the man was released by Federal Government authorities. He went right back to his old haunts and you see the result of it all."

Provincial police feel very keenly the death of former Provincial Officer Lefebvre. According to reports received by the police department, Rogers has visited farm houses this morning demanding food at the point of a rifle. Fifteen Provincial police officers left here this afternoon to join in the hunt.

DAUGHTERS OF ENGLAND HAD MUSICAL EVENING

The Lady Lansdowne Lodge of the Daughters of England held a pleasant social and musical evening in the S.O.E. Hall last evening, attended by a goodly number of their friends. Those taking part in the programme were Mesdames C. Scholey, McFarlane, B. Singleton and Patterson, in vocal numbers. Miss Stiles and Master Harold McFarlane gave well-received pianoforte solos, and small Lillian Bugg, of Toronto, a musician of four years of age, had a triumphant response with her song, "Bubbles," to which she was compelled to respond with two encores, "I Aint Nobody's Darling" and "Mademoiselle From Armentieres." Mrs. R. Bugg acted as director and accompanist of the musical programme, and Mr. P. Webb occupied the chair. During the evening, drawings were made for the boudoir cap and dresser scarf donated by Miss Lillian Booth and Mrs. McFarlane. Games, dancing, and service of refreshments occupied the remainder of the evening.

BONAR LAW MUST RESIGN AND AT NO DISTANT DATE

Friends of British Premier Seriously Alarmed at His Illness, Which is More Critical Than at First Surmised

By Lloyd Allen United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, May 19. — Premier Bonar Law now is certain to resign political experts, his friends and the British Press anounce.

The resignation may come very soon, but almost certainly before the end of July, it is learned on the best authority.

The Premier's illness—he is still in Paris, in the care of physicians—is more critical than at first was surmised.

The sudden call for Harley Street Specialists has led the Paris Press to suggest Bonar Law's throat affliction is of a most serious nature. His friends are alarmed but the physicians give out no inkling of the exact nature of the trouble.

Lord Beaverbrook, who went to Paris to see the Prime Minister, his close personal friend, hurried back here in obvious alarm, and went into consultation with Conservatives regarding a successor.

LOCAL FREE MASONS FITTINGLY CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY EVENT

Feast of Music, Song, Wit and Humor at Delightful Banquet, Marked Passing by Corinthian Lodge of 75th Milestone

LADIES PRESENT

Full of honorable years —three-quarters of a century to be precise—during which period Peterborough's development into a thriving industrial city and Masonic inception and substantial growth here synchronize, pardonably proud of its history, traditions and uplifting ideals, all reflecting supreme faith in the Great Architect of the Universe and answering loyalty to king, country and empire, Corinthian Lodge of Freemasons celebrated yesterday its 75th birthday.

The occasion was graced by the presence of Deputy Grand Master Rt. Wor. W. J. Drope, of Whitby, Grand Secretary Rt. Wor. Bro. Wm. Logan, of Hamilton, District Deputy Grand Master Rt. Wor. Bro. Wm. G. Groves, of Lindsay, and Wor. Bro. Daniel H. Burritt, a Masonic son of Corinthian Lodge, who held rank as Master when the lodge celebrated its fiftieth anniversary in 1898. Deputy Grand Master Drope also first saw the light of Masonry in this city, Peterborough Lodge being his mother lodge.

The jubilee proceedings opened at the lodge rooms in the afternoon, where a fitting Masonic reception of the distinguished visitors was skilfully tendered by members of the craft, under the direction of Master of Ceremonies H. R. H. Kenner and Committee Chairman Wor. Bro. E. H. D. Hall, assisted by Wor. Bro. E. A. Peck and Past Masters of Corinthian Lodge.

Organized in 1848.

Corinthian is the oldest Masonic lodge in Peterborough, having been first organized in 1848, when the following constituted its charter members: George Cunningham, Thos. Hay, M.D., Rev. J. H. Dunsford, Dr. John Gilchrist, Rev. Robt. J. C. Taylor, William H. Weller, Leon Lesparance. Within a short time after the opening the following brethren affiliated with the Lodge: Robert Dennistoun, J. W. Frood, John Drake, George Read, Joseph Plymouth, Charles Perry, Kivas Tully, John Bell.

It is of interest to note that the Lodge has had among its members many men of prominence in the Craft, in the community and in public life. One of the Charter Members, the late William Henry Weller, was Grand Master in 1879. Another of the earliest members was Kivas Tully, an Honorary Past Grand Master. Kivas Tully was engineer in charge and under his service the survey and building of the road-bed of the Grand Trunk Railway progressed.

Two other members, initiated in Corinthian Lodge, became Grand Lodge officers, viz.: Hon. Thomas White, who was Deputy Grand Master and an Honorary Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada. Hon. William N. Kennedy, who was Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Manitoba. In addition many members of Corinthian Lodge have held office in Grand Lodge.

Eight present and former members have been members of the Parliament of Canada or the Legislature of Ontario, and two are, or were, Supreme Judges. But the members of the Lodge in whom it takes the greatest pride are the twenty-four brethren who enlisted for military service in the Great War and whose names are worthily inserted in a list appended to the Lodge by-laws. There to appear in perpetuity. Of these Bros. Major George W. Bennett, Sapper George E. Revell and Lance Corporal Harry Fagg, were killed in action, and their names and deeds should ever be treasured by their brethren in the Lodge. It is interesting to make note of the fact that the members of the Lodge of the early years understood and practiced the principles of the Order, for the Lodge raised a special fund during the Crimean War for the benefit of the widows and orphans of those who fell in battle. It is also worthy of remark, that this financial effort, shared in all over the province, as at that time constituted, was known as The Patriotic Fund, And so, in 1914, history repeated itself.

Brilliant Gathering.

The social function in connection with this auspicious event in the annals of the A.F. & A.M. here, took the shape of an altogether delightful banquet set in the G.W.V.A. hall last night, when a veritable feast of edibles, song, music and after dinner speeches rounded out an anniversary which will live long in the memories of all participants. The hall was additionally adorned for a Masonic gathering) by the attendance of the brethrens' ladies; and a real jolly evening was spent, featured by barrage after barrage of perfectly-irresistible wit and humor and side-splitting anecdote. Mine Host T. H. Hooper catered a tempting and delectable menu, served by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. on invitingly floral-bedecked tables ranged beneath the overhanging shadows of colorful pennants which, with varied-tinted flags for wall decorations, created a festive and gala scenic effect quite inspiring. The happy gathering numbered 158 all told.

Ladies Keep Secrets?

Wor. Bro. Dr. T. N. Greer made a very acceptable chairman, who had been more or less associated with Corinthian Lodge for some 30 years. Referring to the lodge's fiftieth anniversary in 1898, he eulogized Bro. Daniel H. Burritt (present) as having then contributed very largely to the success of that occasion. Turning to the ladies, he had great pleasure in welcoming the fair sex, of whom he did not agree with the general opinion in secret society circles, that they could not keep a secret. On the contrary, in his opinion, the ladies are past masters at keeping a secret—GOING.

Delightfully Reminiscent.

In proposing the toast to the Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Canada, in Ontario, Rt. Wor. Bro. Duncan Walker was amusingly reminiscent of the "good old days" when a Masonic bill of fare always concluded with coffee, and so forth, and so forth. But in a more serious veing he gave quite an informative review of Corinthian Lodge's history, conveying the gratifying information that since its organization 75 fears ago with seven members there had been 450 members initiated and 100 affiliations from other lodges. Stressing the growth of Free Masonry in Peterborough, he gave the total membership of its three lodges to-day as 700.

Replying to the foregoing toast, Rt. Wor. Bro. W. J. Drope was pleased to sit at the banquet board

FLOWERS MADE DEBUT ON THE MARKET TODAY

Auctioneer's Taste Inclined to White While Medicine Man Favoured a Red Bloom.

TODAY'S PRICES

The farmers' market was well patronized this morning. Although produce was not particularly plentiful, there was variety in the carts. The fish man, whose wares were all frozen stiff a fortnight ago, had ice around his whitefish and red-fleshed mud-cats this morning. The large flat plaice fish, with their finny fringe, were popular with the crowd.

Two dealers had maple syrup at 75 cents a quart, and there were plenty of potatoes at a general price of $1 a bag. The fresh green of onions and the red of new rhubarb brightened up most of the curb offerings, both at a nickel for a generous bunch. There was new asparagus, home-grown, on one cart, at 20 cents a bunch, carrots were 20 cents, black beans for seeding 20 cents a pint, and Ben Davis apples 30 cents a peck. Little, cross pigs in a close crate were $14 a pair, and baby collies, whining softly for an absent mother, were a dollar apiece.

Small, sturdy-looking apple tree beginners were $1.10, with pear shoots $1.25. Raspberry runners were a nickel apiece, and strawberry plants 70 cents for a hundred. Flowering tulips, their waxy cups holding the spring sunshine in pure-toned chalices of deep red and white, were selling at forty cents a dozen. Both the auctioneer and the patent-medicine man, who attracted large crowds, were decorated with tulips, the auctnoneer's taste inclining to the white flower, the latter gentleman adorned with a wine-colored bloom.

Upstairs, one woman had green plants at 10 cents apiece; fever few and lemon lily and bergamot, with orange blossom at 15 cents. Dahlia bulbs were 3 for a quarter, cabbage and cauliflower and tomato plants 2 for 35 cents. Red gladioli bulbs, delivered with minute instructions as to the danger of planting them upside down, were two cents apiece.

Eggs were plentiful and so was butter. Eggs were selling from 26 to 28 cents a dozen, and butter from 35 to 38 cents a pound. The old-fashioned round prints offered by one woman met with a quick sale. Fowl, in varying ages, ranged in price from 28 to 35 cents per pound.

On Monday next Mr. Fred B. Messing will be the speaker at the Murray Street Baptist Church on his experiences in Poland. Mr. Messing is bringing to the people of Peterborough the most interesting lecture that has ever been given here of Poland His many pictures have opened many an eye, and he wishes particularly to impress upon his listeners the terrible conditions of Poland but their bright future.

His lecture on Monday evening should be attended by all school pupils, as his talk concerns the products of the land, the forest, queer railroads, and some of the most beautiful and picturesque sites. An opportunity such as this should not be passed along without being largely accepted.

EXCLAMATION IN COURT PUNISHED

Spectator's "Hear, Hear" Brought Him Fine of $50 or Jail.

For calling out an approving "Hear, hear," in a Toronto court yesterday, Robert Morrow was summarily fined $50 by Mr. Justice Orde for contempt of court.

The case involved a claim for alimony and the custody of two children. T. H. Lennox, counsel for Garton Munshaw, the father of the children, objected to them being placed in the care of their grandmother.

"She was the cause of all the trouble," he said, and Morrow was so much in accord with that sentiment that he gave utterance to the offending "Hear, hear."

"Who was that?" demanded His Lordship, looking toward the public section of the court-room. Morrow was pointed out and ordered to stand up.

"You are forthwith fined $50 for contempt of court," the Judge announced. "If it is not paid within a week you will spend one week in the County Jail."

Smoking compartments are to be provided in the new wooden-winged monoplanes for use on the London-Amsterdam-Berlin route.

RUSSEL T. SCOTT

Prominent Toronto promoter against whom Miss Dorothy Newburgh, of Lynn Mass., won a verdict of $10.000 for breach of promise.

TWO CARS ONLY KINDLING WOOD

Others in Wreck at Kendry Are Being Lifted Onto Flat Cars and Removed.

Two of the thirteen C.P.R. freight cars that were derailed near Kendry siding Thursday night were smashed up beyond repair, and were ordered yesterday to be broken up and burned in a field alongside the track. Most of the cars, according to a report from Springville, were of steel construction. Practically all of them were more or less damaged and were to-day being loaded on to flat cars for treatment in the repair shops. The wooden parts were crushed considerably, and steel bent or twisted.

Divisional officials inspected the wreck on Friday, and the general opinion was that it was caused by a broken rail. The cars were loaded with grain consigned to Montreal, and the wheat contents, it was said, would be salvaged without serious loss.

SMOKING PROHIBITED AT GASOLINE STATIONS

Leaving the engine running while filling the car with gasoline caused a fire this morning at the corner of George and McDonnel Streets, which was extinguished without damage.

Chief Gimblett calls the attention of motor car drivers and the attendants at gasoline pumps to the fact that no smoking should be allowed near gasoline pumps and engines should be shut off while gasoline is being taken.

SOCIETY TAKE POPHAM BLOCK FOR CHILDREN

Property Will Meet the Needs of the Society for Many Years to Come—Paid $14,000.

WILL RAISE $2,000

At a general meeting of the Children's Aid Society, held yesterday afternoon, it was decided to purchase the property in the South Ward, known as the Popham site, including the whole block bounded by George, Lock, Princess and Ware streets, immediately opposite King Edward Park and the fine school directly west of the main block. It was considered that this premises would fully meet the needs of the Society, and in future years, if the city expanded, and the land was required for building purposes that it could be disposed of and the avails go to the erection of a properly designed building on another site. With this end in view the Society acted.

The premises will be ocupied after July 1st, and in the meantime the Society has access to the grounds and buildings attached for the purpose of preliminary moving in. It is decided that very little will be required on the premises and no alterations at all. The roof will be recovered, and that is about all.

In this venture, the Society has invested the savings of the last twenty years, which include donations received from kind friends from time to time. In all $11,500, which make a very substantial payment on the purchase price of $14,000. It is desired very much that in taking over the premises that the transaction may find the institution free from debt, as far as ocupancy is concerned. A balance is to be raised, preferably by public subscription, thus avoiding any appeal to the municipal council, already over-burdened with financial cares. So an appeal is made in the advertisement, that appears in another column, and to which it is hoped that cheerful response may be made. The amount asked for is $4,000 Against this sum subscriptions have already been received of $1500 from Mrs. Popham, and from Mr. B. F. Ackerman $500. Other substantial subscriptions are expected and almost assured, leaving a balance of the objective of $2000 to be provided.

The immediate objects of the Society need not be referred to at length. The Shelter is practically a clearing house for destitute children, where they are taken in, cared for, provided with clothing, food and shelter until homes may be found for them. As wards of the Society they go out to the care of well disposed persons, all under the strictest observation of the officers of the work. The Society and the work fills a vital need in the community, that cannot be met otherwise, the only institution working along lines similar, and for the immediate care,

The Children's Aid Society

Following on the late fire that rendered unfit for occupation, for a time, the Shelter used for so many years, the Society decided to buy and move to New Quarters. A Property has been bought in South Ward, and will presently be occupied.

The Society has invested in this property the savings of the last twenty years, $11,500.00. This leaves in hand only a small amount for maintenance purposes. The price arranged for is $14,000.00.

The Society asks for monetary assistance, to the amount of $4,000.00. Will right-thinking and helpful citizens please assist. Against the above amount asked for subscriptions of $1,500.00 and $500.00 have already been received. The balance is sought for, viz., $2,000.00.

Contributions may be handed to the Treasurer, Mr. C. S. Cummer, Bank of Montreal, 336 George Street.

John Edgar, Secretary. B. F. Ackerman, President.

RECRUITING FOR NAVAL RESERVE IN INLAND PROV.

Organization of Volunteer Naval Reserve Brings Forth Some Comic Comment in the House.

NOT IN COAST CITIES.

OTTAWA, May 19. — Canadian Press. — On orders of the day, Wm. Duff (Liberal, Lunenburg), questioned the government in the House yesterday as to reports that a Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve was being recruited in Saskatoon, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Ottawa. Why, he asked, were these men being recruited in inland cities and not in the Atlantic and Pacific Coast cities?

Hon. E. M. MacDonald, the acting Minister of Defence, replied that two bodies were being organized, a Royal Naval Reserve and a Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. It was the latter which was being recruited in the inland cities.

This reserve contained men from all walks of life. The Royal Naval Reserve was to be recruited later and would be recruited in the Atlantic and Pacific Coast cities.

Mr. Duff asked if members of the volunteer reserve would be supplied with sea-sickness remedies or if they would train on prairie schooners.

The speaker called Mr. Duff's attention to the rule prohibiting debate on orders of the day. "If we continue we shall all be at sea," he asked, and the House applauded.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen asked which of the forces it was proposed to train by teaching its members to catch fish.

Mr. MacDonald replied that he had not yet considered this phase of the matter.

BAPTISMS THROUGHOUT WORLD SHOW BIG GAINS

KANSAS CITY, May 19.—(Associated Press)—Greatly increased numbers of baptisms in all the 18 mission fields around the world during the past year were reported to the Southern Baptist convention tonight, by Dr. J. F. Love, corresponding secretary of the foreign mission board in presenting his annual report.

Southern Europe is the newest territory in which Southern Baptists have been operating during the past two years, and during the year new theological schools and publication houses were established at Barcelona, Budapest, Bucharest and Petrograd, the report said. While native missionaries have been employed in Palestine and Syria for some time, this year marked the sending out of four American missionaries who have established headquarters at Jerusalem and are now making a survey of Palestine and Syria with a view to the establishment of a more extensive work in those countries, embodying evangelistic, educational, publication and benevolent work.

The 18 countries in which Southern Baptists are now carrying on foreign mission work, and in which there is a combined population of 000,000,000 are, Africa, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, China, Japan, Spain, Italy, Jugo-Slavia, Hungary, Roumania, Palestine, Syria, Siberia and Mexico.

UGLY RUMORS ARE AFLOAT, BRIGHTON

A Grim Fire Tragedy Thought By Some Not to Have Resulted From Mere Accident.

BRIGHTON, May 19.— Following the revelation of wrong-doing by young men in this village, whose misdeeds were uncovered by the Provincial police, all sorts of ugly rumours are afloat concerning the Christmas night tragedy which shocked the entire community. On that date William Firman and his little daughter were burned to death in a fire which consumed their home, a frame house, about two miles from Brighton.

On the evening, following the usual Christmas festivities, Mrs. Firman and her son, aged 12, came to Brighton to attend a picture show, leaving Mr. Firman and the daughter at home alone. It was the custom of these two to sleep for a short time after supper on a lounge near the stove.

The fire which at the time was supposed to have started from a defective furnace connection, was not noticed by the neighbors until the entire building was in flames. The bodies of the two unfortunate inmates were discovered later burned almost beyond recognition. At the time of the tragedy the affair was regarded as an accident, but present rumours give it a more serious aspect and further developments are expected following official investigation.

It was generally known that the late Mr. Firman was in the habit of keeping a considerable sum of money in the house. It is stated now that the box which was used as a home bank, was found, broken open and empty, near the barn some time after the fire. Mr. Firman's body was not found where the lounge on which he slept had been placed, but near one of the doors, and this lends color to the theory that he had been roused before the fire, as at first supposed, cut off his escape.

The victim of this grim tragedy was about 65 years old. He was for some years past engaged in farming and also drove the mail route in his district. Some years ago he was one of the most successful school teachers in the district and all those who knew him speak of him in terms of praise.

REORGANIZATION IN DOMINION ALLIANCE

TORONTO, May 19.—(Canadian Press).—The announcement was made last night of important reorganizations in connection with the Dominion Alliance, two of the chief changes being the resignation of Rev. B. H. Spence, for 16 years general secretary of the Ontario branch of the Alliance, in order that he may give more time to the increasingly large field of Dominion and world-wide prohibition, and the appointment of R. J. Fleming as president of the Ontario branch of the Alliance and chairman of the Board of Control. It is stated that Mr. Fleming is now gathering around him members of the new board.

It is understood ... Spence will take part in the campaign in Scotland ...

CONSERVATIVES IN OTTAWA SPOTLIGHT

Charged With Responsibility for Present Enormous Public Debt.

OTTAWA, May 19.— (Canadian Press.)—An echo of warmer charges came in the House of Commons last night on the question of public expenditures, when J. J. Hughes, Liberal member for Kings, P.E.I., charged the Conservatives with the responsibility for the present enormous debt. Mr. Hughes charged that the war had "opened the flood gates of expenditure." This Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen emphatically denied.

Earlier in the day R. W. Grimmer (Conservative, Charlotte, N. B.) urged development of St. Croix harbor in Charlotte county as an all year port and L. H. Martell, (Liberal, Hants) suggested cutting off port privileges at present extended to American fishermen as a means of inducing the United States to seriously consider reciprocity.

E. B. Ryckman, (Conservative, E. Toronto), opposed the present Income Tax Act and also the sales tax as an impost which added to consumers charges. Mr. Ryckman declared that if reciprocity pact were arranged the United States would only adhere to it while it was in the interests of American government to do so.

FINE HARBOR IN THE EAST ONLY NEEDS RAILWAY

Development of St. Croix Harbor Would Permit More Canadian Grain to Be Shipped From Home Ports.

ALL-YEAR HARBOR.

OTTAWA, May 19. Canadian Press. — It was almost five o'clock when the budget debate was resumed in the House yesterday afternoon.

R. W. Grimmer, Charlotte, N. B., expressed gratification that Mr. Fielding in altering the British preference, had said that he wished to develop the Canadian ports. Canada, said Mr. Grimmer, could afford to follow the United States in this regard. The use of Canadian ports and Canadian railways for the shipment of Canada's export products should also be developed.

L. H. Martell, Liberal, Hants, supported the tariff policy of the government. He did not propose to discuss the tariff in his speech. He had always been a low tariff man but he realized that a tariff for revenue was necessary while Canada had to meet great obligations. Perhaps if this country were willing to give up the Canadian National Railways it might be possible to make drastic reductions in the tariff but while large deficits were accumulating on the government lines money must be found somewhere. He was supporting the Budget because it was a tariff for revenue measure and not because of its incidental protection.

J. W. King Progressive, N. Huron, declared that the Liberal tariff was a protective tariff and not a tariff for revenue. The Progressive party existed to-day just because the Liberal party had not lived up to its promises in the past. He had supported the Liberal platform in 1896, and believed that Canada had never had a greater statesman than Laurier. He laid the blame for Laurier's failure to carry out the promises of 1896 at the door of the 18 Liberals of Toronto who deserted him over reciprocity and he believed that similar influences were at work in the Liberal party to-day.

It had been said that if you scratch a Progressive, you will find a Tory or a Liberal. They had been scratching for eighteen months. The Liberals had found two Progressives who were not genuine Progressives, in this House; and in Ontario, the Tories had found two more. The rest he could assure the House were genuine.

Mr. King failed to see why Canadian manufacturers should not do well under reciprocity. In no part of the world were greater facilities for manufacturing than in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. There was plenty of power to be had. Only one thing was lacking, a market, and the United States could supply this. "The late president of the Massey-Harris Company told me he was ready for free trade right now," said Mr. King.

It was estimated that there were now five million Canadians in the United States, said Mr. King. "Have we got the best people to fill their places?" he asked. "We have brought over loads of riff-raff from Europe and put them on the land." He advocated restricted immigration.

More Information Asked Regarding the Railway.

OTTAWA, May 19 (Canadian Press). — In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen asked the Government to supply particulars of the $97,000,000 credited against the Canadian National Railways in Mr. Fielding's Budget statement.

A large part of this amount, he thought, must be advances.

He also asked that the Finance Minister give the House a fuller statement as to the financial debt than that included in his Budget statement.

As the Hon Mr. Fielding was not in the House, the Prime Minister promised to secure the information.

DISPUTE IN COURT OWNERSHIP OF DOG

Young Warkworth Couple Charged With Theft of the Animal.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 19. — Col. Floyd, of Cobourg, county magistrate, came to sit in judgment on a case involving the ownership of a dog, the parties interested being from Warkworth and vicinity, Mr. and Mrs. M. Smith, both of whom teach in the school of that village, motored out into the country to fish for trout in a creek which passes through the farm formerly owned by Mr. Walker, Mrs. Smith's father, but which he sold to Charles Puffer four years ago, Mr. Walker moving to Warkworth.

On the farm was a valuable collie dog which refused to leave his old trips to the familiar new residence in the village.

When Mr. and Mrs. Smith started on their way home after trying their luck at fishing, the dog followed them, and was finally taken into the automobile, after an attempt had been made to induce him to go back to the farm.

Mr. Puffer charged the young couple with stealing the animal, although his ownership, it seems, had never been clearly established.

Magistrate Floyd disposd of the case by inducing Mr. Walker to give Mr. Puffer a clear title to the dog, Puffer to pay all costs connected with the hearing.

D. J. Lynch appeared for the defendants.

Local Man Elected.

A Thought

Thou crownest the year with thy goodness.—Psalm 65:11.

In your occupations try to possess your soul in peace. It is not a good plan to be in haste to perform any action that it may be the sooner over. THORNTON OF C. N. HAS SOLUTION OF PROBLEM

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., May 19.—(Canadian Press.)—Sir Henry Thornton greeted by three hundred representatives of various municipalities of Niagara Peninsula at a banquet here last night, declared that immediate solution of transportation problem of this district was at hand and announced that local street railway and inter-urban properties would be put in such condition as to adequately serve each municipality. tI was proposed to acquire private right of way to give rapid inter-urban service between towns in the fruit district.

EAST DURHAM GROUP CHOOSE A. T. FALLIS AS THE STANDARD BEARER

G. A. Smith, of Port Hope, Only Other Name to Go Before the Convention Held in Millbrook.

COL. PRICE SPOKE.

At the Conseravtive Convention held in Millbrook yesterday A. T. Fallis of Cavan, was nominated as the standard bearer for East Durham Conservatives in the coming Provincial Election. There were two names on the ballot, G. A. Smith of Port Hope, the Warden of the County, being the second. A. H. Henderson, former County Warden, of Cavan, was also proposed, but he withdrew his name. On declaration of the ballot, Mr. Smith moved that the nomination of Mr. Fallis be made unanimous.

The seating accommodation of the Town Hall was taxed to capacity and many were compelled to stand in the doorway, interest being stimulated by the popularity of the candidate and the presence of two eminent speakers from Toronto, Colonel W. H. Price and Miss C. Gilmour.

The convention was presided over by J. H. Paul, President for many years of the East Durham Liberal-Conservative Association. F. W. Bowen, Conservative member for Durham, in the Federal House of Commons, and A. Given, publisher of the Millbrook Reporter, and for over 40 years secretary of the Conservative Association in that district, also addressed the Convention.

One of the Blockaders.

Colonel Price in referring to his five-hour speech in the Legislature, said that he believed the Conservatives felt that he was quite justified in his action. It was quite justifiable in view of the unprecedented acts of the Drury government.

A short review of the history of the United Farmer movement in Ontario would provide many surprises, the speaker said. "I dont think the present government is a Farmer government—I prefer to call it a Drury-Raney Government. I believe that this is a free country and the farmers were not open to any criticism when they launched their campaign four years ago. But as they took power on a specific platform we can hold them responsible when they appeal for our suffrage.

The farmer government was unfortunate when it had to go outside its own ranks to select leaders.Drury, Raney and Doherty, who were not elected, have dominated the whole Government at Toronto. If the farmers had had men chosen from their own ranks there would doubtless have been a different record today.

"The farmer," Colonel Price said, "is the backbone of the country.But I want to appeal to you for something more of Canadian citizenship, than is shown by one section fight-

PETITION OUT OF ORDER.

OTTAWA, May 19 (Canadian Press). — The Speaker announced in the House yesterday that the petition against Japanese immigration presented on Thursday by W. G. McQuarrie, New Westminster, was not in order, as it was addressed to the Prime Minister instead of "To the House of Commons in Parliament Assembled."

At Mc. McQuarrie's request the petition was returned to him for re-presentation in proper form.

SOMEBODY BLUNDERED.

The present controversy between the Police Commission and the City Council over the question of the Council's power to reduce the estimates for the Police Department, would have been avoided if the Ontario Government had seen to it that the work of drafting the change in the Act was entrusted to somebody capable of making a sound legal job of it.

If it was the intention of the Legislature to give City Councils the power claimed for them by the local Aldermen the slip-shod individual who drew up the amendment has succeeded in frustrating that intention.

He made the new section so beautifully indefinite that lawyers have no difficulty in getting at least two meanings out of the wording.

The result is that until a decision has been handed down by a court the amendment is of little value inasmuch as legal advice differs widely in the interpretation of the amended Act.

In the case of a measure of such importance as this and involving a point that has always been controversial, it might have been thought that the Government would have been careful to see that the change in the Act was made so definitely that there would be no possibility of any legal quibbling or misunderstanding.

The failure on the part of the Government to do this is responsible for the situation in Peterborough, and for the confusion in other cities over the same question.

RULES FOR CYCLISTS.

The Ontario Safety League continues to send out each week a large number of most useful bulletins on safety first matters—bulletins dealing with the causes of accidents and the necessity of being continually on guard against the perils that lie in wait for the unwary.

A recent warning deals with the bicycle, and it seems to be highly necessary because of the greater danger in the use of bicycles as a result of the increase in traffic. Ten commandments are laid down for the instruction of cyclists, and they are important enough to be reprinted for the benefit of the hundreds of riders who may not see a copy of the bulletin itself.

Here they are:

1. Ride with both hands on the handle-bars.
2. Ride not more than two abreast.
3. Carry no one on your handle-bars.
4. Keep off the sidewalks.
5. Ride with a light after dark.
6. Ride always with a bell, gong or horn.
7. Ride as straight as possible.
8. Ride close to the curb and keep away from the devil-strip.
9. Remember the street is no place for trick riding.
10. Keep clear of other vehicles.

They are all simple enough, but the Examiner wonders how many Peterborough riders keep the ten commandments, or, for that matter, how many keep five of them, or even three?

It is difficult to walk a block at any time during the day without seeing one or more of these safety rules violated in Peterborough—indeed, some riders succeed in breaking all ten within twenty-four hours.

HOW ABOUT PETERBOROUGH?

The terrible disaster in Cleveland, South Carolina, where over 60 people lost their lives in a panic in a school hall following the explosion of a coal-oil lamp will cause a demand in all parts of the continent for a closer inspection of public halls and the provision of more adequate exits in case of danger.

Apparently most of the loss of life in the South Carolina tragedy was caused by the crowd becoming jammed in the narrow exits, and many of the victims were trampled to death.

The heavy mortality will cause each community to consider what might happen if a similar panic were to start in one of its halls.

How about Peterborough, for example?

Are our public places of amusement and meeting places generally in such a condition that an alarm of fire could be handled without loss of life?

Are they provided with ample exits, and are those situated upstairs equipped with adequate fire escape accommodation?

These are points that, in the light of what happened at Cleveland on Thursday night are worth more than passing consideration.

They are usually overlooked until a catastrophe like this occurs, for every community goes along on the theory that accidents will happen somewhtre else rather than at home, and action is postponed until tragedy comes.

It is to be feared that everywhere in the United States and Canada there are death-traps no better in any way than the southern town hall that has claimed so many victims.

A FATAL POLICY.

Mr. Robert Forke with the Progressive proposition would not only deprive Canadian industry of protection; he would heighten taxation of incomes, says the Ottawa Journal. Mr. Forke apparently fails to realize that there is such a thing as killing the goose that lays the golden egg. Canada, at this moment, is a country of super-taxation. Taking account of its duplication of levies—municipal, Provincial and Federal—it is among the most heavily taxed nations in the world. And what is the consequence? Simply that immigration and capital, which invariably shrink from taxation and high living costs, are not coming to Canada. Capital is not coming because it will not risk investment where taxation prohibits much success; immigration never flows toward higher living costs.

For a country of Canada's geographical position this condition is doubly dangerous. In an island country like England, or like Australia, capital is not easily dislodged. But in a country like Canada, next door to the most powerfully organized industrial nation in the world, the position is vastly different. If taxation is high here, Canadian capital simply flows to the United States. If the cost of living is high, and taxation retards development and causes low wages and unemployment, labor crosses the line. That is what is happening today. Our American neighbors, less heavily taxed than we are, and enjoying a notable boom, are attracting our people. They have been going across the border by the thousand during the whole of the past year.

To talk of further taxing Canadian capital and enterprise under such conditions is stupidity. To talk of accompanying that extra taxation with removal of tariff protection is stupidity and worse.

THE HYGIENE COUNCIL.

Not long ago Mrs. Pankhurst visited Peterborough and aroused a number of audiences with her eloquent addresses upon the work of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council.

For the time being at least she succeeded in enlisting the interest of many citizens in this most commendable effort.

Peterborough has been accused of forgetting such things just as readily as she can be awakened to a temporary interest.

Whether this change is true in this particular instance or not may be answered by the attendance at the meeting of the local branch of the Social Hygiene Council which is to be held on Monday night in the Chamber of Commerce.

The Secretary of the Ontario Council will give an address, and the meeting promises to be of a most interesting and instructive nature.

It is open to all, and the size of the audience will tell whether those who applauded Mrs. Pankhurst so vigorously when she was here were sincere in their demonstration.

THE IMPORTANT QUESTION.

Attempts to make the Ontario Temperance Act the chief issue in the Provincial campaign are difficult to justify logically.

The Act is on the statute books according to the expression of the will of the people of this Province, and it will remain on the statute books unless it is repealed in the same way—through the votes of the electorate.

No matter what political party will be returned to power the O. T. A. remains.

Why then should this measure be regarded as the leading or even as an important issue?

The people of Ontario would be better concerned in endeavouring to see whether or not it is possible to select from the parties offering themselves to the electorate a stable efficient Government, a Government strong enough to cut down unessential expenditures and to give efficient administration to its department, a Government that will be ready to stand upon its own responsibility and behind its own legislation, a Government that will not relegate its duties to commissions.

The burden of taxation in Ontario is heavy enough to make itself felt in every circle, and the Province is calling for relief.

Why then waste time in quibbling over a measure that cannot be removed unless the people themselves say so when the real question of the hour should be, how Ontario is to use the coming election most effectively in providing an avenue of escape for herself from the slough of debt in which she is involved?

Less worry over the O. T. A. and more interest in the question of efficient Government seems a sterling remedy for what ails Ontario just now.

IMMIGRANTS MUST BE DIGESTED AS WELL AS SWALLOWED.

Hon. Mr. Stewart tells us that in the last three months there has been an increase of one hundred per cent. in the number of immigrants coming into Canada as compared with the corresponding period last year.

On Monday, Secretary of Labor Davis told an immigration conference at Washington that 62,000 Canadians had entered the United States in the last nine months, and had every one of them paid the head tax of $8. This means that they usually were entering to stay. Moreover, it is highly probable that quite a few entered without arousing the suspicions of the American immigration officers that they intended to stay; but still stayed for all that. In this way, they would escape the head tax.

These sixty-two thousand were entered as "Canadians." It is quite likely that British-born and others who had recently immigrated into Canada but were now leaving it, would be entered as "English," "Scotch," "Irish" or otherwise. This might considerably swell even the above startling figures.

The point we wish to make is that it is quite useless for Hon. Mr. Stewart to rejoice over the increase in our immigration figures, so long as he takes no pains to stop this exhausting hemorrhage in the form of emigration. As a Westerner, Mr. Stewart will fully appreciate this point, though the exodus is by no means confined to the West. What this nation needs today is a policy which will keep our boys at home quite as much as a policy which will pump into the country home-seekers who know nothing of our life, our climate or our local conditions.

We should not confine ourselves to cheering immigrants when they land. We should cheer them up quite as heartily when they get settled on the land and are making their big fight for success.

Any notion that we Easterners are unsympathetic toward efforts to make the immigrant contented in the West, is an impeachment of our sanity. Our prosperity and indeed our continued existence as a free Dominion, are wholly dependent upon the growth of the West; and we cannot make it grow by bringing even the best people in unless we keep them here. This is one of the big problems before the Government—before any Government—and it is perhaps the peculiar responsibility of Mr. Stewart as the Minister from the West.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Calling the sugar refiners a "pack of scoundrels" can hardly be termed refined conduct.

There is one point upon which Liberal and Conservative orators are in accord. They are unanimous on the question of the extravagance of the Drury Government.

The story of a monster lunge being caught within sight of the Parliament Buildings is not surprising. Some big fish are to be found in that neighborhood.

A young lady voter wants to know how the Ontario fight can be a square election when most of the contests are triangular ones.

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"I cannot speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. My husband's mother advised me to take the Vegetable Compound and I started it at once. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine bouncing baby and am able to nurse her and enjoy doing my work. I cannot help recommending such a medicine, and any one seeing me before I took it, and seeing me now, can see what it does for me. I am only too pleased for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. EMILY DAVIS, 721 McGee St., Winnipeg, Man.

CARRIERS FIX FREIGHT RATE ON THE LAKES

Report Tabled in House Yesterday By the Commission — The Present Practice.

NO COMPETITION.

OTTAWA, May 19.—In reference to rate fixing on the great lakes, the Commission in its report which was tabled yesterday in the House, states:

"The fact seems to be that so far at least as the 1922 season was concerned when the fixing of rates suited the carriers, they fixed the rates without consulting the producer, whose grain they were carrying, or the shipper from whom they were to receeive the grain; but when the demand for space by shippers became so great that they could scarcely meet it, they allowed the law of "supply and demand" to operate to a great extent, but still acted as well in concert that the going rate from day to day was easily ascertainable."

The present practice in Winnipeg the report states, is that the chartering of vessls or space therein, is done by agents generally known as vessel brokers. The work so far as Canadian work goes, being nominally in the hands of the Standard Shipping Company managed by Mr. L. H. Wolvin, a brother of Mr. Roy Wolvin: the Tomlinson Company, managed by Mr. Spendlove; and the Western Shipping Company, managed by Mr. Rule. It is questionable if the Western can be called an independent company ;one of its organizers and directors as well as owner of one third of its stock being Mr. L. H. Wolvin, of the Standard Shipping Co. and its manager being Mr. Rule, Mr. Wolvin's former deputy, who appears to hold nearly another one-third of the stock. It seems clear the commission says, that competition on the Canadian side is not nearly so keen as on the American side. In fact, among Winnipeg brokers, it is almost non-existent; but the natural explanation of this is the absence of any real or active competition among the Upper Lake vessel companies, by whom the brokers are employed. So long as there is a practical monopoly of that traffic in the hands of three or four companies who find it so easy to arrange raes theer is not likely to be very serious competition among the brokers. Dealing with rate control, the report continues:

It would appear that, under the circumstances, the only direct rate control advisable is through maximum rates. This also is not without its difficulties; but control through maximum rates would leave a reasonable margin for that competitive bargaining as to rates which the grain dealers desire, while at the same time controlling the upper level of rates.

Without attempting to enumerate here factors that would have to be taken into consideration in this connection it may be said that it would not appear that one maximum rate applicable to the whole season of navigation would be a workable arrangement. It would appear that cognizance must be taken of the differences in conditions as between the first part of the season down to the endof August, and the second portion down to the close of navigation; and it might be necessary, because of special conditions arising within reach of these seasonal periods, to further re-adjust the maximum rates from time to time.

The manner in which suspension of coasting laws would operate is set forth after:

"The regulation of rates through suspension of the coasting laws would not of necessity mean that whenever such suspension took place there would be a large influx of American tonnage into the Canadian grain trade. As already pointed out, the American grain rates are to a considerable extent controlled by ore rates, and whether or not the American grain carried would desire to participate in Canadian business would depend upon the question whether there was such profit in the Canadian grain traffic as compared with the American ore traffic."

HOUSING PROGRAM GIVES BUILDINGS OF BEAUTY

AMSTERDAM, May 19.—(Associated Press)—Confronted with a housing shortage after the war, Holland undertook to remedy the situation with three fundamental ideas in mind, efficiency, economy and beauty.

The government gave subsidies. At first these were $1,000 a house; today with building material cheaper the rate is $125.00. No people are able to make money go as far as are the Dutch, even when it is public money. Jobbery seems to be practically unknown—on anything approaching the American scale, at all events. But although the work has been done economically, Amsterdam has been transformed.

The old Amsterdam with its picturesque and narrow streets and lanes, its narrow canals in the city and its larger surrounding canals, is spreading out into new suburbs with wide roads and fine avenues and parks. Hollands best architects are cooperating with the town council to build the best houses at the lowest possible cost.

The architects concerned have taken pride in obtaining the most delightful effects with the cheapest material. It is not what housing has cost the city that they talk about, but how much it has saved the city. That is the Dutch brand of civic pride.

Great attention has been paid to what may be called the rebuilding of Amsterdam to provide dwellings for the working and middle classes. They mark a great advance over such houses as are usually found in continental cities. The number of houses built in Amsterdam since 1914 has now reached over 20,000 and even more extensive and finely planned surburban schemes have

The London Life

Once More Leads the Way!

SOME Canadian Life Insurance Company had to put into action its realization of the need by certain classes of business and professional people, of adequate insurance at rates which would not entail too great a tax upon their resources at a time when all possible funds are required for the development of business. The need of such classes in the past has been partially met by policies of non-participating insurance, with stationary premiums, paid in over a stated period, producing set results.

Now comes a plan providing insurance with annual dividends at non-profit rates.

The London Life Insurance Company, by reason of its strong financial position and enviable dividend record, is peculiarly able to meet the genuine need of the classes referred to, and has devised a plan whereby they will be enabled to carry adequate policies at low rates, and yet share in profits.

For example—if you meet the requirements and are age 23, you may secure $10,000 of participating life insurance with this Company for the extremely low premium of $149.50 per year.

At age 35 your rate for participating insurance under this special policy would be $214.00—only $1.40 per $1,000 more than for non-participating insurance.

This new policy of The London Life is meeting with popular approval to a remarkable degree, and millions of dollars of insurance will be effected on this special plan by those who should benefit by its provisions.

In your own interest, call up The London Life agent and find out whether you can qualify and so enjoy the exceptional benefits this most modern of policies offers you.

EXECUTIONS NECESSARY

Premier of Greece Explains Situation Which Led to Shooting Military and Political Leaders.

On Nov. 28 last, the Greek revolutionary government at Athens lined up six military and political leaders—former Premiers Gounaris, Stratos and Protopapadakis, the former Ministers Theotokis and Baltadjis and the ex-commander-in-chief of the Greek army in Asia Minor, General Hadjianestis—and shot them down.

A wave of horror swept round the world. America shuddered. Many people called it murder. True, the Greeks had been terribly beaten in Asia Minor by the Turks, Smyrna had been looted, ravished and burned and all Greece's war gains lost; but why the executions? Revenge? Or what?

Here, for the first time, is published Greece's official explanation. It is by none other than the prime minister of the revolution, Colonel Stylianos Gonatas, who, with Colonel Plastiras, was the leader of the revolution which swept King Constantine from his throne into exile and death.

Colonels Gonatas and Plastiras today are the dictators of Greece, and this story of the revolution and motives behind the execution of the six Greek leaders—obtained by William Philip Simms, now in Europe—will serve to clear away one of the shadowy places of history.

By COLONEL STYLIANOS GONATAS,
Premier of Greece.

ATHENS, May 19.—Greece had suffered, not a defeat, but a catastrophe such as she had not seen for centuries.

The country lay ruined, a valiant army—which throughout years had distinguished itself by historic exploits—had been dishonored, and newly liberated Hellenic territory was back under the heel of barbarians afresh.

The policy of those governing the country leading up to this catastrophe—the terrible period of 1920-1922—had but one object: To maintain on the throne the ex-King Constantine. By every means, even to the ruin of the country, this was to be done.

Despite an explicit note from the allies that the return of Constantine to the throne would be considered as a hostile act, these politicians continued with their program, tearing Greece away from her natural allies, the protecting powers to which Greece owed her liberty.

Public Is Tricked.

By every possible means they tricked public opinion in order to exploit it the better and bend it to the needs of their personal aims. To put Constantine on the throne that they might themselves obtain power and profit, they and their acolytes,

The greatest portion of the country's treasury went into this personal game while the army, fighting in Asia Minor, was deprived of everything. Meanwhile nothing was left undone to mislead the public. All liberty was swept away while, by terror, they silenced those who might enlighten the country on the precarious situation of our army and the real situation outside the country.

The catastrophe came, the result of their work.

Naturally, public opinion demanded the immediate punishment of the guilty. Letters by the thousand poured in on the revolutionary committee, and telegrams flooded us from every corner of Greece and every centre of Hellenism everywhere, demanding the punishment of those responsible, while here in Athens a monster mass meeting gathered in front of the palace and demanded the same thing.

What was to be done under these conditions? Postpone action until after elections could be held? This would have risked the people rising up and taking vengeance themselves. In which case, it must not be forgotten, the number of those who would have been punished would not have been six or ten, but many, many more.

No Choice But Revolution.

Then, too, to proceed with elections at once was impossible. The country was too disorganized, the enemy was even then marching on us, in Thrace. The first thing to be done was to reorganize our army, all that stood between the Turks and the imposition of impossible peace terms on Europe.

The revolution had, then, no choice. Its attitude was dictated to it by the people and the needs of the country. Its one job was to save Greece from the ruins and protect it from a menacing enemy.

An extraordinary court-martial was set up—composed of more than the usual members—and before this were brought the very limited number of accused. The revolution had succeeded in holding the number of these to the strict minimum.

The trial lasted 15 days and every legal guarantee was given the accused for their free defense. The proceedings were published. Both our own and the foreign press testified to the loyalty of the trial.

And so, with unanimity, the court passed judgment. So better proof is needed of the legitimacy of the whole thing than that immediately after the trial, and since, perfect order has prevailed throughout the land.

I am persuaded that no one could have been in Greece during those days without recognizing the revolution acted loyally and that these executions were for the good of the country.

MR. TOOMS DISCUSSES WORK OF THE DRURY GOVERNMENT

Says Conservative Government Responsible For Ontario Temperance Act Which Should Not Be a Political Football.

HELPED FARMERS.

Mr. T. Tooms gave a very interesting and instructive address on the accomplishments of the Drury Government before the Trades and Labor Council. The speaker gave a review of the labor and social legislation enacted during the past four years. The Independent Labor Party, he said, believed performance was better than promise; and out of fourteen planks of the Labor platform, six were now upon the statute books. These were: The mother's allowance, which now benefited seventy widowed mothers in Peterborough City and County; the minimum wage for girls, which principal was now operative in most Peterborough factories; increase in the workmen's compensation; abolition of property qualifications for municipal office; Provincial banking system, which paid 4 per cent. on investment and was gilt-edged security. There were other acts of social legislation which were not mentioned in the platform: One day's rest in seven for all workers; the Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act; the Children's Act; the Wages Act; the protection of children of unmarried parents, and many others too numerous to mention. Mr. Tooms said he himself was responsible for placing ten bills of a general character upon the statute book.

The opponents of the Government had accused the Farmer-Labor coalition as a class Government, and yet in the last session Mr. Sinclair, in the opposition, moved a vote of confidence in the Government, as they had not assisted agriculture. "How inconsistent," said the speaker. "If Hon. Manning Doherty had done nothing else but to have been instrumental in the removal of the cattle embargo from Canadian cattle, which is estimated to bring $10,000,000 of new business annually to Ontario, his term has been well worth while. This embargo had stood for 30 years. It took a Farmer-Labor Government to take effective action. The Ontario Labor group sent a cablegram to the British Labor Party to defeat the British Minister of Agriculture if he was not favorable to the removal of the embargo. He was defeated by a Labor candidate. The measure became effective April 1st, 1923.

"There was enacted also the Rural Credits Act, which issues short and long term loans to farmers, which has granted loans of one million a month just lately on sound security. Then the Ontario Dairy Standards Act, which provided that milk to factories be paid upon the basis of its fat contents, and many other things have been enacted.

"A plank in the platform of the Labor and Farmer group is the development of our natural resources. To do this a new portfolio was created, that of Minister of Mines; but let us begin at the beginning. When Hon. Drury took the reins of office the Hearst Conservative Government left a deficit of $1,559,802. The first year this Government reduced it to $802,742.83. The following year it showed a surplus of $681,789.41. This year the fine surplus of $1,064,325.26. The Hearst Government also left these legacies. In 1917 they passed the Teachers' Superannuation Act; the teachers subscribe 50 per cent., the Government to pay 50 per cent. The teachers paid their share, but not so the Hearst Government. So Mr. Drury had to pay their debt to the tune of $2,106,066.72. The total amount of the fund, of course, would be double that. Another legacy, the Housing Act. This Government gave notice of withdrawing from loaning any more money for this purpose, but were bound to certain liabilities with municipalities that had a guarantee of a certain amount of money, and could not withdraw because certain work was underway, and Drury had to pay Hearst debt of another $7,355,717.43. Again, $608,960 for Conservative election expenses. Drury paid it. And so I could go on. Yet with all this talk of extravagance Mr. Nickle would ask for more expenditure on high school education, Mr. Joe Thompson (Con.) more money for public institutions. The direct liabilities of the Province are $240,000,000. Revenue producing debt, $25,653,675, is invested in the T. N. O. Railway, which was extended into James Bay. New rolling stock and improved permanent way has been established, with the result that this railway, which always had a deficit, now carries on 100 per cent. efficient and pays two and a half per cent. dividend under a Government that wants to make a success of public ownership.

"The amount of $117,964,934 is loaned on the Hydro enterprise for the development of Hydro power and light. You are supposed to get power and light at cost. It is a revenue producer. Housing loans, $7,355,717.43; drainage debentures, $1,350,767; cash on hand, $16,112,677; sinking fund, $7,921,883.65; leaving for 32 years in the local house. The Conservative party has always been led by great men, the speaker declared. Talk about Drury's sacrifices for the people—when did he take long years of sacrifice and penury to led by great men, the speaker debe his padty's head; what did he do to inspire a great party or a great and home life are the things that make great men. We have come down to the time when we have a Drury—not a McDonald or a Laurier or a Borden or a Whitney who were all brought up in a school of hard knocks. It is the thing we fight and strive for that counts in life. That is why Drury could not succeed — he came in with a silver spoon in his mouth, and he is the man who let the farmers down when they trusted in them."

Drury a Twinkling Star

By saying he was the most sincere man who had ever held the reins of government, Drury cast reflections on the greatest men in the country has produced, continued the speaker. Besides the great Conservative leaders there were splendid Liberel leaders who were truly sincere men.

'It remained for this twinkling star to rise out of the haze in the firmament to grace the platform of the U.F.O. and rise and say that other great political leaders had been insincere."

Drury and his followers thought that the best way to attack the Conservative party was to attack its leaders through commissions. We should pride ourselves on fighting in a fair way. We can criticize a man's politics and his policies, but when they get down to blackening his character then we have a right to ask any government to show the necessity for so doing. "I say that the investigations that this government has held have been inglorious and ridiculous."

The Three Bills

When Drury brought down his three bills— redistribution, single transferable vote and proportional representation. Mr. Ferguson led the party in a fight which was fought to a glorious finish.

The Conservative party was willing to consider the redistribution bill separately, but Drury refused to allow this. The Conservative blockade, however, led by Mr. Ferguson, changed Mr. Drury's mind, and he consented to withdraw the bills if the Conservatives would expedite the completion of necessary business. The Conservatives, numbering only 25 accomplished that feat against a government with a majority and backed by the Liberals.

'Do not trust the Liberals in this election," warned Col. Price. Every Conservative should get out and vote and he has the best case he ever had against any government. "What strong, aggressive, fighting leaders the Conservative have in this campaign," he exclaimed.

"Not only does the Conservative party stand on stable foundation, and principles, but it is led by a capable leader. This is your fight to cut out extravagance it is your fight for fair treatment of public men who serve their country. This is the day of reckoning, not necessarily for the U.F.O. but for the Drury Government and for a leader who has betrayed the cause for which he went into power and the trust placed in his hands by a majority of our people. Forget all else but that we want to put down a Government that has so signally failed and to put in its place the great Conservative party that has in the past put through such wonderful legislation."

The Women's Part.

Miss C. Gilmour, speaking particularly to the women, told in a pleasant way the advantages of the Conservative Government. The women of the Province, she said, should appreciate the privilege that is accorded them in the franchise, and should remember that the Conservative Party put their names on the voting list "It is imperative to get out and cast your ballots in order that we get away from the strange form of Government we have had during the past four years."

Declaring that the Conservative Party is the party that has looked after the good of the people, the speaker said: "I am safe in saying that during the past four years of U.F.O. Government the hand of time has been pushed back a quarter of a century."

Among other things that the Farmers' Government promised to do away with was patronage, and from her own test in Toronto Miss Gilmour declared patronage to exist in the present administration.

The speaker also condemned the system of giving positions in the Parliament Buildings to women who have husbands to maintain them, while girls who have their way to make in life are excluded. Another form of atrocity which Miss Gilmour blamed on the Farmer Government was the taxation of girls. "When they spend their money in Toronto, they should not be compelled also to pay taxes there," she declared.

The speaker praised the local organisation on the strength evidenced by the presence of so many women at the convention, and said that it would not be long until the women would have their own representatives in the Legislature. If there were two or three women representatives of the Party in the House it would arouse interest in the women's work.

Canadian First.

Mr. Fallis, in thanking the convention for his nomination, said that if he had not believed in the Liberal-Conservative policy he would not have allowed his name to go before the gathering.

He believed in Conservatism, and he believed the principle should be carried into private life as well as political life. Before taking action, Mr. Fallis said he wanted to know where he would alight, and before starting out he liked to know where he was going. If these principles had been acted upon by the Drury Government, the Province would not be where it is now. The candidate expressed himself as opposed to group government, and although a farmer, he was first of all a Canadian. He stands for the best interests of the Province, and of the British Empire.

Confidence in Leaders.

The following resolution was passed unanimously:

"We, the Liberal-Conservative Party of East Durham, in convention here assembled, desire to place on record our appreciation of and confidence in the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, whom we trust to receive as our next Premier, and in our candidate, Mr. Fallis; and also, we wish to reiterate our confidence in the leadership of the Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Conservative Opposition in the Dominion House of Commons."

The Nominations.

F. W. Bowen and A. Given spoke briefly in eulogy of the candidate.

The candidate, A. T. Fallis, a prominent farmer in Cavan, was proposed by Alex. Noble, and seconded by Charles Reynolds.

G. A. Smith was proposed by George McCarlin, and seconded by Charles Ough.

A. J. Henderson was proposed by I. Hicks, and seconded by S. O. Taylor.

The scrutineers were Messrs. Robertson, Lawson, Vance, and Ward.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE.

The chief, having tasted the wine, touches it to the lips of the bride and bridegroom, and then hurls the pitcher as far away from him as he is able.

The pitcher breaks, of course, and the number of fragments is taken as indicating the number of years the couple will live together.

ing another. Because one part of the people of the country lives in the cities and another part lives in the country is no reason why they cannot agree on a policy that will benefit all." The farmers wanted legislation that would better their conditions but Drury and Company cannot go before the men who chose them as leaders and say "We carried out the platform that you laid down for us." I appeal to you as citizens to say whether you think there has been any attempt to live up to that platform.

Drury's Record.

"Men new to a certain job," the speaker continued, "must move carefully." The grand old leader of the Conservative party was in the House ten or twelve years and the rooms remained unchanged. Now the offices are fitted up with new mahogany desks and the very finest of carpets. When the Hearst Government went out of power there were 790 employees in the Parliament Buildings — now there were 1670. There were then 95 motor cars—there are 209 now.

Colonel Price said that he did not intend to convey that these cars and employees were unnecessary, but when a party came in talking economy and started by buying furniture for their own offices, there was something wrong. The lavish expenditure was also carried into the big things, such as the road building carried out by Biggs.

The old government had a road-building programme of 500 miles. The farmers were quite specific in condemning that, proposing to substitute for that costly programme of roadway construction a system of continuous highway maintenance.

Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of the Department of Public Highways in the new economic government, laid out a programme of 1824 miles of highway construction. "I am not going to say that 1824 miles is too much," the speaker remarked; "all I say is that when a man abuses a government that has a 500 mile programme and lays out himself a programme of 1824 miles he is trying to throw dust in our eyes."

The Minister has built roads in little travelled parts of the province wider than the highway between Hamilton and Toronto, the most travelled sector, and has brought the cost of road building up to $60,000 to $80,000 per mile. "However," the speaker interjected, "if a man has a champagne taste he won't be satisfied with beer."

In 1918-1919 there were no county taxes for roads, but in 1920-192 a sum of $5,847,000 was collected.

Drury Had Silver Spoons

Colonel Price said he had been in the legislature since 1914, and had the privilege of sitting behind Sir James Whitney.

"No man leads a part so well as when he has stood a drastic opposition." Sir John A. McDonald took severe punishment, and Sir James Whitney led his party in opposition 32 years in the local house. The Conservative party has always been led by great men, the speaker declared. 'Talk about Drury's sacrifices for the people—when did he take long years of sacrifice and penury to led by great men, the speaker debe his padty's head; what did he do to inspire a great party or a great and home life are the things that make great men. OBITUARY

THE LATE C. CORNEIL.

OMEMEE, May 19.—The funeral of the late Charles Corneil took place from his late residence in Peterborough to the Methodist church, Omemee and afterward to Emily cemetery for interment, on Thursday afternoon. The deceased gentleman was in his seventy-seventh year and had been a life-long resident of Ops until a few years ago, when he moved to Peterborough. He filled the office of tax collector for a number of years and was Reeve of the township in 1910-11. He was a Conservative, a member of the Masonic Lodge, No. 375, A. F. & A.M., Omemee and in religion a Methodist.

The funeral, under the direction of the Masonic order, was conducted by the Worshipful Master, Mr. Cecil Corneil. Rev. Mr. Young, of George street Methodist church, Peterborough, and Rev. R. F. Stillman, of Omemee, also assisted in the service, which was most impressive.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father are his sorrowing wife, one daughter, Mrs. William Lamb of Peterborough, and two sons, Wm. of Peterborough and Melville of Beaton.

Many beautiful floral offerings bore tribute of the high esteem in which he was held.

GETTYSBURG ANNIVERSARY.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., May 19.—(Associated Press)—Vice-president Coolidge, Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of War Weeks and United States Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania, have been invited by members of Corporal Skelly Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Gettysburg, to join them in celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg here on July 3, the last day of the conflict between the armies of the North and South.

There are less than a score of civil war veterans carrying on the work of the post and they confess the task of sponsoring an elaborate observance of this anniversary "is larger than they care to undertake." They express belief, however, that this will be the last important occasion on which veterans in this section will be able to be present, and declare their intention not to permit it to go unnoticed. Patriotic and commercial organizations are expected to assist the aged veterans in arranging the celebration.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Inspection of the Cadets by Capt. V. W. S. Heron —Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 19. — The annual inspection of the Public School and High School Cadets was held yesterday morning in the school grounds, Captain V. W. S. Heron, R.C.R., Kingston, head inspector of Military District No. 3, being the inspecting officer.

Captain Heron first inspected the Public School Cadets, who numbered 53, and was greatly pleased with the efficient manner in which the marching, drills, and physical exercises were conducted, remarking that they marched like veterans, thus reflecting the greatest credit on Mr. C. S. Haig, the principal, who so carefully trained the boys during the year.

Captain Heron also congratulated the officers in charge, Captain Fox, and Lieutenants Basil Reynolds, Reginald Fry, Ralph Plumpton, and Quartermaster-Sergeant John Russell, for the satisfactory manner in which the ceremonial parade and the corps drills were handled, each officer in turn being required to drill his platoon.

The High School Cadets, numbering 48, then passed for inspection, and looked spick and span in their smart uniforms, and in charge of Captains J. D. Thomson and Arthur Loucks; Lieutenants C. Longmuir, Jack Twigg, Quartermaster-Sergeant P Saunders.

Captain Heron was highly pleased with the appearance, deportment, and drill of the corps, and congratulated the officers and the efficient instructor, Mr. Earl Greig, B.A., for the splendid showing of the Cadets.

Major J. M. Bygott, of the Board of Education, was present, and congratulated the instructors, Mr. Haig and Mr. Greig, and the Cadets, for the splendid showing, and emphasised the fact that this training leads to better discipline, better students, and better citizens.

THE "TROUBLE SHOOTER"

Shows How to Adjust Tune up Motor for the Season's Running.

By E. H. SCOTT

This article gives practical, step-by-step instructions to the motorist who wants to reduce his repair bills, get more power from his motor, and eliminate trouble during the coming touring season.

Overhauling the Lubrication System

In the winter months, few engines receive the care and attention they should, with the result that a thorough inspection and checking up is necessary if you want to have trouble free service in the coming months. During the next few weeks, I will explain in detail the necessary work you will have to do to put your car in first class condition for the touring season.

Perhaps you may be one of those who have an engine which seems to "make" oil, in other words, the oil level is as high or nearly so, when you finish a run as it was when you went out. The explanation is that an excessive amount of gasoline is finding its way into the crankcase, and while the oil level shows plenty of oil, you really have a mixture of gasoline and oil, which is of very little use as a lubricant.

During the winter months considerable condensation takes place in the crankcase, and when you drain off the old oil, you may be surprised to see a small quantity of water is drained off also. The air drawn through the radiator contains a large per cent of moisture during the cold weather. Some of this air is drawn through the breather pipe into the crankcase where it immediately condenses, causing an accumulation of water in the crankcase.

After you come in from a run, the first thing you generally do is to have a wash to remove the dust and grit accumulated on the road. This same dirt and grit is also being drawn down into the crankcase through the breather pipe, and before long you have quite a quantity of it mixed with the lubricating oil.

Dust, grit, water and gasoline are not the best lubricants in the world for a motor, yet at the end of say 500 miles running, you have in the lubricating oil a large amount of these substances. They all combine and form a slimy sludge, which causes all kinds of trouble, blocking the oil pipes, the oil strainer, and getting into the bearings and on the cylinder walls, causing rapid wear.

Now, perhaps you understand why I have placed the draining and flushing out of the crankcase at the head of the list of things to be attended to before the heavy touring season commences.

Unscrew the drain plug and allow the old oil to drain off, then replace the plug and pour about a gallon of kerosene into the crankcase. Now turn the Ignition Switch off, then turn the engine over with the starting motor for about a minute, or if you use a hand crank, swing the engine over smartly for about three minutes. This will swill the dirt and sediment down.

Once again remove the drain plug and drain off the kerosene, then get under and remove the oil pan and strainer. Thoroughly clean the pan and the depressions in it, and see that the strainer is free from lint and sediment. It is absolutely necessary that you REMOVE THE OIL PAN after flushing out the engine with KEROSENE, otherwise it is impossible to be sure of getting it all out of the crankcase before filling up with fresh oil. If any kerosene remains in the crankcase, it will dilute the oil again.

When replacing the pan, first screw up each bolt finger tight, then with a spanner, turn each bolt half a turn at a time until you have them all tight. After this, fill up with fresh oil to the correct level. Before you start the engine under power, turn it over twenty or thirty times with the Ignition Switch off, to get the oil worked into the bearings and cylinder walls.

This is the most thorough way to clean out the crankcase, but need only be done like this once or twice each season. During the season, you should drain every 500-700 miles, flush out with three-fourths of a gallon of LIGHT LUBRICATING OIL, NOT kerosene, then refill with fresh oil. NEVER flush out the crankcase with kerosene unless you take off the oil pan, when you can be sure of removing all kerosene.

for business people pressed for time. These permanent bungalow camps in Algonquin Park are therefore a splendid arrangement for the individual who wants to go camping, as they provide all the delights of the simple life, without any of the troubles it usually entails. BUNGALOW CAMPS.

The recent welcome change in the weather has turned the thoughts of the city population towards forest and stream and the multitudinous delights of life in the world. At the railway stations people are asking for summer folders in order to plan their coming holidays. There seems to be an ever-increasing desire for the more primitive pleasures. While the large seaside and mountain resorts with their formalities and social obligations still unfailingly attract their full quota of annual guests, the woodland camp is the popular mecca. When the old Grand Trunk opened up its first Bungalow Log Cabin Camps ten years ago in Algonquin Park, the idea was a comparatively new one in Canada, though it had been carried out successfully in the Maine woods for some time. At first, two camps were established, Camp Nominigan on Smoke Lake and Camp Minnesing on Island Lake, both within a few miles of the Highland Inn at Algonquin Park Station. These are now under the management of the Canadian National Railways. Each Camp can accommodate about seventy-five people, men, women or children, all comfortably housed in small parties in the series of log cabins that form the camp. Now the idea has been taken up by various other corporations and individuals all over the country. They are all managed on much the same plan. Besides the small cabins, built usually to accommodate from two to eight people, and used for sleeping apartments, there is a large lodge containing the main dining-room and social hall, where all the guests foregather and exchange experiences and fish stories. Needless to say, fishing forms the main occupation of the temporary dwellers in these permanent tabernacles, and there are no fish to beat those caught in the innumerable connecting waters of Algonquin Park.

The getting together of all the paraphernalia necessary for a real camp is no small task, especially

What You Agreed to When You Said "Yes."

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., May 16.—Married bliss? Bah! A myth. A delusion.

You married women who think you are happy, listen to Miss Elizabeth Belschner, blissfully single, secretary of the conventions bureau of the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce. Miss Belschner has reduced married life down to a discouraging array of figures, to prove it is just one long round of planning and cooking meals and washing dishes.

"Yes, I realize that the average person eats only three meals a day," she says. "But there are 365 days in the year. That means 1095 meals a year!

Oh, drab day when you were wed! Think of 1095 meals a year—and the utensils and dishes and silverware to wash and wipe! If you can't summon up courage enough to think of this heap greasy housework you contracted for of yourself on your wedding day, Miss Belschner does it for you. Look at her figures:

In preparing meals you use at least six kettles a day. Thats 2190 greasy pots a to clean a year!

In cooking you need about four utensils a meal, or 4380 a year. Let alone extra paraphernalia.

Why didn't you think of this before you said, "Yes!"

But, Miss Belschner goes on:

For the averarge family of four, figuring conservatively, there are the following dishes and silverware to wash and wipe:

Twelve pieces of silver....13,140 a year
Twenty pieces of china....21,900 a year

Total.....35,040

Grand total, 41,610 pots, kettles, dishes and silverware to wash and wipe—not to mention utensils and other extras.

Don't think, from this, that Miss Belschner is a man-hater. She meets thousands of prominent men, but, she adds, there are mighty few of these she'd care to prepare meals for if she had to wash the dishes.

IL TROVATORE DUET WAS A BIG NUMBER

In Splendid Programme Under Male Voice Choir Auspices.

The lyric programme of the Peterboro Male Voice Choir at George Street Methodist church last night ended on a sustained dramatic note pitched by the Miserere duet from 'Il Trovatore" and re-echoed by the stirring epic of "The Crusaders." The choir and the soloists had created as effectively as if by design an atmosphere pervaded by the poetry of Spring, fragrant and radiant and melodic of the song of life and its first ecstasies. The choir itself set the opening scene with the Barcarolle from "Tales of Hoffman", heightened by "The Blue Danube Waltz" both spun from moobeam reflections upon quiet waters. Mrs. George King contributed to the prevailing spirit with "The Magic of the Night." Dorothy Allan Park added change of locale and light but restruck the dominant note in a charming old English song "Down Vauxhall Way," and Mrs. Renwick and Miss Edwina Palmer slightly elaborated the scene and retouched its colour. And then when the lyric mood had been captured with all its charm, it suddenly vanished before the sterner muse of the two concluding numbers. Such was the psychologic reaction to the contrasting divisions of a programme that was uniformly interesting and praiseworthy. The attendance was fairly large in the face of many other attractions last night, and the audience at George street lacked nothing in discrimination by their selection.

The big number was the duet from the fourth act of "Il Trovatore" sung bp Maurice H. Park and Dorothy Allan Park with the Male Voice choir accompanying. It was a decided success, and was repeated in response to prolonged applause. Mrs. Park sang the part of Leonora with impressive intensity. Her appreciation of the distress and tragedy of the scene quickened the imagination which was assisted by the eloquent expression of her singing. Mr. Park took the tenor of the old melody, which popularitty never stales, in full sympathy with the situation it depicts and in excellent voice. The choir's minor requiem provided a background that deepened the sense of tragedy and amplified the effectiveness of the duet This number was given with only one rehearsal, and the choir's singing and perception of its demonstrated their abilities both of reading and interpretation. The Miserere is rarely sung in Peterboro with the understanding and utilization of its operatic possibilities as it was done by Mr. and Mrs. Park and the Mail Voice Choir.

The programme was a generous one and full of merit. In fact it brought together most of the outstanding figures in local music circles. The Male Voice Choir's best offering was its last "The Crusaders" sung with a strong body of tone and full harmonies blended into true choral tone, "Estudiantina" with Mrs. Park assisting was another of the high lights of the evening.

Mrs. Gerald McClelland delighted the audience with the naturalness of her characterizations in several readings the last of which earned two recalls.

Miss Edwina Palmer played three violin solos, 'Spanish Dance" Granados-Kreisler, revealing the simplicity of its melody. "Air de Ballet" from "Rosamonde" Schubert-Kreisler and Brahms Waltz by Hachstein

All three vocalists were cordially encored: "The Magic of the Night", was Mrs. George King's number charmingly sung as to expression and flexibility of acute sensibilities and sound technic.

"The Hills of Kerry," "Down Vauxhall Way" and "The March of the Cameron Men", by Mrs. Park formed a delightful group, their differences in theme and sentiment being not the least feature of their presentation. Each of them was a gem especially the old Irish song with a haunting overtone of sadness, as marked by Mrs. Park's art as the more palpable sentiment "Down Vauxhall Way."

Mrs. J. H. Renwick sang by request "For all Eternity" by Masheroni and "Little Dory" by Sepelli maintaining the fine standard of a programme that was exceedingly well balanced and of high merit throughout. The accompanists were Agnes Logan, Laura MacFarlane, Leslie Unitt, George H. King and John H. Renwick.

SHELVES OF BOOKS TODAY LINE WALLS OF FAMOUS SALOON

BOSTON, MAY 19. (Associated Press)—"Nuf Ced" McGreevy and his his Third Base saloon have turned to literature. Bottles and glasses and baseball trophies have given way to books. The famous old barroom near the old South End grounds of the Boston Nationals has been transformed into a branch of the public library.

Micheal T. McGreevy for 30 years owned and managed the Third Base and his patrons were chiefly ball players and fans. He spent no time in the saloon when a ball game was in progress here, for he was a king of rooters, powerful of voice and dynamic in personality. Even after the South End grounds had become a menory he remained faithful to baseball. Switching his interest to the American League, he followed the Red Sox at his own expense on many trips around the circuit and on many of their spring training tours. He became known throughout the country as "Nuf Ced McGreevy, Grand Exalted Ruler of Rooters' Row." At last a Red Sox manager recognized his tittle giving him a uniform and a regular contract as a "non-playing player."

Baseballs, bats, photographs of baseball heroes and other trophies covered walls and ceiling of the barroom. The electric lights, frosted globes made to simulate baseballs, were suspended from the ceiling by bats which had been used by such historic personages as Cy Young, Freddis Parent, Nap Lajoie, Buck Freeman and Mike Kelly. The grandfather clock at the rear of the room had a bat for pendulum, weighted with a baseball.

The building of Braves Field and the later advent of prohibition ended Mr McGreevy's business activities in the old lines, and now he has leased the premises to the library trustees. The room has been lined with bookcases and in place of the bar and rail are comfortable tables and chairs.

The first parton of Third Base under the new regime was a locomotive fireman who brought back a book about radio which he had borrowed from the former quarters of the library branch and asked for a book on astronomy.

He Found Them a Great Benefit

Mr. Alphonse Cote Praises Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Quebec man who suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble found relief in Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

St. Flavien, P.Q., May 18.—(Special).—Relieved of the aches and pains of dyspepsia, Mr. Alphonse Cote, who resides here, is loud in his praises of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

"I can tell you frankly, that after taking your tablets, I found a change in my health at once." Mr. Cote states, "I have taken other remedies, but they did me no good." The result was wonderful. Eating is now a pleasure to me, and I hardly ever have any pains at all."

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets certainly add to the joy of living. They make eating a pleasure and insure against the after effects of meal or banquet.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets have proved the most successful treatment for Dyspepsia and Indigestion yet discovered.

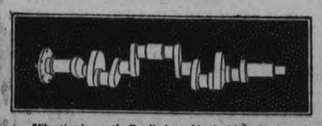
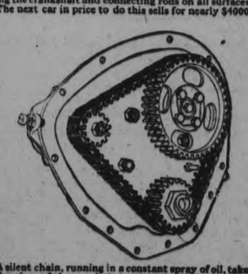
The mechanical refinements of a high-priced car—yet it sells for $1375

Light-Six valves are inclined at a 20-degree angle, which position increases power and contributes unusual quietness of operation.



Vibration is practically eliminated in the Light-Six due to the perfect engine balance secured through machining the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces. The next car in price to do this sells for nearly $4000.



A silent chain, running in a constant spray of oil, takes the place of the usual timing gears, and thereby contributes to the quietness of the Light-Six motor.

THE Studebaker Light-Six offers you fine car design and construction at a medium price. Its mechanical refinements insure superior performance, fewer repairs and longer life.

Great demand, with consequent large scale production; and complete manufacture in Studebaker factories, resulting in the elimination of parts-makers' profits—are responsible for savings that make it possible for Studebaker to incorporate quality features of design in the Light-Six and still be able to offer it to you for $1375.

See the Light-Six before you buy—ride in it—and you will agree that it is the most remarkable automobile value in Canada.

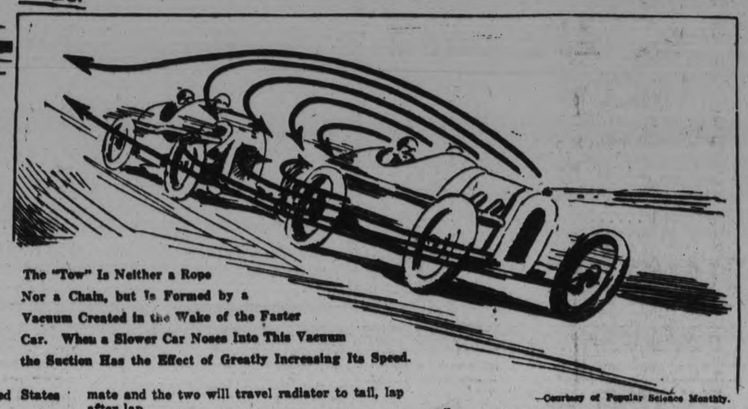
How an Auto Racer May Tow Rival to Victory



The "Tow" Is Neither a Rope Nor a Chain, but Is Formed by a Vacuum Created in the Wake of the Faster Car. When a Slower Car Noses Into This Vacuum the Suction Has the Effect of Greatly Increasing Its Speed.

—Courtesy of Popular Science Monthly.

AN amazing trick of the speedway is revealed by Steve Hannagan, team-mate of famous drivers of racing cars, who explains in Popular Science Monthly how an auto racer actually towed his rival to victory.

Riding shoulder to shoulder with the world's most famous speed kings on every known type of automobile race track, Steve Hannagan knows the science of automobile racing, not to mention the tricks of the game, as thoroughly as any man living today.

Hannagan has lived to the thundering tune of the speedway ever since he was 16 years old. Among his adventures is taking to the air with Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, former speedway star and America's ace of flying aces, on his famous sky tour of the United States last summer.

"When I tell you that the driver of a racing car, with a top speed of 110 miles an hour," says Hannagan, "can hitch an invisible towline onto a faster car ahead of him, and have his slower car pulled along at a winning pace of 120 miles an hour, you may call the statement ridiculous. Yet just such an amazing performance may be witnessed in nearly every major automobile racing event, and undoubtedly will be seen during the Indianapolis 500-mile classic on Memorial Day.

"True, the 'tow' is neither a rope nor a chain. It is formed by the partial vacuum created in the wake of the faster car. Once a slower car noses into this vacuum, the suction has the effect of adding several miles an hour to its speed.

"A driver gets into a tow by quickly swerving in behind the faster car as it passes him. As he does so you can see the slower car leap ahead.

"In more than one speedway contest this 'suction towline' is used by a driver to give his slower team-mate a lift. The faster car will pick up its mate and the two will travel radiator to tail, lap after lap.

"In one race I remember the 'towline' was used by the slower car to defeat a speedier rival. It was the 1920 Indianapolis 500-mile race, in which Ralph De Palma and Joe Boyer staged a radiator-to-radiator duel at the finish line lap after lap—a race in which each lap won meant a reward of $100 for the victor.

"Because De Palma's car was slightly faster than Boyer's, Boyer began 'grabbing De Palma's towline' coming out of the turns, tacking into the suction of the speedier car, and making De Palma pull him down the straightaway, while Boyer rested his motor. Just before crossing the finish wire, Boyer would speed his motor and suddenly swerve to the side of the leader, crossing the tape inches ahead, and pulling down the prize money.

"To overcome wind resistance all racing cars are streamlined. The tremendous advantage of streamlining was strikingly demonstrated in the long, narrow machine with which Tommy Milton smashed the world's speed record, driving 158.4 miles an hour at Daytona Beach, Fla. The car was a single seater.

"Yet the long, tapering design, so effective in cutting the wind on the straightaway, worked with reverse effect when the car was tested on a speedway with banked turns. Every time Milton swerved for a turn, the long tail of the speedster would swing against the wind, creating suction at the leeward side of the car. Here the very suction that has helped other drivers to victory, served to retard Milton's speed."

Is a Good Memory Impossible?

IT is common to speak of a person as having a good memory. To all outward appearances he may seem to have a good memory, but if psychological experiments were performed very carefully on this person it would be found that in remembering some kinds of things his memory was notoriously poor.

This is one of the reasons why a good memory is impossible. One's memory may be good for faces but not for names. Almost invariably it seems as if good memory in one respect is compensated for by a poor memory in another line. Memories are not equally good on all fronts. A wizard on a vaudeville circuit offers a good illustration of this. He will be given a list of names and street addresses of people during his performance. A group from the audience prepare these from the city directory entirely at random, so there is no chance for his cheating in the demonstration. Then the list is given to him long enough for him to read each name only once. Fifteen minutes later, without the least effort, he reproduces the long list exactly.

Those who witness this remarkable performance acclaim him as having a wonderful memory. But his memory in reality is very poor for most things. His wife serves as his memory in daily life. She remembers whether he has eaten or not; without her aid he does not remember this. She remembers the way from the hotel to the theatre; unaided he cannot remember this.

This is just an illustration by way of an anecdote of the fact that generally good memories do not exist. They all have a lot of flaws and weak places in them. An illustration from an experiment might have been given, for there are many of them available, but this one should be more impressive and longer remembered.

What is true for the kinds of memories that exist is also true for improving the memory that one has. By practising memorizing automobile license numbers memory is improved only for that material and materials similar to it. It does not aid one a particle at memorizing an argument or a poem. Neither does practice in memorizing poetry improve one's abilities at memorizing faces or any other memory.

The way to improve memory for names is to practise with names, not with automobile tags or playing cards.

How Gas Asphyxiates

THE poisonous ingredient in coal gas is carbon monoxide, which burns with a pale blue flame, and is, in addition to being colorless, quite devoid of smell.

The poisonous nature of the gas is due to its action on the blood, a physician explains. Each time you draw breath, a certain portion of the oxygen of the air passes by means of your lungs into the blood, where it is held in chemical combination by the red pigment called haemoglobin. The haemoglobin charged with oxygen passes to all the tissues of the body, supplying them with this necessary life-giving gas—it is, in fact, the "oxygen carrier" of the body. Unfortunately, haemoglobin not only combines more readily with the poisonous carbon monoxide, but it holds it more firmly.

If, therefore, there is any considerable quantity of carbon monoxide in the air the haemoglobin seizes on it in preference to oxygen, thus depriving you of one of the necessities of life. You then die from asphyxia, or want of oxygen.

On breathing carbon monoxide the victim quickly experiences singing in the ears, headache and giddiness. The very nature of the poison gas renders the victim so weak and powerless that he is unable to get away from the source of danger or even to call for help. He then quickly becomes drowsy and passes into deep unconsciousness.

In addition to the acute form the continual exposure to small quantities of carbon monoxide causes chronic poisoning where the sufferer is weak, anaemic and experiences neuralgic pains.

Baking BREAD a Process of CHEMISTRY

BAKING science has developed more in the past ten years than in all the previous years of man, according to Dr. H. E. Barnard of Chicago, who is a director of the American Institute of Baking.

"Comparatively few baking chemists, working under little appreciated difficulties, have in the last decade overthrown the craft control of one hundred centuries and built a scientific industry," says Dr. Barnard. "To be sure, for many years chemists have helped the miller buy wheat for his grinding. They have valuated flour by weighing ashes and digesting proteins. They have given casual assistance to the brewer and distiller, turned yeast maker for the baker. But their routine service never unlocked the secrets of fermentation or solved the mysteries of gluten.

"The World War amalgamated 33,000 individual bakers into a great industry which for the first time in history was compelled to work under controlled shop methods. Out of the chaos which confounded every baker, emerged an industry with a vision of the value of science, of the need of the chemist in the shop. In the beginning the vision was focused on practical things, on better buying methods, on relative values of materials, on the fitness of ingredients for their particular purposes."

Dr. Barnard explained to members of the American Chemical Society how today the baking of bread is a chemical process—with physical and biological aspects—carried on in huge laboratories, filled with automatic machinery and operating under temperature, humidity and time control. "The quality of bread depends upon the control of the process of fermentation," says Dr. Barnard. "Dough-room fermentation is a means to an end which produces in the process of yeast growth sufficient acidity in the dough to develop or mature the gluten.

"Gluten is an extraordinary material. Flour strength depends on its gluten content and even more on the character and quality of the gluten. The baker determines the condition of the gluten by feeling the dough. The chemist determines its hydrogen ion concentration. He finds out just how much lactic acid it takes to mature or soften the gluten of a particular dough, and then instead of training a trillion yeast plants to develop the proper acidity, he adds the calculated amount of lactic acid to the dough batch in the mixer. This process makes four hours' fermentation in the dough-room unnecessary; it eliminates the hard work of punching the dough; it saves labor and capital investment.

"With materials, methods, fermentation control, and the subsequent processes of proofing, baking, cooling and wrapping all in the hands of the chemist technically trained in bakeshop operations, the making of bread is no longer a duty for the housewife or the craft of a laborer. It is the application of chemical and biological skill to the production of the nation's food."

Did ALL LIFE Originally COME From the SUN?

THE responsibility for the presence of animal and vegetable life on the earth was placed directly upon the sun in the heavens by Dr Oskar Baudisch in a recent address on "Photochemistry," before the American Chemical Society.

"When one stops to consider how organic matter, or how life itself originated on this planet, one is forced to the conclusion that it developed from the combination of the substances present in the earth's crust, with air, under the influence of solar energy," said Dr. Baudisch, who is Research Associate of Yale University.

"The first thing necessary for the formation of organic and organized matter was the cooling of the earth to a certain temperature. According to the work of the famous American biologist, Jacques Loeb, no algae are found in geysers, whose temperature is above 131 degrees Fahrenheit, and we must, therefore, assume that it was necessary for the earth to cool to this temperature before a living cell could form.

"What really happened on the surface of the earth and in the earth's atmosphere in the geologic past and what the influence of light has been, we can of course only surmise, but it is of great interest to look at the problem in the light of modern research. The earth's atmosphere was undoubtedly very different in those remote times, from what it is now. It was, as we have reason to believe, particularly rich in carbon dioxide and water vapor. At the same time the temperature of the atmosphere was doubtless much higher than today and there was also much more intense radiation from the sun.

"Nowadays we can reproduce in the laboratory very similar conditions with the aid of ultra-violet light, which is known to convert carbon dioxide into sugar. A scientist once said humorously that in prehistoric times the rain must have been sugar water.

"What does the physicist designate as light? If one were to tell a layman that there is actually light which he cannot see, he would probably consider it nonsense. But there are actually rays in sunlight which our eyes cannot see, but which are of particular importance for our well-being, a fact which has been recently discovered.

"According to the most modern ideas we think of light as that form of pulsating energy which is emitted whenever an atom disintegrates. Or, in other words, light is the result of an internal cataclysm of the atoms. If a great deal of energy is emitted, there is formed, for example, ultra-violet light or even Roentgen X-rays radiation. If the amount of energy emitted is not so considerable red or ultra-red rays are the result.

"Sunlight at high altitudes is particularly rich in energy-laden ultra-violet rays which are generally considered to be most active chemically; dangerous sunburn and blisters are produced by the intense chemical action of these rays.

"When a light ray coming from the sun strikes an air molecule then that part of the light which is absorbed by it performs in part chemical work; that is, the air must be changed chemically. This is actually the case. At an altitude equivalent to that, say, of Mt. Blanc, we no longer breathe from a chemical standpoint, the same kind of air as that of the lower levels of the atmosphere, but air which has been changed in its chemical composition by light and is characterised by its higher content of nitrous oxide, commonly known as gas, and nitric acid. This fact probably explains at least in part the familiar phenomenon of mountain sickness."

How an International Date Line Marks Just Where the Day Begins

WHERE does day begin? Where night ends, of course, is the reply of the facetious one. However, such reply gets no one anywhere, for clear thought is required to reason out the correct answer.

"The day as we know it," explains a scientific authority in The Pathfinder, "is but a division of time made by man for the purpose of reckoning. As far as the beginning of day is concerned, it begins at a different place on the earth every minute and second of time. We speak of a day as distinguishing the period of light from the period of darkness, but it really applies to the time required for the earth to make a complete rotation on its axis in reference to a fixed star. The real or 'sidereal' day is 23 hours, 56 minutes, 4 seconds long. The 'solar' or 'civil' day is the period between the time when a given meridian is directly under the sun until it again occupies that position, and is about four minutes longer than the sidereal day. This difference is due to the earth's movement around the sun, which causes the sun to change its relative position among the stars about one degree for each rotation of the earth, and it requires about four minutes for the earth to catch up with this movement.

"Since the earth moves with varying degrees of velocity in different parts of its orbit, the solar day varies in length. To avoid the inconvenience arising from this variation, a mean solar day of 24 hours is adopted, and the difference between this and the technical solar day is known as the equation of time. The distance in feet where the day begins from one second to another is so short that the average person cannot notice it in measurement of time. By agreement then, the calendar day begins on the international date line in the Pacific. However, that is a purely arbitrary line and the day doesn't really begin there any more than at any other place.

The International Date Line, Which Arbitrarily Marks Where Day Begins, Is Placed at the 180th Meridian.

"Did you know that if you traveled westward around the world you would gain a day, yet if you made the same trip eastward you would lose a day? This is because of the difference in clock time. A watch carried westward around the globe is 24 hours behind on reaching the starting point. If carried in opposite direction it gains 24 hours. Two travelers, therefore, starting from the same point, one journeying east, the other west, are a day apart as to clock time if they meet halfway. To prevent the confusion which would arise in international intercourse from unbroken reckoning of days it is necessary to have somewhere on the earth's surface a line where each calendar day arbitrarily begins. By general consent, but not by action of any international joint commission or international treaty, this purpose is filled by the international date line which generally follows the 180th meridian. The chief reason for this choice is because this meridian is 12 hours from Greenwich, or halfway round the globe, and that, being midway in Pacific and far from civilization, no confusion results from its adoption. The international date line, however, is not exactly coincident with 180th meridian, but shifts slightly to avoid separating island possessions of different nations. A vessel crossing the date line to westward sets the date forward by one day, as from Sunday to Monday; if the line is crossed in going eastward the date is set back the corresponding length of time."

This Beetle Dines on the Toughest Oak

THE life-story of the Death Watch Beetle is of great interest; owing to its association with so many old buildings of historic value. It lives inside the roof and floor-timbers of almost any old building in the construction of which oak beams have been used.

The beetle is about a quarter of an inch long, rather flat, and of a brown color flecked with lighter patches. It gained the name of "death-watch," according to Prof. H. Maxwell-Lefroy, writing in London Tit-Bits, because of its habit of tapping on the wood, and superstitious people believe that the noise is a sign of impending death.

In the silence of the night these taps ring out with surprising clearness; but they have nothing to do with death. They simply mean that one beetle is trying to get into communication with another, and it does this by standing on its legs and beating its head on the wood. The taps are sent with a certain rhythm and the answer comes from another beetle in the same form. One beetle can hear another as far away as forty or fifty feet.

This insect is destroying the timber roofs of cathedrals, churches, halls, and other old buildings. The wood is tunnelled through until it is like a sponge, ultimately becoming a soft mass of dust and fibre.

The destruction is not caused by the beetle itself, but by its young form, the grub or worm. Just as a butterfly or moth is developed from a caterpillar, so the Death Watch Beetle develops from a soft white grub, which lives deep in the wood and feeds upon it. This tiny insect hatches from an egg laid in the wood by the beetle, and eats its way into the beam.

Old oak is so hard that good tools are needed to work it; but this insect eats steadily through it. How does it accomplish this remarkable feat?

It certainly has jaws like a pair of pincers, but these would be useless without considerable force behind them. The grub acquires the necessary force by bracing its body against the sides of the tunnel it has made. Then it compresses its body, grips the sides of the tunnel with its many hard projecting studs, and applies a powerful pressure to the jaws, which are able to bite into the hard wood.

It spends all its life in darkness, and feeds for nearly three years before it has grown to its full size and is ready to become a beetle, at which time it tunnels toward the surface, but not quite to the outside, and becomes a chrysalis. The grub has a sense which enables it to tunnel for great distances and yet never come near the outside.

Eventually, after it has eaten wood for nearly three years, it tunnels toward the surface until only an eighth of an inch from the outside. There it stops and changes to a chrysalis, a helpless, sleeping form which eventually becomes a beetle.

The Production of Jet

JET has been used for ornamental purposes since prehistoric times. According to Pliny, the name is derived from a river or town in Lycia called Gagas, hence the term "gagates," which has been gradually shortened to "jet." Buttons, rings, amulets and other jet ornaments have been found in barrows of the bronze age in England.

Jet seems to have been formed by the metamorphosis of wood. Minute examination discloses woody structure, and the general structure of coniferous wood. When rubbed it acquires a static charge and draws particles toward it; from this property it has probably acquired the name "black amber." It ignites readily.

The value of the total annual world production of jet is estimated at only $20,000.

Why the EXTERNAL EAR Is NECESSARY

THE external ear, the shell of skin-covered cartilage at either side of the head, is commonly called the ear. The real hearing apparatus, however, is the delicate internal part hidden away safely within a bony niche in the skull. In this part is the ear-drum or tympanum which is set vibrating like the diaphragm of a telephone transmitter when sound waves fall upon it. Through other delicate parts the vibrations are transmitted to sensitive nerve-end organs. These in turn set up impulses in the nerves which when transmitted to the brain give rise to the sensation of sound.

Anatomists explain that while not concerned with actual hearing the external ear plays an important role and is an essential part of the organ of hearing; it catches and concentrates sound waves and conducts them to the inner ear, somewhat the same as the aerial of a wireless receiving set catches the pulsation in the ether. It also aids in keeping the ear-drum properly stretched.

The external ears of the hare, the deer and other more or less timid of the hunted animals point backward, while those of the canine and feline tribes as well as other carnivorous hunters point forward. Scientists believe that man's ears were originally movable like those of the lower animals and could be turned to catch warning sounds from different directions. As civilization advanced and as man's safety depended less and less on his sense of hearing the ear muscles gradually atrophied until at last the ability to move the outer ears was practically lost. In a few individuals these muscles are sufficiently well-developed to enable them to move their ears readily.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT WEATHER

By HARRY B. HUNT.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Remarkable weather, this spring, isn't it? Very unusual! Like to know what's causing it? Well—

"The temperature of the earth depends upon the heat we receive from the sun," says Dr. Charles Greeley Abbot, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and director of the Astrophysical Observatory.

"For several years the sun's heat had not fluctuated much until November, 1921, when the solar values began to decrease. In October, 1923, the values reached a level three per cent. lower than before the decrease commenced. Since then they have continued on this low level. Since the earth's temperature, rainfall and other phenomena depend upon the sun's heat, one would expect that so marked a change would be apt to be reflected in the weather conditions."

That Freak Weather.

"How about it?" I asked Dr. Charles F. Marvin, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, citing Dr. Abbott's observations. "Is the sun cooling off? Is that responsible for this freak weather?"

Marvin grinned and came back with a question of his own:

"Is the weather due to the apparent variation in solar radiation, or is the seeming variation in solar radiation due to the weather?"

"You tell me; you're the weather man," I continued.

"Well," Marvin continued, drawing from his desk a bunch of intricate graphs and charts. "I am not yet ready to accept the theory of variation in solar radiation as a basis for weather forecasting. Measuring the sun's heat is a very difficult task. Many atmospheric conditions, clouds, dust, etc., tend to disturb the accuracy of the measurements. But look at these charts—running back over many years. They indicate that as the methods for measuring solar radiation have improved, and as better equipment and better stations for observation have been obtained, the apparent variability of the sun's heat has diminished.

"That might indicate that the variation recorded was not due to any change in the heat of the sun itself, but to errors in measurement and to the influences of atmospheric conditions affecting the intensity of the rays as they reach the earth's surface.

Effect of Eruption.

"Following the eruption of Katami in the Aleutian Islands a few years ago, the variation is apparent solar radiation was so great that readings finally were discontinued. Volcanic dust mounted high into the air—far above the level to which apy moisture ascends. Observations taken by the Smithsonian Institution in Algeria showed the presence of the volcanic dust even there—half way round the earth. This volcanic dust sometimes remains in the upper atmosphere for two or three years, and, of course, is an element in affecting the passage of the sun's rays.

"Maybe there is a real and actual variation in the heat of the sun. Maybe that is influencing the weather. I'm open minded. But I am certain that a good part of the apparent variation is atmospheric and earthly. In other words, while a change in solar radiation may be affecting the weather, I'm quite sure the weather contributes to the seeming change in solar radiation!"

"Well," we suggested, "how about sunspots? Maybe they're to blame for the weather. Maybe they'll give us another year like 1816, when there were frosts all summer."

"Ah-h-h!" said Marvin, apparently scenting another unpopular weather bugaboo. "Sunspots!

"Well, in 1816—which is known as the year without a summer—we were in a period of maximum sunspots. The old sun was pretty well spotted that year. Therefore, many have said, the cold summer.

"This year we are in a period of sunspot minimum. If we say the sunspot maximum in 1816 caused the cold of that year, and now say this year's cold is due to a sunspot minimum, we are attributing exactly the same result to exactly opposite causes.

Long-Distance Forecasts.

"My advice to the public—particularly to farmers and others whose activities are directly affected by the weather—is, don't worry. The sun isn't going to grow cold on us right away. Neither are its spots or lack of spots likely to affect us seriously."

"Is it to be a hot or cold summer," I asked.

"No one knows, and there is no way to tell," Dr. Marvin replied.

"But," I asked, "can't you give a definite forecast?"

"Such a forecast is impossible," he said. "There is positively no basis on which to make long-distance forecasts, covering a year or even a season. It can't be done."

The cause of the cold weather? Well, as I sum up the conversation, eliminating the variation in solar radiation and the effect of sunspots and such, the only answer that seems to remain, as Dr. Marvin said, is:

"The weather depends on the weather!"

HEART PALPITATED And Was Short of Breath

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some little excitement, over work or worry starts it to palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time and then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

will give prompt and permanent relief. Mrs. Alice Bishop, 15 Hawthorne Ave., Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I take great pleasure in recommending Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills to all persons troubled as I had been.

I suffered from palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath; my heart would skip beats, and in the night, at times, I would have to sit up to get my breath. I could not go up stairs without my heart fluttering, and my nerves were all unstrung, but since using your famous Pills I have felt like a different person."

PRICE OF "FAGS" SAME

No Change to Consumer as Result of Removal of Excise Duty.

TORONTO, May 19.—Cigarette prices will not be affected by the removal of the excise duty that was added last year. One of the biggest manufacturing and distributing firms said that the increase of 1½ per cent. in the general sales tax practically offset the reduction of from $7.50 to $6 in the excise duty.

"We sell a certain brand of cigarettes to retailers for $15 per thousand," said one of the company's officials, "and they dispose of them at 35 cents for twenty, or 20 cents for ten. When the the excise was added last year the price of the small packet was raised from 18 to 20 cents. We have heard nothing from Montreal yet, except a wire to carry on at present prices, but I don't think there will be any change when they have fully considered the situation.

Duty on Raw Leaf

We are absorbing a 6 per cent." duty on the raw leaf now. The 1½ per cent. increased sales tax will apply to boxes, labels, etc., that are included in our costs, so that we do not benefit from the reduction."

This official mentioned that a competitor had recently introduced a ten-cent cigarette on the market, but with the present duties he could not understand how it could be done. The various duties alone amounted to $8.25 per thousand.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

Father Dominic had approached the gateman and in his gentle old voice had inquired the price of admittance. It was two dollars and fifty cents! Scandalous! He was about to beat the gatekeeper down; surely the management had special rates for prelates——

A hand fell on his shoulder and Don Miguel Jose Maria Frederico Noriaga Farrel was gazing down at him with beaming eyes.

"Perhaps, Father Dominic," he suggested in Spanish and employing the old-fashioned courtly tone of the hacienda, "you will permit me the great honor of entertaining you." And he dropped a ten-dollar bill in the cash box and ushered the four San Gregorianos through the turn-stile.

"My son, my son," murmured Father Dominic. "What means this unaccustomed dress? One would think you dwelt in the City of Mexico. You are unshaven—you resemble a loafer in the cantinas. That sombrero is, perhaps, fit for a bandit like Pancho Villa, but, my son, you are an American gentleman. Your beloved grandfather and your equally beloved father never assumed the dress of our people——"

"Hush! I'm a wild and wooly Mexican sport for a day, padre. Say nothing and bid the others be silent and make no comment. Come with me to the grandstand, all of you, and look at the races. Panchito will not appear until the fifth race."

Father Dominic bent upon Brother Anthony! a glance which had the effect of propelling the brother out of earshot, whereupon the old friar took his young friend by the arm and lifted his seamed, sweet old face toward him with all the insouciance of a child.

"Miguel," he whispered, "I'm in the throes of temptation. I told you of a thousand dollars which the Senora Parker, in a moment of that great-heartedness which distinguishes her (what a triumph, could I but baptize her in our faith!) forced Senor Parker to present to me. I contemplate using it toward the needed repairs to the roof of our Mission. These repairs will cost at least three thousand dollars, and the devil has whispered to me——"

"Say no more about it, but bet the money," said Miguel. "Be a sport, Father Dominic, for the opportunity will never occur again. Before the sun shall set this day, your one thousand will have grown to ten. Even if Panchito should lose, I will guarantee you the return of your money."

Father Dominic trembled. "Ah, my son, I feel like a little old devil," he quavered, but—he protested no more. When Don Mike settled him in a seat in the grand-stand, Father Dominic whispered wistfully, "God will not hold this worldliness against me, Miguel. I feel I am here on His business, for is not Panchito running for a new roof for our beloved Mission? I will pray for victory."

"Now you are demonstrating your sound common sense,' Don Mike assured him. His right hand closed over the roll of bills Father Dominic surreptitiously slipped him. Scarcely had he transferred the Restoration Fund to his trousers' pocket when Brother Anthony nudged him and slipped a tiny roll into Don Miguel's left hand, accompanying the secret transfer with a wink that was almost a sermon.

"What news, Don Miguel?" Pablo ventured presently.

"We will win, Pablo."

"Valgame dios! I will wager my fortune on Panchito. Here it is, Don Miguel—one hundred and eighty dollars. I know not the ways of these Gringo races, but if the stakeholder be an honest man and known personally to you, I will be your debtor forever if you will graciously consent to attend to this detail for me."

"With pleasure, Pablo."

Carolina drew her soiled little tobacco bag from her bosom, bit the string in two and handed bag and contents to her master, who nodded and thrust it in his pocket.

Two tiers up and directly in back of Don Miguel and his guests, two men glanced meaningly at each other.

"Did you twig that?" one of them whispered. "That crazy Greaser is a local favorite, wherever he comes from. Those two monks and that cholo and his squaw are giving him every dollar they possess to bet on this quarter horse entered in a long race, and I'll bet five thousand dollars he'll drop it into that machine, little realizing that every dollar he bets on his horse here will depress the odds proportionately."

"It's a shame, Joe, to see all that good money dropping into the maw of those Pari Mutuel sharks. Joe, we ought to be kicked if we allow it."

"Can you speak Spanish?"

"Not a word."

"Well, let's get an interpreter. That Tia Juana policeman yonder will do."

"All right, I'll split the pot with you, old timer."

Directly after the first race a Mexican policeman touched Farrel on the arm. "Your pardon, senor," he murmured politely, "but two American gentlemen have asked me to convey to you a message of importance. Will the senor be good enough to step down to the betting ring with me?"

(To Be Continued).

INDIAN RIVER

had a boiling place. "This is when the "taffy bee" would be held, when the boys and girls would have a feast of the warm sugar, with all hands joining in the favorite song. "O! boys, it was great to hear those boys and girls sing that song; "The Battle of Waterloo. How those beautifull girls did make the woods rattle. At those girls covered with the best of cloth made by their dear old mothers warm socks, boots made by the shoemaker, no cork heels in those days, no bare necks or knee skirts.—Then for a change a pack of wolves would start howling in some far part of the bush, but we paid no attention to it, —quite used to such things."

"Go back seventy years, "says Mr. Walker, and crime was a thing unheard of, or nearly so. No such a thing as murder or roguery, no lawsuits or trouble between neighbors, all friendly one towards another. Today the country is full of such criminals from the herring pond to the Pacific ocean, so I say if the men of the Gospel do not do more for the bettermen of the human race, two thirds will be took. By the way writers talk they are too mild with their flocks. It was not so in my young life. They were taught the difference between right and wrong. When the men of the gospel hear of any of their flock doing wrong, they should go to that person with a stern look and give him Hell. It is better to get Hell in this world than in the next one. The minister may lose a hand or a few roasted eggs by so doing, but it is worth a chunk of ahm or a lot of roasted eggs to save a man from Hell.

A little sermon on the desirability of being respectful to the old people, "see how they toiled to clear a home for you and all the trouble they had to bring you up a respectful person," is joined to an admonition to rest one day in seven.

"In days of old before transport came and the drovers had to drive their flocks to the sea-board; they would be longer on the way, no sooner was it tried than it was found out they got sooner there by resting one day in seven; the manufactures of salt were told if they let their kettles cool off one day in seven they would have a lot of repairs. That was found all wrong. It was found that the pots lasted longer with one days' rest. Manufacturers of cloth say the goods made by their mem on Monday is better than that made on Saturday. If all this true that the dumb brute and the dead machinery call out for one days' rest in seven, why will men not do so?"

Mr. Walker asserts that in his working life of sixty-three years, he has been told only twice that he did not know how to do a day's work, and that he can do a days work with any man. When he went on his fifth trip to Ottawa they sent a man from the House of Parliament buildings to show "me the great industries of the city. They said I would get run over for the want of my hearing. They were very kind. They showed me a lot of the big industries, the most beautiful lot of polished machinery I ever saw in my life."

"I have been fourteen summers in the fruit business and sold more fruit than any other man in East Peterboro. I have gone as high as 500 baskets of eleven quarts each in a season. I got the name of being the best fruit man in East Peterboro. I am thankful to the woman that bought the fruit from me. They used me good and paid me in honest manner."

Mr. Walker, who concludes with a wish that all the younger generation "will live as long as I have and spend their lives in a better way," says that he never was sick in the course of his seventy four years of life, and was always able to do a day's work. I have a lot to be thankful for, for good health is one of the greatest blessings man ever had.

J. D. Rockfeller would give me a million for my good old stomach, and Morgan would give me another for my sound old heart. Here I be, quite happy, with lots to eat, lots of clothes, lots of good wood in the yard and $250 put away to pay my funeral expenses. You say I am going out of this world cheap. My funeral will be an old time one, such funerals as their were seventy years ago. No style for me. My grandfather was buried in a $5 box and taken to the grave in a waggon. He was ten times a better man than I ever was. What did God say to him, "Well done, old Pete," (that was his name, "come in and have a rest."

"I be thankful, "he says," that I enjoy good health. It seems a long time since I was a wee boy playing around. My good old mother fed me good of the best of good Scotch mother's milk. It made my bones good and strong. No such thing as a rubber hose with a nipple on one end and a milk-tank on the far end in those days. The mother of seventy years ago would scorn such a way of feeding a baby. I be darned sure I never sucked my dinner through a rubber hose."

THE BLUEBIRD

By G. E. VAN LOON

If there is a perfect bird, it is surely the blue-bird; for he is a bird of beautiful colors, a bird of examplary habits and a bird of delightful song. What more can one wish? John Burroughs was an ardent lover of the blue-bird and expressed this admiration in many of his essays. In his first volume we hear him say: "When nature made the blue-bird she wished to propitiate both the sky and the earth, so she gave him the color of the one on his back and the hue of the other on his breast or ordained that his appearance in the spring should denote that the strife and war between these two elements was at an end. He means the furrow and he means the warmth; he means all the soft wooing influences of the spring on the one hand, and the retreating footsteps of the winter on the other."

No doubt some of our love for the blue-bird is due to the fact that he is one of the first to appear after the breaking of winter. He is a harbinger of better days: he is the warden who unlocks our icy cell; he is the wandering minstrel who inspires us to new efforts.

Early in March he comes to us from the south, perhaps from Alabama or Georgia. How pleased we are to see and hear him again! No doubt he is as pleased to see us! How voluble he is! How mellow and sweet is his song, yet there always seems to be a bit of melancholy in it, a yearning, a longing for the impossible. At a distance it seems to be a spirit voice here, there, elsewhere. Last year in early March three or four of them spent the day with me and for that one day, at least, the air seemed vibrant with their "trualy, trualy trualy."

How fine it would be to hold the exquisite beauty and melody of the blue-bird with us all through his season, but where sparrows are, he cannot tarry. They will drive him away every time if they can. And generally succeed. So we rear our blue-bird houses in vain! He is too gentle for these gangsters.

Where conditions are favorable he builds in a tree-hole and rears a brood of four to six, in the meanwhile doing us an inestimable service in destroying great numbers of caterpillars, cutworms, injurious beetles, grasshoppers and other insect foes.

I know of no pleasanter task than that of watching the domestic doings of a family of blue-birds; from the first pale blue eggs in the feather-linesd cavity to the day when the youngsters leave the nest, all is a picture to delight and even though the male carries his duties lightly and "shifts his light load of song, from post to post along the cherless fence," we are perfectly willing to forgive him.

Eight weeks' employment for 1,000 men was recently provided by the "spring-clean" of the Aquitania.

Why Not Go to Church?

Few persons think things through If everybody reasoned this matter of church-going to its logical conclusion there would not be many vacant pews, and a widespread demand for more churches would speedily arise.

The reason is simple: People do not stay away from church because they are opposed to religion or to the church. Far from it. If its existence was threatened, the great mass of the people would fight for it.

But by some curious kink in their mental processes, many non-church-goers fail to perceive that if everybody else followed their example and every honest person grants others the right to do as he does—the churches would quickly pass out of existence.

Every non-attendant upon religious services virtually votes for the elimination of the institution from society.

If a person believes that the world needs the church, he has but one clear, unmistakable and unanswerable way of stating his position. That is by regular church attendance. The man who goes to church stands for an indispensable institution, even as a good citizen stands for the state by voting.

Absenteeism from the ballot-box and absenteeism from church are kindred failures in duty to society.

Of course, that is not the best reason for church attendance. We go to church primarily to express our belief in God and to do Him reverence. The loftiest truth about man is that he is made in the image of the Divine, and has capacity for fellowship with the Infinite.

Worship is the highest function of which human nature is capable. The world does not know much about creeds but when it sees a person attending divine worship it understands him to say by his action, "I believe in God."

Thoughtful persons stand for the church also because the church stands for the best things. The church-goer lines up with the forces which make for righteousness. He is on the side of te people who want to live the noblest lives themselves, and who are trying to help this needy world to do the same.

The most efficient agency of human service on earth is the Christian church. The churchman is a sharer in all the world-wide beneficence of the organization.

They who would make their lives count should be counted among those upon whom the church may count. Therefore, go to church tomorrow.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

BLESSING THE INFANT.

We are so wedded to the habit that it is hard sometimes to introduce even one new thought in the dressing of babies that will be accepted. Mothers are so used to the pictures of babies with cunning diapers, fastened with three solid looking safety pins; with long clothed; with swathed legs that one has difficulty convincing them that there are newer and better ways of doing even these time honored things.

There are diapers to be bought which need no pins for fastening because they can be tied securely and firmly with tapes. We use a short garment on the baby from the very first not because of the greater freedom to his legs and because he outgrows the long ones so quickly that before the mother has had time to turn around she has to begin sewing again making short dresses for her active little offspring. By making the first clothes 22 or 23 inches long by the time the baby is ready for short dresses the first dresses are the right size.

We have eliminated the pinning blanket from the modern babies' wardrobe. A good size diaper can be used for the first month or so to put around baby's legs and keep off unsuspected draughts but most mothers in modern homes find that if the baby is dressed in fewer garments and the rooms are the right temperature and he is not handled very much that he has no use for a clumsy pinning blanket.

We should never be so hidebound by habits of thought that we cannot recogaize that new ways may be much better than old ways. This is true in the matter of layets and just because a thing was good enough for our mother's children need not stamp it as being the "only" thing for us.

SAYS CHANGING STYLES MENACE JEWELRY TRADE

CHICAGO, May 19.—(Associated Press).—An attempt will be made by American jewelers this summer to dictate the jewelry styles of the future, according to F. J. Coffey, of Newark, N.J., who was recently chosen president of the National Jewelry Association.

"Jewelry styles have no authoritative source,' said Mr. Coffey. "They are largely accidental.' A reigning Parisian actress whose ears are not pretty hides them with her hair; the feminine world buries its ears under a new coiffure, and long pendant earrings are the vogue.

"A man of fashion wears a jade stickpin to match a new scarf and everybody effects jade stickpins. The accidental discovery of an old pharaoh's tomb set going a craze for Egyptian jewelry. When this old king, from his throne of 3,500 years ago, can dictate jewelry styles for America it is time for jewelers to take concerted action to regulate styles which too long have been dominated by caprice and accident."

President Coffey was empowered by the National association to appoint a styles committee to report at the convention at Attleboro, Mass., next summer.

"The rapidity with which jewelry styles change," continued Mr. Coffey "has become an important problem to jewelers. Following some fad of the moment, a jeweler lays in a stock of jewelry which is rendered almost unsalable by a new fad that appeals to popular taste. These swift changes entail an enormous loss to the jewelry business."

PAIN AFTER EATING

Proof That the Stomach is Weak and Needs Toning Up.

Generally speaking, a person in good health can digest most foods. If not, and there is pain after eating, the stomach has lost tone and is too weak to do its work. In that case your stomach needs strengthening and the way to do this is to build up your blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There cannot be good digestion without a sufficient supply of good red blood, and there is nothing better than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to renew and enrich the blood. That is why they have proved so successful in thousands of cases of indigestion. Mr. D. J. Shaw, Selkirk Road, P.E.I., has proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a severe case of indigestion and relates his experience for the benefit of other sufferers. He says: "I suffered from indigestion for a number of years. My case was so bad that words fail to describe it. My appetite was gone, constipation was present, and my nerves were all on edge. I could not sleep well at night, and the world was a dark spot to me. I tried a number of remedies, but without any benefit. Then Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended, but without much faith, after so many failures, I decided to try them. After taking three boxes I noticed a change for the better. Then I got three boxes more, and found I had a genuine remedy. I continued the treatment, took moderate exercise, could take good plain food without suffering as formerly, and proved that these pills make good blood, and that this good blood will restore the stomach and nerves. Anyone suffering from stomach or nerve troubles will make no mistake in giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Late Planting of Garden Vegetables.

(From Experimental Farm.)

A great many of our vegetables requiring a comparatively short season for development are raised and used only once during the season in the average kitchen garden. Experience has shown that a succession of these crops is both possible and practical, and, although the early vegetables may be in a measure replaced by the later maturing sorts, they are, nevertheless, appreciated if available during the entire season. Spinach is as acceptable during August and September as in June; crisp fresh lettuce will make just as good a salad in autumn as in the early summer; green peas are a favorite dish at any time of the year; and late garden beets and carrots always seem to come in at the right time.

By correct arrangement and choice of the right varieties, such vegetables may be made to follow each other, thus making the garden more productive and eliminating the vacant spaces. Late cabbage may be transplanted into the vacant spaces left by early peas; spinach will follow raddish or lettuce; and peas will successfully follow any of the earliest vegetables.

On the Dominion Experimental Station at Lennoxville it has been found that the most satisfactory varieties for late planting, and the latest dates at which they may be successfully planted, are as follows:

Spinach, Victoria—August 5th.

Raddish, French Breakfast—August 5th.

Lettuce, Grand Rapids—July 15th.

Garden beet, Detroit Dark Red—July 15th.

Garden carrot, Chantenay—July 5th.

Pea, Thos. Laxton—July 5th.

Cabbage, Copenhagen Market — June 20th.

Cauliflower, Early Snowball — June 20th.

In all late sowings the seed requires a deeper covering than if sown in the spring. During the summer months the surface of the soil is often quite hot and usually too dry to permit of germination. Seed planted shallow will, therefore, germinate poorly, and any seedlings that may get started will usually die during the first dry spell as a result of the young roots not being able to reach moisture. Accordingly the depth at which the seed should be placed is governed by the depth at which moist soil may be found. This will usually be from one to two inches.

The back seats of a movie are usually the coolest, but sometimes you find Z row as hot as H.

No man is as bad as he looks before breakfast.

BUILDING CONDITIONS ARE FAR FROM IDEAL

Bricklayers, Plasterers, Stonemasons, House Painters and Carpenters, Say Arts Are Being Lost—No Apprentices.

By F. H. DOBBIN

All over the country we find discussions coming along in the papers as to the dearth of mechanics, those who find or gain a living in the building trades. And learned are the reasons advanced. The whole situation has been analyzed by industrial sharps, who sit at desks and try to prove this and that, and discover reasons; to be further added to such already advanced as to why a situation as we now find has arisen. In Peterborough only eleven bricklayers, about the same number of plasterers, a few more of carpenters and only a very small force of stone masons. And the industrial sharps asks why, if there be a scarcity at times, more men are not learning and qualifying in these and the kindred trades? For it is quite clear that the apprenticeship system, so far as training new men to take the places of those who leave the city or pass away, has broken down. Not only down but it is pulverized.

So some personal enquiry was made amongst the men who should know, viz. those now following the occupations.

For if such men cannot put a finger, so to speak, on the impelling cause then no one can. To give to his impressions, our friend, a working bricklayer, (and a very good one at that), backed up against the wall of the Royal Bank building and let himself loose on the situation. His words are here printed pretty much as he uttered them.

"Bricklaying, in this section of Ontario at any rate, is a seasonal occupation. The winter knocks us out. Laying brick in freezing weather is slow work, necessarily so. With a pair of mittens on his hands a man cannot "sense" the feel of the brick and he is hindered. Let alone the other parts of his body that are cold and uncomfortable during a snow storm and in zero, or below zero weather. So men proposing to build are scared off by the fear of increased costs. Of course in the case of a factory building it can be passed along to the public inthe overhead, but in a house or home that cannot be done nearly so readily. So there is little work offered.

"I, for instance, have not done a scrap of work since end of last October, until I built a chimney couple of weeks ago. I've had five months of idleness, with nothing coming in. If I had'nt something laid by, I'd starve. But five months being idle eats up all that I've saved during the summer. Such conditions are likely to be the rule, always, for we can't change the climate.

"You ask as to how many apprentices we have, learning the bricklaying? I think there is one, who is working, when work is to be had, with his father. Not more than one a year would be the average. Do you really think, speaking as man to man, that I should bring up my boy to a trade that will let him work only seven months in the year. The thing is absurd. And all other men think the same and the boys realize the fact for themselves. No, he's got to go at something that will give him a chance at steady work. We have thirteen bricklayers now in the city and only a few are occupied. The cry is that the trade wage of $1.00 per hour is extortionate, but is it? If you'll give me steady work for ten months in the year I'll work for 65cts. per hour. Its the blamed out-of-work spells that cut down a man's earnings. Other building trades can speak for themselves. Go and ask them."

A plasterer had the same story. Want of continuity, (he took more words to explain the situation) was what was the matter. Long periods of unemployment disheartened a workman. What the building trades desired in the way of work, was not the spasmodic erection of a factory or two or some public building, but, if at all possible, a continuous erection of homes and houses, same as we had in Peterborough in 1884 to 1898. In those days the local papers, once each year, printed a building list, and the list told of the erection of from three to four hundred houses each year. All that is gone. He knew of only one apprentice to the plastering trade. As for men leaving the city, what else could they do than go where work was to be found. Their families were here as yet, but might follow if deemed prudent so to do.

A stone mason said that his work was fast becoming a lost art. Very few entirely stone foundations were now built. Stone, for one thing, was getting scarcer, where thirty years ago farmers were glad to have the fields and fence corners rid of stone heaps.

The house painter had his tale of woe. It was true, as was mentioned, that all the houses built in the past were there to be painted and garnished, inside and outside. But he said, that the ready-mixed paint business had played hob with the laying on of colors, if not of laying-on of hands. Any man could get a can of paint and a brush and make some shift to apply. Often, with no knowledge of paint, preparation and results were almost futile. But if it pleased the owner, who would kick.

He said he had engaged a youth to teach him the painting business, including the mysteries of mixing paints, house decoration, etc., The youth had no experience at all. Paid him 40cts. an hour to get him and hold him as an apprentice. In five weeks another painter coaxed the youth away at 50cts. the hour. And then an outside man came along and picked the boy up at 60 cts. an hour and took him out of town. There will be no more student situations with that employing painter after this.

The carpenters are not so badly off, for the trade has many ramifications, from real house building to near-carpentering. Very many fewer wholly wooden houses are being built, which cuts down the opportunity for work in this trade. In the days of the clapboarded house, the hammer was heard all over the town. Now it is muffled, or hammering inside the building. Repair and replacement work finds jobs for many. Changes and alterations account for considerable work, but the same dearth of apprentices is evident. How is this to be remedied, that we may have building mechanics for the future?

The rule of free trade says to bring in anything that you can buy or get cheaper than you can make it yourself. Which means that we should be content to have come to us the skilled worker from England or Scotland, and hitch up with our economic system. But those now in the trades protest that if the whole work enough now in sight, to keep those we have occupied, why bring in others to glut the market, and possibly bring down wages below what is claimed to be a fair living standard. There is little use discussing what each man calls a living wage, for there be so many standards of living, one for each individual, that no economic good might result. And, in reply, the man who is proposing to have a house built, comes back with his side of the question and flattens out a whole raft of objections. The man says, and with some assurance of truth in the facts, that between the cost of labor and the demands of the supply houses and companies in the way of materials, a fellows ambition to get a house built is paralyzed. To get an idea of this sort of thing and to see what facts would really be, a competent bricklayer was asked to supply a figure for the brick and laying in the construction of a cottage, twenty-four by thirty feet in dimensions, with a wall of thirteen feet in height. The possible owner received what he affirmed was a shock. Somebody had told him about building a house down around Keene and he anticipated that the thing, if correct, could be duplicated in this city.

It was figured that it would take 18,000 brick, (allowing for the average openings for doors and windows, and that the bricklayers bill and the brick combined would amount to $720.00. When the man had gotten the prices for the concrete foundation and the cellar floor, he began to experience cold feet. The roof, as completed, gave him further consternation, and the finishing up with the usual fixings and furnishings in the way of glass and hardware, squashed out his intentions. He said he'd postpone operations to a more convenient season. As to the plumbing, well that we affirmed was a crime. He concluded that the whole thing simmered down to a proposition as to what every one connected with the putting up of the building could get out of it. Which is logical, as most business in now conducted.

But to come back to the possibility of a revival of the apprentice form of trade tuition. Real intelligence in any trade or occupation starts in the preliminary deduction. That we have in our schools, such as the Collegiate institute. It is now well recognized, (object as thousands do to the statement,) that a boy matriculated from the Collegiate Institute very seldom takes to the learning of a trade. He should do so, and help to give us a race of mechanics who could be further on trained to take positions of responsibility. But the boy's mother thinks and says that John is too good for a mere mecehanic and must study for one of the professions, or near professions, and John, being of a mind that the best thing in life is to drive a Ford car, may or may not agree with the maternal understanding. He declines to get to a trade and takes up some in-between work or occupation and in the end becomes a stock broker, agent helper, office man or other function. It is accepted as a fact that in Ontario, today, we have too few of men who make things. Our national imports show this. But who will make. Certainly the sons of our fathers now in the land are not in the way of making.

At the Fifth Annual Conference of the Association of Canadian Building and Construction Industries, held recently in the city of Quebec, a paper was read by Mr. M. J. Pigott, (of the Pigott-Healy Constucution Company, of Hamilton, Ont.) on "The Shortage of Mechanics and the Cure", in which is outlined a system of apprenticeship which he proposed for adoption in the building and construction industry.

The paper included a very informative report in regard to employment, unemployment, the dearth of young men in taking up the prosecuting of trades for a livlihood, and an analysis of the immediate condition in Ontario so far as the building trades were concerned. Reports from authentic authorities were received, and a few extracts may be informative. In London, Ont., the apprenticeship system was practically out of vogue. In Sarnia there was only one apprentice to the building trades. In Woodstock there had not been an apprentice in the last five years. In Peterborough it was reported about twelve years since the last bricklayer and plasterer learned the trade in the city. Only one apprentice in Niagara Falls. In Sherbrooke, Que., no apprentice whatever at any of the building trades at the present time. And the comment was made that with full knowledge of the urgency, in spite of high wages beingpaid to building mechanics, the apprenticeship system was in no better condition today; that in fact it was clear that as a means of adding to the numbers of our building mechanics the present lack of system was total and absolute failure.

And the further significent conclusion was reached, that for many years the percentage of young men entering high school has been increasing. That it is found, generally speaking, the boys entering high school today are lost to us by the time they have completed their high school education and headed toward the professions. And that from amongst those who receive some form of early rtaining in the technical schools, the percentage who enter the building trades to gain a livlihood is very small.

This report, and discussion, appears in the March issue of the Labor Gazette, and should be very carefully read and considered by all interested in the future of our mechanical trades as related to building, ans also interested in the propositions to establish technical schools.

MOST PITIFUL SIGHT IN LIFE

Is a Man or Woman Who Has No "Will-Power" as a Result of Nerve Force Exhaustion.

All the physical suffering which may be caused by nervous irritability, headaches, backaches, indigestion, heart palpitation, etc., as a result of nerve force exhaustion, are nothing as compared with its awful effects upon the mind and "will power."

The most pitiful sight in life is a man or woman who has "no will"—who has noble impulses and desires but not enough "will power" to carry them through. The memory also fails, the judgment is bad and everything therefore seems to go wrong.

In such cases, do not take mere stimulating medicines nor narcotic drugs (which only further injure your delicate nervous system), but what you need is something to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains strength-giving organic iron for the blood and may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food. Over 4,000,000 people are using it annually. Satisfactory results are guaranteed to every purchaser or the manufacturer will refund your money. Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

THE HERITAGE

There is a beauty, grave and wise,
That youth has never guessed:
Nor gained from all the richest lore
With which their dreams are blest.

It is the gift the kind years bear
To those grown old who know
The legacies that grief can bring
And joys before they go.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN TO MEET

Question of Coal Supply Will Be Discussed at Convention.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 19.—(By Canadian Press)—Delegates from many parts of the Dominion will gather in this city to attend the Thirtieth Annual meeting of the National Council of Women of Canada, to be held from June 21 to 27.

Among the speakers will be Magistrate Margaret Patterson, of Toronto; Mrs. Adam Shortt, of Ottawa; Brig-General Sir W. S. Hughes, Superintendent of Canadian Penitentiaries; Professor A. B. Munro, of Dalhousie University, and other to be announced later.

The national council of women was founded in 1893 by the Marchioness of Aberdeen, whose husband, the Earl of Aberdeen, was at that time Governor-General of Canada. Nation-wide organizations federated with the national council include the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire, the Canadian Girls Guides, Young Woman's Christian Association, Canadian Women's Press Club, and several others. Miss C. E. Carmicheal, of New Glasgow, N. S., is the president of the national council.

The Medical Alumnae of the University of Toronto, which is federated with the national council, will introduce a motion at the annual meeting that the provincial governments be requested to establish by legislation the principle of "community of interest" between husband and wife, with regard to all real property acquired by them "as a result of their common labor and effort." It proposes that the husband shall have the management of the community property, but shall be restricted as to selling or mortgaging real estate, or leasing same for more than one year without the concurrence of his wife. In connection with this question, the local council of Welland, Ont., recommends that "it be made illegal for the husband to invest his earnings in mining or other stock, or attach his name to a bond for security without his wife's full knowledge and consent."

The national council of women wils consider the question of co l supply! "The distress suffered in Ontario last winter through the restriction of coal shipments from the United States," says a motion to be presented by the Local Council of Toronto, "has again demonstrated the dangers attending the province's economic dependence for fuel on that country." Continuing, the motion reads: "Ample supplies of good quality coal for heating purposes can be found in the provinces of Nova Scotia and Alberta, and by means of an efficient and cheap system of rail and water transportation it could be made available in Ontario." The motion recommends that the national council of women urge the Federal Government to investigate the whole situation and ascertain whether or not means can be devised to supply Ontario with coal from Alberta and Nova Scotia fields for heating purposes. The Government is testing the burning qualities of the Alberta coal in Toronto at present.

A motion will be presented that in, all vital statistics, such as birth certificates, census returns, etc., the Federal Government should record as Canadians all persons born in Canada of native-born or naturalized parents. The object of this motion, introduced on behalf of the Kitchener and Waterloo local councils, is to individualize the nationality of the Canadian-born.

The question of marital relations and unlicensed, unsupervised rooming houses will be brought up by the Toronto Local Council. The Toronto council will recommend that the national council of women should urge upon local councils the necessity of studying the problem in their own locality, and if possibl, making a survey of the situation, with a view to working out a plan of remedying existing conditions.

A resolution that the national council of women place itself on record as being "fervently and earnestly opposed to international disputes being settled by warfare," and that such questions should be settled by arbitration" will be presented by the local council of Portage La Prairie, Manitoba.

The Ontario women citizen's association will urge that the council approach the Federal Government, with a petition that capital punishment be abolished.

LOCAL FREE MASONS

with such exemplary veterans in the service of Masonry as Rt. Wor. Bros. Harry Rush, E. H. D. Hall, E. A. Peck and others of Peterborough, and he emphasized his contention that every Mason's ambition should be to help others, thereby aiding substantially to the good and welfare of mankind, individually and collectively. The fundamental principles of Masonry are, he said, founded on the "fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man," and the highest worship of God is the service of man. We find our greatest joy and happiness in unselfish giving and service — in what we do for others, not in that which we do for ourselves. This world to-day, he continued, needs love, sympathy, tenderness, charity and cheer; but best of all, that "service" which will be exemplified by visiting the sick, feeding the hungry and comforting the sorrowing.

Turning to the ladies, in conclusion, the speaker assured them that Masonry was far from being a selfish institution; and he ended a five minutes' merry raillery on the subject of man's hopes now that woman has her franchise, together with a man's pay for a day's work, with the warmest eulogy of mothers in general.

Not a Religion.

Grand Secretary Logan found cause for congratulating Corinthian Lodge for its marked progress, and in that during its history of 75 years he heard not a single hint of one retrograde step. Not pretending to define what Masonry is, he would, however, he said, tell the company his idea of what it is not. For instance:

Masonry is not a religion and was never intended to be one. It has no denominational splits, for long ago Masons adopted the principle of church union so far as practising in harmony and without either acrimony or differences is concerned.

Masonry is not a reformatory. We don't pretend to take in a morally bad man in the hope of making a good man of him. Such is contrary to our precepts.

Neither is Masonry a benevolent institution, public opinion to the contrary. But we do an immense amount of charitable work without advertising the fact, and in one year spent a quarter of a million dollars in charity, placing the money where it would do the most good.

Then Masonry is not a secret society, and in England is excluded from the list of organizations for secret activities. A Mason's chief concern is to apply Masonic principles in his home, his business, his social relations and in his civic affiliation—that he may use the instrument of Masonry given him to make all men better citizens, not only in the little community in which they live, but of the great world in general.

District Deputy Grand Master W. G. Groves, of Lindsay, in a few brief remarks suitable to the event, congratulated Corinthian Lodge on its exemplary personnel, composed of representative men of Peterborough city.

O, Canada

The toast to Canada was appropriately proposed by Wor. Bro. Dr. M. A. Morrison, who briefly sketched this country's many resources and emphasized the great responsibility rested in Canadians to take advantage of this great Dominion's natural wealth in the interests of not only Canada but of the great empire of which she forms an integral part.

In response Dr. R. G. Blagrave said Canadians, to develop into that great nation which is their ambition must cultivate intensive work and that advanced education which consists of a broader vision and wider sympathy to the exclusion of provincialism. Canada, he asserted, has all the opportunities for greatness, but Canadians must apply themselves to their development and strive to aspire to the finer things. In this respect masonary by its brotherhood is contributing to broadening its members' sympathy and extending their vision.

Absent Brethren

This toast was proposed by Wor. Bro. R. H. Kenner, whose masterly address, replete with pathos touched many responsive chords. Of those Corinthian members who had gone to that land from which no traveller returns, he referred in touching terms to Bros Major George W. Bennett, Sapper George E. Revell and Lance Corporal Harry Fagg all of whom had offered up their lives on the altar of sacrifice in defence of home and country in the great world-war In a humorous moment referring to former members of the lodge now in distant localities, he felt confident that some this night would direct their thoughts to Peterborough with its "bridge of sighs."

Other Toasts

The toast to the ladies was proposed by Wor. Bro. R. B. Grobb and responded to by Wor. Bro. F. D. Kerr —and both gentlemen were in an exceedingly jocular, mood quite contagious.

The Lodge of our Fathers toast found acceptable response from Wor Bro F. L. Roy, Master of the Corinthian lodge, Wor. Bro. E. A. Peck, Wor. Bro. Harry Rush and others.

Splendid Music

The whole programe was interspersed by solo numbers from Bro. Frank Oldfield and instrumental contributions by Miss Edwina Palmer, violinist.

Mr. B. Chenhall's clever piano accompaniment left nothing to be desired.

It is needless to say that the entertainment furnished by the above well-known and highly skilled artists was thoroughly in harmony with the premier grade of the unquestionably excelling function and enthusiastically appreciated.

being the Salvation Army, which has other remedial work in the case of adult cases to fully occupy its resources.

The old Shelter was never in any way suitable. Made up of a hillside house, with additions all of wood, it was both inconvenient to work in, and a positive danger at a time of fire. That the late fire fully proved. By the kind concurrence of the City Trust the old building has been a gift in its occupancy; and for that the Society is fully grateful. The City Trust has always met any requests for improvement and repaid that was based on reasonable grounds.

It is many years since the Society commenced its work. To-day that work has grown in amount and the children committed to its care, in number, and the responsibilities much greater. In moving out of the old home (the second derelict building it has occupied, to the new and commodious premises, those who remember will acknowledge the efforts and energy and wise forethought for the future and our responsibility to the infantile charges thrown on public sympathy and help, of Mr. J. H. Burnham, the founder of the Society in this district, including the town and county. Past events have amply proved that the public attention was aroused none too soon. And from the walls of the shelter have gone forth many children, now grown to manhood and womanhood, who remember with grateful appreciation the home that sheltered and the womanly kindness from day to day that relieved and comforted.

ENGLISH PHEASANTS TO POPULATE WOODS HERE

An application was made by the Peterborough branch of the Fish and Game Association to the Fish and Game Department for pheasants to populate the woods around Peterborough.

The Association has been advised that no pheasants or prairie chicken were available, but the Minister suggested rearing English ring-necked pheasants, and several members of the Peterborough Association have decided to accept settings.

KNIFE WOUND RESULTS FROM A FRIENDLY BOUT

LINDSAY, May 19. — While engaged in what was termed a friendly bout with another youth in the village of Minden, Morgan Loucks had the misfortune to receive a knife thrust in the right arm.

The wound bled profusely, a number of small arteries and veins being severed.

Some difficulty was experienced by the physician in dressing the wound, and it is said the accident might have had a serious ending had not medical aid arrived promptly.

CAMPBELLFORD COUNCIL MEET

Advance High School Matter Another Stage—Will Open Tenders for Debentures Issue.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 19. — Meeting in joint session with the building committee of the Board of Education and T. A. Brown, who has the contract for building the new High School, the Council advanced this long-standing problem by another brief stage last night. The meeting was held in the office of Clerk McGregor and like all other special sessions was supposed to be private but so much interest was taken in the matter at issue that a number of ratepayers crowded into the room and no attempt was made to turn them out.

Reeve Anderson declared that the people who would later be required to foot the bill, were entitled to the fullest information.

The members of the Board of Education present were Chairman D. W. Douglas, Dr. Watson J. D. Lynch and J. A. Irwin. Contractor Brown stated that it would require an additional outlay of $28,894 to complete the building according to the original plans.

In the early stages of this discussion $20,000 was the extra amount asked for. At the special meeting on Tuesday night, this sum had grown to $25,000 but the figures as submitted by the contractor last night were taken as final. It will require some thing over $6,400 to put in a modern ventilation system, which is not provided for in the present contract price of $67,350. This would bring the total cost of the building up to $96, 244. The cost of the ventilation system is included in Mr. Brown's estimates.

Council Divided

After a long discussion Mayor Meyers submitted a resolution calling upon the Board of Education to officially submit to the Council the extra amount required to complete the building as given by Contractor Brown and accompany this with a formal request for the further issue of debentures for the $28,894. The Council was polled on this resolution the vote standing as ollows:

Yeas—Councillors Allan, Carter, Burke. Meiklejohn and Mayor Meyers.

Nays—Reeve Anderson, Deputy-Reeve Wilkinson, Councillors Cole and Dorie.

The Board of Education are expected to comply with this resolution by next Friday night when the Council will deal with the request at a special session.

Objects to Delay

Deputy-Reeve Wilkinson insisted that the entire question he referred to the people but Contractor Brown objected to the delay that such a step would involve.

Reeve Asks Questions

Reeve Anderson remarked that this was the first time the Board of Education had condescended to submit to the Council either the original or the revised plans or the new building. He enquired if the contract with Mr. Brown had been signed and sealed and Chairman Douglas replied in the affirmative.

Again the Reeve desired to know if the revised plans had been submitted to the Department of Education plans which made no provision for ventilation, and whether they had been sanctioned.

To this question Chairman Douglas once more answered in the affirmative. With regard to the lack of a ventilation system he explained that the plans were provisional and that the school, it was estimated, would be completed in two years.

"Then," said Reeve Anderson, "it is plain that the Council and the ratepayers have nothing over which to worry. The entire management of the school affairs of Campbellford has been taken over by the Department and the Board. The great objection to the present High School is the lack of ventilation although the building has one of the best that can be secured. Here we are about to put up a new school in which there is no ventilation whatever.

Oiling the Streets

It was decided that no streets should be oiled until first put in proper repair. It was also informally agreed that the modern system of applying the oil by steam pressure be used as it is estimated that enough can be saved on the purchase price to pay the extra cost of this method of application.

Limit for Autos: 15 Miles

Deputy-Reeve Wilkinson was instructed to procure five signs to be placed one on each of the main highways at the town limits warning autoists that the speed limit in the municipality is 15 miles an hour.

Meet Again Monday

The Council will hold another special session Monday night to open the tenders that have been received for the $68,000 High School debentures.

It has now become known that the Premier has been fighting his complaint ever since he assumed office, and it is not thought possible he can continue much longer.

Shippers Deny War Over Grain Freight.

PORT HOPE, Ont., May 19. Canadian Press. — Asked to-day regarding the report that a rate war exists between the shippers of grain and steamship owners, who are credited with demanding a rate of 7½ cents per bushel to carry wheat to Buffalo from the elevators here, the officials of the Lake Shippers' Clearance Association, said they had no information that would bear out the report. They said that there may be such a rate war but they had not as yet heard of it. The fact remains however that in marine circles the report to be with good foundation, and seem to be borne out by the departure yesterday of two boats for Duluth, light on orders to load ore instead of loading grain here. There are only two cargoes going out today, the steamer Laketon to Port Colborne, with 123,000 bushels of wheat and the Christopher to Buffalo with 223,000 bushels of wheat. It is stated tat the Christopher is receiving 6 cents a bushel.

Y. W. C. A. ANNUAL REPORTS

GENERAL SECRETARY'S REPORT
For Year Ending April, 1923

As we pass from one year to another, from a tried to an untried year in our Associatoin life, it is as when we turn to a new page in a book we have never read before, but whose author we know and love and trust to give us on every page words of counsel and purity and strengthening virtue. This past year as we looked toward it a year ago was untried scene in many ways and so it is encouraging to look back now over the year's work and see that progress has been made in the various departments of our Association.

It is a great satisfaction this year to be able to present such a good financial statement. As a result of a bazaar last fall in charge of the ladies of the board and a generous subscription of $100 from Miss Halliday, $875.00 has been paid on the swimming Pool mortgage, while our running expenses of $21,778.17 for the year have all been met by our regular sourses of income. We acknowledge with appreciation the notification of a bequest of $1000.00 left to the Association by the late Miss Lundy.

Membership

Our membership this year is 549 which is one of the largest active membership totals in the history of the Association. The enrolment in the various classes is as follows:

Sustaining	24
Associate	63

From this you will see that alarge number of our members are enrolled in more than one branch of our Association work, and this is encouraging as our ideal is an all-round development, Physical, Intellectual, Religious and service.

House Department

Too much cannot be said in appreciation of the efforts of Mrs. Morrison and the hose committee in making our boarding home one of the very best, and also for helping the Association so well financially.

Gymnasium

This year's staff, board members and girls are very glad to have with us again Miss Littlefield, as physical director. As a token of appreciation on the part of the girls they have increased the gymnasium membership to 382, and many good times have been spent in the gymnasium throughout the year, both in class work, basketball and numerous parties. The closing of the gymasium season was marked by a most successful pageant held in the Grand Opera House. The 1,359 people who saw this branch of the work are most enthusiastic in their praise.

Swimming

Over 200 of our members enjoyed the privleges of our splendid pool, last summer under the direction of Miss Jessimane, Miss Smellie, and Miss Littlefield, and over 100 learned to swim while 19 of the pupils passed their life saving examinations. Several swimming meets were held throughout the season and a very successful closing exhibition, when prizes donated by Mrs. E. E. Harvey were presented.

Camp

Another branch of our summer activities is our Y.W.C.A. Camp, on Stony Lake, where over 100 girls last summer spent "the best holiday ever" as one of the campers said: For those who could not get away to camp severa enjoyable picnics were arranged. Through the winter reunions and skating parties have been held.

Clubs

Seven clubs with an enrolment as follows met once a week through the winter: Ever Bright, 28; Sunshine, 26; Willing Workers, 25; C.O.S., 23; Kumjoynus, 21; United, 21; Ukumtu, 12. And the Athena, meeting once a month with an enrolment of 10.

The club activities are based on the four fold standard and provided a varied programme of activities.

Physical, outings, gymnasium training games and talks.

Service—entertaining children at Christmas and providing presents, sharing in the foreign work of the Association and taking charge of the Sunday evening sing-songs.

We feel very grateful to our many volunteer workers who have assisted in many ways.

Extension

The interests of the Association are wider than its own doors and greater than its own membership. Three factories have been visited regularly at noon hours. Several teams outside of the "Y" gymnasium team entered our basketball league. The Association also has been glad at any time to assist in any branch of community, church or sunday school work, especially the Canadian Girls in Training groups and we feel that this is just one way in which as our purpose says "the Association in co-operation with the church" can heap "in the extension of the Kingdom of God."

Educationa

While our educational classes have not been very large in membership still they have much appreciated by the girls.

The home nursing class was taught by Miss Pike, and provided practical nstruction for a class of 13.

The basketery class under the direction of Miss Horsefield, met once a week until Christmas, 14 were registered in this class.

The English and arithmetic class has been taken by Miss Collinson, and the French class by Mrs. McDougal.

The Christmas gift club was a new idea and provided suggestions and help in making gifts.

Religious

The religious work committee has been a busy committee this year. The World's week of prayer was observed by a special servicce and $28.00 sent to the World's work committee of the Y.W.C.A. Two bible study classes were held during the year, the first a series of helpful studies conducted by Mrs. Langford from October to Christmas, and the second from New Years to Easter led by Dr. Meyers on the Prophets of Israel. The enrolment for these two classes totals 31 but the attance was small in comparison with our large membership. Our sunday evening sing-songs appealed to a great many the attendance ranging from 35 to 79. This year different groups and clubs have taken charge of the services. They provide the refreshments and arranged for pianist and soloists, served and helped welcome all strangers. At three of these services before Easter a short helpful talk was given. The religious work committee also made arrangements for the raising of money for the Foreign work of the Canadian Associations and $80.00 has been sent to the Dominion Council as Peterbordugh's donation toward sending a secretary this year to Japan.

Social

A camp shower and garden party was held in June, the fall rally in October and the Hallowe'en party. Numerous gymnasium parties including a party given by the board as a closing to our campaign for our gymnasium members. Clubs and gymnasium parties at Christmas when Santa Claus paid several visits, St. Patricks, Velentine, Easter and closing parties, bazaar in November, which provided a social time for all who came. A sleigh drive for all members Open house on New Years when a very pleasant afternoon and evening was spent by the largest gathering we have ever had on a New Year's Day.

Is our building used? An estimate average in 1960, came into our building each month for regular class or club activities, with a fair aggregate of 1080 for meeting, information, or to read. This is not counting the house girls and their friends or the numerous telephone calls. Our building is used each month by the business girl's club, local council of Otonabee Chapter, and W.C.T.U., and by numerous organizations for special meetings. Our employment bureau has had 85 calls and our Library an exchange of over 3000 books.

True happiness consists in forgetting what one gives and remembering what one receives, so we as an association are very happy in remembering the many tokens of appreciation from the girls. In remembering the good friends of the association who have responded so willingly to any calls we have made upon them, to those who have helped us financially, to the Dominion Council which links up all our associations an gives much assistance, to the kind interest and encouragement of members of the board and committees and the hearty co-operation of the house superintendant, physical Director and assistant secretaries and above all we remember with thanks our Heavenly Father who has permitted us to be instruments in His Hands for the carrying on of a little part of His Work. We look forward to the next year confident that as we turn the pages day by day we will be given wisdom and guidance and help for the coming year.

Respectfully submitted,
Leta H. Brownscombe,
General Secretary.

GYMNASIUM REPORT
1922-1923

It is a very true saying that "Health is Wealth". Good health and a good physique constitutes the foundation for all life work.

It is the aim of our physical department to provide for all girls and women exercise and recreation that tends towards ideals of physical mental and spiritual development. Unconsciously almost the gym. girls developes. Soon appears increased buoyancy to the footstep. The improved circulation sends a glow to the cheek and an added sparkle to the eye. The widened well-held chest means more oxygen, better blood and less dangerous appearing shoulders blades. The erect head and well poised body means greater respect for oneself and a broader outlook of life. In fact the entire personality of the girl is changed through carefully directed physical training..

In September 1922 many preparations were made in connection with the coming gymnasium season. The board of education was approached about the possibility of having the senior girls of the piblic schools attend special gymnasium classes. Mr. Kenner principal of the Collegiate also interviewed regarding the above proposition. Special posters giving outline of the gymnasium classes were allowed to be placed in public schools and collegiate.

The fall rally at which various members of the gymnasium assisted, commenced the gym. term, and October was indeed a very busy month, the gym. classes began to fill rapidly and during the mild weather Saturday afternoon hikes were thoroughly enjoyed by both pupils and director.

Special junior and senior refreshment and entertainment committees were organized to arrange and finance for all the numerous parties to be held through out the season. The Hallowe'en parties for both juniors and seniors were a great success. Total attandance being 500 people. The Autumn Fete and Bazaar proved a great attraction in November. our gym. girls being particularly interessted in the May Pole Booth which was under their supervision. Interpretive dances were also given by the seniors.

Many factories were visited and managers interviewed in December regarding the entry of teams from the various places of industry in the the girls' city basketball league. Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., kindly donated a beautiful silver trophy for the winners of the League, and Mrs. Harvey also donated a silver cup for the L.O.B.A. team, and a second trophy for the league.

Our Christmas parties were thoroughly enjoyed by both young and old, also the spirit of giving was apparent by the juniors bringing gifts for the orphaus of the city

The Y. W. C.A. is greatly indebted to Dr. Grier who held Medical examinations for the gymnasium classes.

During the month of January the executive and physical committee enaugurated a big gymnasium campaign, which took the form of a contest between the Reds and Blues, with captains, lieutenants and leaders. At the close of the campaign, the participants were entertained by the ladies of the board, and special prizes wer presented to the winning sides. Our seventy new pupils were registered during the campaign.

The basketball season of February and March proved very exciting to both the players and spectators, 36 matches were played and four out of town games during the season. The winners of the various trophies were: The Normal School team—The Gordon Cup. C.G.E., team—The Harvey Cup. L.O.B.A., team of Peterborough—The Harvey Trophie.

The St. Patrick parties of the ladies class and juniors were well attended by over 300 people.

And now we come to our final activity in the gym. season which though the last is not by any means the least; the big gym. pageant. During March special committees were formed, a joint sewing committee who undertook the heavy burden of making 350 costumes and an advertizing committee whose duty was to notify the whole population of Peterborough of the coming Pageant, and right nobly both committees succeeded in their difficult task, the costumes one and all completed, and poster bills, lantren slides, and many other novel methods of advertizing the Pageant at the Motor Show were arranged

On the 26th, and 27th, of April, our Y. W. C. A., gymnasium pageant was presented at the Grand Opera House, Thursday and Friday evening. Commencing with a grand march which brought every member of the massed classes on the stage by the way of the side entrance, and through the centre aisle of the theatre and up the centre runway to form a serpantine march led by a small tot of three from the babies class. The programme progressed through the gymnastic display of club, wand, reed, dumbell, single stick and swedish exercises to the national,folk, clas sic and interpretive dances in appropiate costumes.

A large and appreciative audience attended both performances. The financial results of the Pageant was most satisfactory totaling $765 leaving a clear profit of $440. This exhibition not only afforded a new and inspiring form of entertaining but taught the lesson of health and happiness far better than book or lecturer acould accomplish.

Club classes conducted by volunteer gymnasium leaders—60.
No. of classes conducted during season—364.
Class enrolment to date—382 pupils.
Club classes conducted by volunteer
Aggregate attendance during season —9842.
Gymnasium fees for season including pantry sale and pageant—$1354.
No. of extra classes in connection with pageant—46.

In closing I desire to express my appreciation to all members of the board and physical committee and staff secretaries for their splendid cooperation during the past season.

Respectfully submitted,
Caroline F. Littlefield,
Physical Director.

HOME DEPARTMENT REPORT
1922-1923

It is not an easy thing to write a report on the home, year after year, and not repeat. Much of that which is most interesting cannot be written. A report may be read in a few moments and yet it is only the written symbol of 365 days of work and prayer.

Our home life and activity cannot be reported as complete in itself. The year which is behind us with its closed records must be considered in relation to the whole developement of the year on which threshold we now stand. The successes and discouragements which loom up before us assume their due proportion, only, when they fall into their rightful positions of the horizon of the passing years.

This passed year with its varied experiences has brought both sunshine and shadow to many, but coupled with this, sincere and in many cases lifelong friendships have been formed, and memories of the little acts of kindnesses and unselfish services rendered each other will not soon pass away. "And whatsoever we share with another's need always come back to us in rich blessing". Any girl coming to our home finds a personal interest taken in her and she soon feels at home, and in a day or two she knows the girls at her own table and those who live on the the same floor as she; and if we save a girl from becoming lonely and homesick are we not saving her from many of the pitfalls of city life. Unfortunately there never has been such imminent dangers of the girls of today, every where, losing their way and slipping from the straight path.

Often opportunities come to advise a girl how to compete with life's struggles, then, again, to make it seem still more like home, I scold a bit.

In these days of social and economic unrest and the need of the girl, out in the world, presses itself home to the consciousness of us all.) That need is a challenge, a challenge for the best in equipment and a home filled with a cheery, friendly Christian atmosphere. This is our aim, and each summers several hundred dollars are spent in improvements. Last summer 25 bedrooms were re-decorated, kitchen and pantries painted, new furniture added and repaired, new curtains, extra wash basins installed in the bath-rooms, outside of building painted, in fact, some eleven or twelve hundred dollare were spent on the building.

Every women here knows that in such a home as this, there is always work and work to do, and with the work, we, with you have our problems to solve.

Last year we did up 1000 quarts of fruit and 500 quarts of pickles, and served approximately 70,000 meals. About 200 girls who are supporting themselves or are preparing to do so have lived for a longer or shorter time with us, and over 400 transient guests have releived comfortable and satisfactory accomodation. Our rooms and board range from $5.00 per week, to $6.75 per week, according to the location of the room, and while I do not try by any means to make our financial results my chief aim, yet at the end of the year it is gratifying to find our home results my chief aim, yet at the end of department on a solid basis, being 122 per cent. self supporting and we so jog along facing life's problems and doing each days' duty as best we can.

We have no outstanding events to write about. but we have our social evenings Hallowe'en, St Valentine, and St. Patrick days are all celebrated. The tables are decorated and the menues arranged in keeping with the days.Then on Christmas, and New Years nothing is spared to make their equal to the best. The girls birthdays are remembered by birthdays teas in the green room and in June before our business girls, teachers and students leave for summer vacation a banquet is given. To each of these the members of our board and a number of outside friends are invited in to share our pleasure.

Our home has been practically filled since September. And during the winter we had 41 cases of Flue, 39 of these were nursed in the house. But a kind providence has watched over us and kept us from fatal illness or accident.

Our doors close at 11 o'clock. Three late leaves to business girls and two to students are granted each week until 12.30. It is often surprising out of a bunch of 65 or 70 girls to find nearly all and sometimes all are in by 11o'clock. In this I think that our girls can set an example to many of their sisters outside. Any girl may remain up after 11 to finish some sewing or school work providing she does not disturb any one else.

The girls may entertain their boy friends in the house, girls parlor until 10.30 when he is given a gentle reminder to leave. We would expect Cupid to be busy where so many girls live, and each year several leave us to go to homes of their own.

The girls are always ready to contribute their share to any worthy cause. Last fall we sent a large box of useful and wearable clothing to Hailybury. And after the Salvation Army fire they added their share to the subscription fund, and the morning of the fire we made sandwiches and coffee and several of the girls served them to the fireman, which was much appreciated.

The religious life of the home is kept before the girls. We have prayers after supper, in the green room, and after breakfast sunday morning. Each girl attends the church and sunday school of her choice. A number attended the bible classes in the fall and the singsongs after church. Rev. Mr. Pogue, conducted our lenten service this year, and was assisted by Mr. Greenlaw, who sang three sacred selections, Miss Frances Nickawa while our guest entertained us for part of an evening. These were very much enjoyed and appreciated.

Our home throughout the year has been comfortable, happy and about as quiet as possible where their is a large group of light hearted, fun-loving students.

The work throughout the year with the secretaries has been congenial and pleasant.

To the house committee I would like to express my appreciation for the interest they have taken in the home, and also to all the members of the board for their kind encouragement and endorsation of the year's work.

In reviewing the work with its lights and shadows etc., successes and failures, we gratefully realize that, at least some good work has been accomplished, and so we go forward with a bright hope, a large faith and a strong determination knowing full well that underneath the faith and fear our best work and our poorest work, our difficulties, our problems, our anxieties all that we do are His everlasting arms.

Respectfully submitted,
Emma Morrison,
Superintendent.

CRIME.

The big crime wave in America and England has not been "due to the war." It would have come anyway, was headed in our direction. So says Sir Basil Thomson, late of Scotland Yard.

Thomson, after checking up police statistics in the two countries, finds that the increase in crime was less in the years 1916 to 1922 than in the period of 1910 to 1916.

REAPING.

The rise in American crime began in the '90s and increased progressively since then, according to Sir Basil Thomson, the retired genius of Scotland Yard. So the big crime wave of recent years was merely a tidal wave that had been a long time reaching us, meantime gaining momentum.

The principle holds good with nearly all our other troubles. The crops grows slowly. We contemplate the harvest and decide it materialized overnight. The seeds were planted long ago. Present conditions are the harvest of many generations, many centuries, many thousands of years of the past.

Fashion Notes

EMBROIDERED TAFLETA.

Embroidered taffeta is being featured on many spring frocks. It is particularly effective on tiered skirts, or tunic models.

VELVET AND SABLE.

A gown of white brocaded velvet has a band of sable about the hem and outlining the very short sleeves. It has a full, bouffant skirt and a close-fitting bodice.

YOUTHFUL STYLE.

Bows, large and small, are seen on the new gowns. Frequently a bow on one shoulder is matched by a sash which ties over the other hip. A large butterfly bow of taffeta or satin is frequently the only trimming on a frock.

MILLINERY.

Green hats are quite the rage of the moment. Usually they are kept in one color, though we sometimes find them embroidered in gold or silver or in peasant colorings.

FOR PALM BEACH.

Voiles and handkerchief linen frocks are embroidered in delicate colorings as well as in Paisley and oriental patterns. They are made into simple, one-piece frocks.

FOR DEBUTANTES.

Yellow taffeta is a favorite material for dancing frocks, particularly when it is combined with silver or gold ribbons.

GOOD MANNERS.

Travelling, a man is at liberty to offer aid to a woman he does not know, if it clearly is need as, for instance, in raising a refractory car window or lifting a heavy valise, pirovided no porter as available at the moment.

But—

He does not attempt a conversation or otherwise seek to establish an acquaintance.

It is the woman's part to thank him courteously, and close the incident.

OF GREEN CREPE.

A gown of Lanvin green crepe is trimmed with velvet bands in a darker shade. The skirt is bouffant and the tight basque is sleeveless.

A THOUGHT

Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you.—1 Peter 5:7.

And yet I want Him to care for me
While I live in this world where the shadows be.
When the lights die down from the path I take,
When strength is feeble and friends forsake,
When love and music that once did bless,
Have left me to silence and loneliness,
And my life-song changes to sobbing prayers,
Then my heart cries out for a God who cares.

Why Over a Million Families Now Bathe Internally

Accumulated waste in the lower intestine causes the majority of human ills. All physicians will tell you this, and that it also robs us of half our "pep" and ambition, causing headaches, biliousness, etc., even before we are ill.

Drugs never have and never can keep the intestine clean. By the use of pure warm water, administered by "J. B. L. Cascade," it is thoroughly cleansed and the poisons are kept out of the system.

You will know what it really means to feel 100 per cent. in the morning after an Internal Bath the night before—but not until then.

So say many right here in this city, who have bathed internally for years and are now correspondingly healthy, happy, strong and ambitious.

Capitol Entertainment

ENTERTAINMENT AT ST. PAUL'S

Miss Frances Nickawa, the popular young Cree Indian lady who made a very favorable impression on Peterborough audiences with her elocutionary ability, during her visit to the city some months ago, repeated her former success last evening, when she formed the main attraction at the concert given in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, under auspices of the Women's Missionary Society, attended by between seven and eight hundred people. Assisting soloists were Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, Miss Agnes Logan, Mr. R. A. Brown and Mr. M. H. Park. Mr. A. Mowat acted as chairman.

Miss Nickawa's selections were well received in every instance. She scores, however, in her Indian work, when her performance seems to gain by the Indian costumes she wears and the added fervor with which she renders readings of Indian origin. When reciting the woes or loves or triumphs of her own people, she loses some of the impassivity of countenance which is distinctly a racial characteristic, and forms one of the signs of her blood of which Miss Nickawa seems to be so proud, along with the high cheek-bones, the straight black hair and the tanned skin of the original American.

Miss Nickawa, who has a platform manner that captivates her audience instantly, and a habit of interspersing her selections with humorous anecdotes, began her programme with a "Few Bars in the Key of G," the recital of the adventures of the magic post card which brought a wild rider from Denever to Boston in record time. Dramatic emphasis, splendid enunciation and a faculty of entering whole-heartedly into the different characterizations of her varied numbers, combined with outstanding powers of mimicry, made this young girl's work at once interest-holding and powerful. "The Riders of the Plains," a Pauline Johnson composition dealing with the record of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, was very good, a fine, vigorous recital, and the "Odjista" of the same writer, delivered with all the fire and passion of the Indian wife who was captured by the "cowardly Hurons" and who killed her abductor during a wild ride, was especially effective.

In native costume of fringed buckskin, with beaded belt and feathered head-band over flowing tresses, Miss Nickawa gave this number in eloquent style, with an impassioned delivery that brought prolonged response. Applause greeted also her rendition of the selections from "Hiawatha," her flexible voice trailing over the liquid stanzas of Longfellow's immortal poem, in the merry "Hiawatha's Childhood," and the tragedy and passion in the "Famine" scene.

Her short, humorous selections, in varying dialect, which were much enjoyed, included "Leetle Bateese," a Scotch quarrel, and "Setting a Hen," a "Heinie" imitation. "An Irish Lullaby," sung in sweet, echoing tones, was followed by a darky lullaby, "Sleep, Kentucky Baby," sung by the young girl to her own accompaniment, which met with enthusiastic applause.

Mrs. Park's vocal number were an Irish song, "The Hills of Kerry," and an old English ballad, "Down Vauxhall Way," the former delivered in the singer's usual excellent style, with wistful effect in the dainty, minor intonations. The second number, a well known and popular selection, showed the singer's ability to change the manner and atmosphere of her execution, its almost strident brilliancy contrasting strongly with the soft inflections of the lower-toned Irish music.

Miss Agnes Logan's playing, always satisfies, and has the power of holding an audience. Even when occupied wiht those classical and intricate compositions which have been known to cause a yawn from the most well-bred hearers, her execution is such as to maintain the interest of an audience until the last note. One remembers when listening to her that this quality was commented on by recent noted musicians, and is probably due to the fellow quality she possesses which was also so favorably spoken of, the feeling imaprted to an audience that the music being played is not difficult after all. Difficult measures seem to flow so easily from those young, facile fingers that there is not the slightest suspicion of strain or striving after effect. Miss Logan played last evening Liszt's "Etude de Concert," music with a heavily-marked, measured bass, with rippling cascades of melody in the pauseless treble.

R. A. Brown sang in fine style last evening. With a pleasing platform manner and evident pleasure in singing, Mr. Brown has an attractive style that adds to the effectiveness of his rotund bass voice, which was particularly good in his second number, sung with much feeling and expression, "Don't You Mind the Sorrows." "Thy Sentinel Am I" was his initial offering.

Mr. M. H. Park sang in splendid fashion "The Great Awakening" and the ever-popular "Pale Moon," two well-rendered numbers that received a prompt response.

Flowers to Mrs. Park and to Miss Logan were presented by little Doris Hyde, the four-year old Toronto child who recently was chosen as Canada's most beautiful child. The small, fairy-like creature, in her white frock, recited a tiny "piece" that brought down the house, and was presented in turn with a pretty bouquet by small Harry Marsh.

At the conclusion of the programme, Mr. Mowat expressed the thanks of the audience to Miss Nickawa and assisting artists.

Mr. L. Unitt played accompaniments throughout last evening, with the exception of Mr. Brown's second song, which was accompanied by Miss Logan.

STORIES OF GREAT HUMORISTS

SOME OF A. WARD'S ILL-SPELLED HUMOR

ARTEMUS WARD began his career as a "printer's devil" in the office of a little Maine weekly, "The Skowhegan Clarion." At the age of fifteen he migrated to Boston to take a job as printer in the office of "The Carpet-Bag." In the columns of that weekly appeared his first humorous article, a description of a fourth of July celebration in Skowhegan. "The Carpet-Bag" did not hold him long, and, being of a roving disposition, he travelled as a journeyman printer over much of New York and Massachusetts. It was while he was working in the Toledo "Commercial" that his paragraphs first began to attract attention. In 1858, when he was twenty-four years of age, he was offered a position as local reporter on the staff of the Cleveland "Plain Dealer" at the munificent salary of twelve dollars per week. It was while on the staff of this paper that he conceived the idea of writing letters to the editor from a supposed showman and signing them Artemus Ward, a name once borne by an American revolutionary general.

* * *

We find in the first letter signed by Artemus Ward that peculiar spelling which was a characteristic of his writing for some years. It was, of course, to be expected that a travelling showman would be illiterate. "My show at present," says Artemus in his first letter to the editor of "The Plain Dealer "consists of three moral Bares, a Kangaroo (a amoozin little rascal—t'would make you larf yerself to deth to see the little cuss jump up and squeal), wax figures of G. Washington, Gen. Tayler, John Bunyan, Capt. Kidd and Dr. Webster in the act of Killing Dr. Parkman, besides several miscellanyus moral wax statoots of celebrated piruts & murderers, &c., ekalled by few & exceld by none. Now Mr. Editor scratch orf a few lines saying how is the show bizniss down to your place. I shall have my handbills dun at your offiss. Depend upon it. I want you should git my hanbills up in flamin stile. Also git up a tremenjus excitement in yr. paper "bowt my onparaleld Show. We must fetch the public sumhow. We must work on their feelins. Cum the moral on 'em strong."

Like the good journalist he was, Artemus was quick to seize upon the topics of the day In 1861, when the Prince of Wales (Edward VII.) visited Canada, Ward wrote an amusing sketch in which he pretended that he had been travelling with his show through Canada and had met the Prince "on the Pizarro of the hotel in Sarnia" After describing his difficulties n getting past "the millingtery," especially a British "Kurnal, he retails his conversation with Albert Edward. He winds up his sketch in the following genial way:

"The time hevin arove fur me to take my departer I rose up & sed: 'Albert Edward, I must go, but previs to doing so I will desarve that you soot me. Yure a good feller, Albert Edard, and tho I'm agin Princes as a gineral thing, I must say I like the cut of your Gib. When you git to be King try and be as good a man as yure muther has been! Be just & be jeuerus, espeshully to showmen, who hav al'ers bin aboozed sins the the dase o' Noah, who was the fust man to go into the Menagery bizness & ef the dai'y papers of his time air to be beleeved Noah's collecksbun living beests beet enything ever seen sins, tho I make bold to dowt I his snaiks was ahead of mine. Albert Edard, adoo!" I tuk his hand which he shook warmly, and giving him a perpetooal free pars to my show, & also parses to take hum for the Queen & old Albert, I put on up hat and walkt away.

"'Mrs. Ward,' I soliloquizes, as I walkt along, 'Mrs. Ward, of you could see your husband now, just as he prowdly emerjis from the presunts of the futur King of Ingland, you'd be sorry you called him beest jest becaws he cum home tired 1 nite and wanted to go to bed without takin orf his boots. You'd be sorry for trying to deprive yure husband of the priceliss Boon of liberty, Betsy Jane!"

In a mock-epistle to the Prince of Wales, whom he addresses as "Friend Wales," occurs one of the best-known passages in Artemus Ward's writings. It was written during the Civil War at the time Lincoln had resorted to conscription to keep up the strength of the Northern army. This is Ward's droll hit at the shirkers of that day.—"Yes, Sir, we've got a war, and the troo Patrit has to make sacrifisses, you bet.

"I have already given two cousins to the war, & I stand ready to sacrifiss my wife's brother ruther'n not see the rebelyin krusht. And if wuss cums to wuss I'll shed ev'ry drop of blud my able-bodied relations has got to proskoot the war. I think sumbody oughter be prosekooted, & it may as well be the war as any body else. When I git a goakin fit into me it's no use to try to spot."

In those days conscription was termed "the draft." Says Artemus in another sketch on this theme, "If I'm drafted I shall resign. Deeply grateful for the onexpected honor thus confered upon me I shall feel compeld to resign the position in favor of sum more worthy person. Modesty is what ails me. That's what kept me under.

"I mean ter say, I shall have to resign if I'm drafted everywhere I've been inrold. I must now, furrinstums, be inrold in upards of 200 different towns. If I'd like on travellin I should hav eventooaly becum a Brigade, in which case I could have held a meetin' and elected myself Bridsageer-gineral quite unanimiss. I hadn't no idea there was so many of me before. But serisly, I concluded to stop exhibtin,' and made tracks for Baldinsville."

HAS COMMUNISM FAILED IN RUSSIA?

Party Leaders Answer the Question By Saying It Has Never Had a Trial There.

By JOHN GRAUDENZ

MOSCOW (By mail to United Press).—"Has the Communistic experiment in Russia been a success or a failure?"

This question is perhaps the leading one asked both inside and outside Russia. Many outside persons answer "failure" without hesitation.

I have asked the question to dozens of leading communists and to hundreds of workmen.

The answer, given in detail by communistic thinkers and workers alike, may be summed up as this:

"There is not a communist in Russia who believes that there has been a communistic experiment in Russia."

This statement is explained as follows: There existed in Russia during a certain period a so-called war—communism, in the sense of a centralism. It was a relative centralism with regards to consumption, but not with regard to production. This was impossible because all attention was then concentrated in the liquidation of the civil war and the foreign interventions. In other words, there was rationing but no control of production.

In the year 1917 and 1918 the Bolshevists believed that Marx's prophecy (the world revolution) was near its fulfilment. No other outcome was expected of the world war.

"When, however, through concessions made the workmen by the capitalistic countries and assisted by the compromising policy of the social democracy of all countries, the outbreak of the world revolution was postponed," as one leading communist termed it, the Bolsheviki changed their tactics towards the outside world, and, consequently, also internally.

"The world revolution will not come from the civilized West, but from the enslaved, awakening East," Lenin declared in a recent article.

Theoretically explained, the New Economic Policy of Russia is not an evolution of Bolshevism, but merely a tactical move. The final goal is still "Communism or Socialism."

Special Sunday evenings "for lovers," at which the men were allowed to smoke, were a recent experiment in a movie house at Sutton, England.

The Good-Night Angel

The good-night angel comes at eve
Across the quiet hills,
And tucks the sleepy blossoms in Beside the meadow rills.
On uplands wide each drowsy bird
He cradles in its nest,
And in the dewy valley far
Rocks the wild winds to rest,

He pauses in his gracious guise
Where little children play,
And blesses each before he speeds
Upon his kindly way.
And ere he passes back to heaven
Beyond the sunset bars,
To watch the babies, birds and buds,
For lamps he lights the stars.

People

People are better than we fancy, and have more in them than we fancy; and if they do not show that they have, it is three times out of four our own fault. Instead of esteeming them better than ourselves, and asking their advice, and calling out their experience, we are too often in such a hurry to show them that we are better than they, and to thrust our advice upon them, that we give them no encouragement to speak, often no time to speak; and so they are silent and think the more, and remain shut up in themselves, and often pass for stupider people than they are. Because we will not begin by doing justice to our neighbors, we prevent them doing justice to themselves.—Charles Kingsley.

Loving Word and Act

With your hand on the door to go;
But it takes the venom out of the sting
Of a thoughtless word or a cruel fling
That you made an hour ago.

A kiss of greeting is sweet and rare
After the toil of the day,
And it smoothes the furrows ploughed by care,
The lines on your forehead you once called fair,
In the years that have flown away.

'Tis a little thing to say, "You are kind;
I love you, my dear," each night;
But it sends a thrill through the heart, I find,
For love is tender, as love is blind—
As we climb life's urged height.

We starve each other for love's caress;
We take, but we do not give;
It seems so easy some soul to bless,
But we dole the love grudgingly, less and less,
Till 'tis bitter and hard to live.

—Andrew Lang.

LIFE IS FULL OF EXCITEMENT TO DORIS HYDE

Canada's Most Beautiful Child Has Had Succession of Triumphs Since Her Selection.

VISITS PETERBORO

Canada's most beautiful child, acclaimed such by a committee of judges, who picked her as the winner from some eight thousand photographs of beautiful Canadian children submitted on the occasion of a recent competition, is fond of playing with other little girls, and she just loves colored crayons. Her interest in the completion of the yellow horse with the green legs in her colored picture book interfered to a certain extent at first with a real good view by a visitor of the little thing, who is small for her age, just four on the last 5th of February, and whose airy weight corresponds to the smallness and delicacy of the little body, with its prettily-formed little hands and feet. A later full view revealed a child face of doll-like beauty, with large blue eyes under curved brows, cheeks of wild rose pink and a red baby mouth, and quantities of curling, light brown hair. Is the miniature which Joshua Smith, the English artist, resident in Toronto, painted for the child's mother, a replica of the one which went to England for the Queen's doll house, the little thing is pictured with golden hair.

When the Princess Marie Louise decided to present Queen Mary with a doll's house a luxurious affair fitted up in the most gorgeous manner, she asked different English notables to contribute something towards its beautification. Joshua Smith decided to send a miniature painting of Canada's most beautiful child as his gift, and accordingly instituted the competition which resulted in the selection of Doris Elizabeth Hyde, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Hyde of Toronto, for the honor. The miniature possessed by Mrs Hyde is about three by five inches in diameter, and is about four times as large as the one painted for the doll's house, framed in whole pearls by Ryrie Brothers of Toronto. Companion miniatures in the dolls' house are pictures of Queen Alexandra, Princess Louise and King Edward.

But Doris Elizabeth Hyde, now visiting her aunt Mrs. F. L. Robinson, at 225 Charlotte street, is just a little tired of all the adulation she has been receiving. When interviewed yesterday, she had nothing to say about her fame, and was busily engaged in spanking one of her dolls for some misdemeanor. This was one of the Doris Elizabeth dolls which have been named after the little thing, their papier mache heads moulded in the shape of hers, their curly heads arranged after the fashion which cuts her own in a straight bang across the forehead, their rose frocks copies of one of her own small garments. The Doris Elizabeth chocolates are another new product named after the little lady.

Her life since the success of her picture in the competition was published has evidently been a very full one, filled with gifts and social affairs In Toronto, she appears at all manner of events coming home in the wee small hours after triumphant receptions at banquets and bazaars. At the King Edward Hotel one evening, she led the grand march which opened the evening's fun. Moving pictures of her were taken for a News Weekly, and a Toronto film company has just completed a two-reel feature, entitled "Doris in Fairy land," which is soon to be released. At the Hippodrome in Toronto, she appeared for a whole week in person stepping out from a huge rose for a short interval.

Since Doris Elizabeth went into the 'movies', she has developed a fondness for make-up, so her mother says. The little think likes to use rouge and powder on her small face and she delights in manicuring her own small finger-nails. She is perfectly happy when she is all dressed up. But still, she is a normal child, and looked quite contented in her sky blue romper, sitting on the floor and coloring the 'horsey' in her aunt's house yesterday afternoon. Although she has never been seriously ill in her life, she has her ups and downs just as well as other children, for Doris Elizabeth must have her tonsils taken out pretty soon. She will appear at the Canadian National Exhibition in the coming fall season.

Yesterday, she went to the Kiwanis luncheon, and stood up on the table to blow kisses to her audience Last evening, at St. Paul's Presbyterian church, she presented the bouquets given the assisting artists, and said a little "piece" all by herself, looking like a little fairy in her white frock. Mr. A. Mowat, in the chair, gave her an especially nice little compliment, which in all probability, wasn't appreciated by the small lady herself, when he looked down at her and remarked that "a thing of beauty is a joy forever."

Doris is the only girl in her family She has one small brother two-year-old Bertram, Junior, ("Sonny").

LET US BE KIND

Let us be kind!
The way is long and lonely,
And human hearts are asking for this blessing only,
That we be kind.
We cannot know the grief that men may borrow,
We cannot see the souls stormswept by sorrow,
But love can shine upon the way today, tomorrow—
Let us be kind!

Let us be kind!
This is a wealth that has no measure,
This is of heaven and earth the highest treasure—
Let us be kind!
A tender word, a smile of love in meeting,
A song of hope and victory to those retreating,
A glimpse of God and brotherhood while life is fleeting—
Let us be kind!

Let us be kind!
Around the world the tears of time are falling,
And for the loved and lost these human hearts are calling—
Let us be kind!
To age and youth let gracious words be spoken;
Upon the wheel of pain so many weary lives are broken.
We live in vain who give no tender token—
Let us be kind!

Let us be kind!
The sunset tints will soon be in the west;
Too late the flowers are laid then on the quiet breast—
Let us be kind!
And when the angel guides have sought and found us,
Their hands shall link the broken ties of earth that bound us,
And heaven and home shall brighten all around us—
Let us be kind! —Selected.

AUTHOR REVEALS SECRET FOR HAPPY MARRIAGES

What is the secret of happiness in marriage?

Some say a comfortable home, other congenial relationship between husband and wife.

Charles G. Norris, author of "Brass," the novel adapted for the screen, thinks neither of the above accounts wholly for happy marriages.

"The secret lies," he believes, "in the struggle for it. No marriage was ever made happy without a distinct effort on the part of both husband and wife to make it so. Married happiness, if short, is not an accident, not a gift of the gods—it is a structure which two build."

That is why the married couple in "Brass" go to wreck and ruin, plunging into tragedies and unhappiness. Philip Baldwin and his wife Marjorie cease striving for mutual happiness after a while, the wife finding it in cabarets with boon companions, the husband with his friends. Before they know what's what, they are divorced.

Monte Blue has the featured part as Philip, while Marie Prevost is Marjorie. Others in the cast are Harry Myers, Vera Lewis, Irene Rich, Frank Keenan, Miss DuPont Margaret Seddon, Helen Ferguson, Edward Jobson, Harvey Clark, Cyril Chaddwick, Pat O'Malley, Gertrude Bennett and Ethel Grey Terry.

"Brass" is a Warner Brothers' classic of the screen, directed by Sidney Franklin, and will be shown three days, beginning Monday at the Capitol Theatre, as the feature attraction.

British Golfers Are Leading--Toronto Won--Other Sport News

BRITISH TRIM U. S. GOLFERS

Took Three of the First Four Games Played Yesterday in the Walker Cup Contest.

ST. ANDREW'S, Scotland, May 19 (Canadian Press). — The United States was two down to Great Britain, with eight to go, at the conclusion of play yesterday in the golf tournament for the Walker Cup.

Of four two-ball foursomes played yesterday, Great Britain won three of them. Until late yesterday afternoon, it seemed certain that each team would win two foursomes, but suddenly S. Lavison Herron, with a lead of six up and only 12 holes to go, began playing like a beginner, and threw away the match, and E. W. E. Holderness and W. L. Hope won on the home green before a gallery of four thousand.

To tie the British team for the trophy, the United States golfers today must win five of eight singles matches. They need six victories to win. A tie will enable the men from overseas to retain the cup won at Southampton a year ago.

Robert Gardner, captain, and Maxwell R. Marston alone of all the United States team, triumphed yesterday. Their task was to beat Robert Harris and C. V. L. Hooman, and they found it easy. Neither Harris nor Hooman seemed able to take the shortest route between tees or cups, or once they arrived on the greens, to make the ball drop into the tin without tapping it an immoderate number of times.

The Englishmen lost by 7 and 6.

Great Britain's new champion, Roger Wethered, was the bright light of the first day's play. Paired with Cyril Tolley, he aided in crushing the United States amateur champion, Jess Sweetser, and his partner, Francis Ouimet.

Tolley and Ouimet played with fine steadiness and coolness, and Wethered with a brilliance befitting a champion.

But Sweetser's was a load about Ouimet's neck. He sparkled one moment, only to sink into mediocrisy the next. Twice he even made the awful blunder of lifting his head, both times to see the usual result—a weak, short shot.

Sweetser and Ouimet were four down at the end of the morning round, and went five down on the first hole in the afternoon play, where Wethered sank a 30-footer for a birdie three.

The Britishers finished the fight at the thirteenth, where Wethered got another birdie, sinking a 15-foot putt, which ended matters with a score of 6 and 5.

GIANTS SHUT OUT ON HOME DIAMOND

Bentley Lost His Third Game in Four Starts — Toporcer Made a Freak Home Run.

NEW YORK, May 19.— (Canadian Press.)— Cincinnati evened its series with New York here yesterday, Luque, the Cuban, shutting out the world's champions, 7 to 0. It was the first shutout suffered by the Giants this season. Bentley, New York's $65,000 pitcher, lost his third game in four starts. Score:

Pittsburgh 4, Boston 2.

BOSTON, May 19. — (Canadian Press.) — Pitcher Charles "Babe" Adams of Pittsburgh, celebrated his thirty-first birthday by defeating Boston 4 to 3 yesterday. With two out in the ninth, Gooch singled, S. Adams ran for him, and reached third on a single by Barnhart, who pinch-hit for C. Adams. A clean double steal tied the score and Maranville's single to left scored Barnhart with the winning run.

Chicago 10, Philadelphia 7.

PHILADELPHIA, May 19. — (Canadian Press.)—A home run by Hartnett with two on base broke a deadlock with the Phillies yesterday and gave Chicago the second victory of the series, 10 to 7. Hollocher and Kelleher also made circuit drives. Seven pitchers were on the mound for the two teams before the game ended. Score:

BROOKLYN, May 19.— (Canadian Press.)—Toporcer's freak home run that bounded into an alleyway at the end of the right field stand in the sixth inning, after Flack had walked, cinched the game for St. Louis by 3 to 1, and gave St. Louis two straight in the series. Score:

FIGHTERS PREPARE FOR TITLE BATTLE

Jimmy Wilde in New York to Meet Pancho Villa Says He is in Shape Right Now.

NEW YORK, May 19 (Canadian Press). — Jimmy Wilde, of Cardiff, Wales, world champion flyweight boxer, arrived yesterday on the Aquitania to prepare for a title match with Pancho Villa, of the Philippines, at the Polo Grounds on 16th June.

Accompanying the Welshman were his wife, his trainer, Benjamin Williams, and his friend and personal adviser, Ted Hughes.

Wilde appears in excellent shape. He stood on a scale, proving his weight of 113 pounds, and disproving recent reports that he was too fat to get into shape for a flyweight contest. He said he had been training for three months.

"I am on a fighting edge right now," Wilde said, "but I suppose the fellows over here will call me an old man. I was 31 years old on 12th May. However, I heard by radio that Jess Willard, at more than 40, knocked out Floyd Johnson. Well, I'll not worry for a few more years to come."

Wilde's last fight was in London in January, 1921, when he was knocked out by Pete Herman, of New Orleans, former world's bantamweight champion.

John Patrick Kilbane, king of the world featherweights, was another arrival yesterday. Kilpane came from his home in Cleveland to prepare for his title match at the Polo Grounds on 2nd June with Eugene Criqui, of France, holder of the European featherweight title.

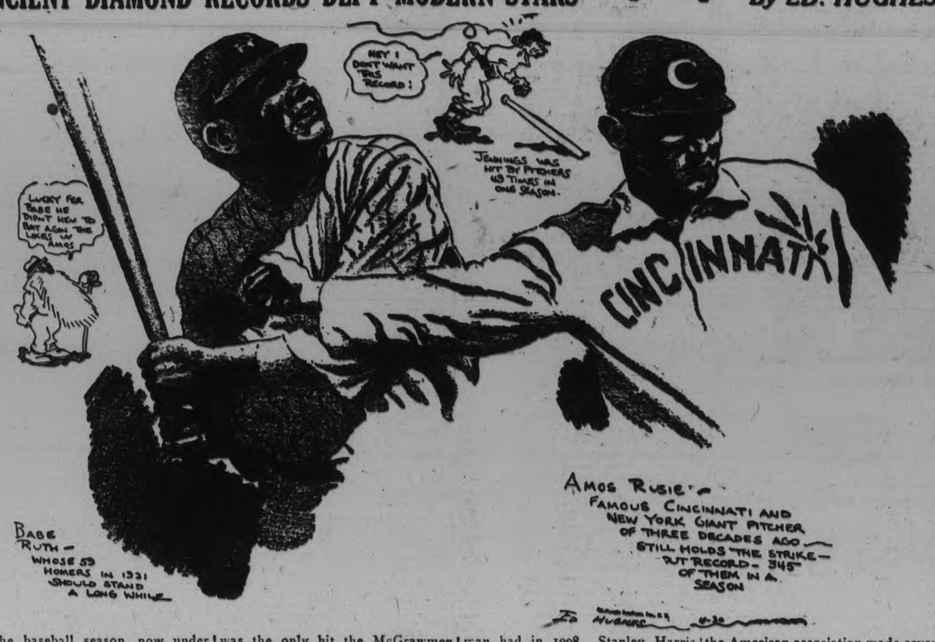
ANCIENT DIAMOND RECORDS DEFY MODERN STARS - - By ED. HUGHES



The baseball season, now under way, promises to furnish keen pennant races in both the National and American Leagues. Such being the case, it is quite possible that new records will be established in the manifold departments which comprise the great outdoor pastime.

The hard luck—or should it be termed "dumb luck?"—record undoubtedly belongs to Bill Doak, the Cardinal pitcher. Twice last season Doak missed pitching a "no-hit" game by his own blunders. In a game against the Phillies had he covered first while Fournier was handling Walker's hit Doak would have emblazoned his name in the "no-hit" hall of fame. But Bill neglected to do so. In another game against the Giants Doak was caught flat-footed by Bancroft's bunt. It was the only hit the McGrawmen made of Doak that day. In 1920 Doak was featured in another "failure to cover first" tragedy, which would have earned him a no-hit victory. Had the unfortunate Doak accepted these three simple fielding chances he would today be in class by himself as a "no-hit" pitcher.

Babe Ruth's home-run record of fifty-nine for a single season, made two years ago, is likely to stand. Babe may break it himself, or Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals may turn the trick. Hornsby poleu out forty-two circuit hits last year.

Frank Parkinson, Philly second-baseman, broke old Napoleon Lajoie's records for assist last year. Parkinson accepted 562, twenty-four more than the great Frenchman had in 1908. Stanley Harris of the Senators broke another record at second which has stood for nineteen years. He had 479 put-outs, two more than made by Jimmy Williams back in 1903.

George Gibson's astonishing consecutive catching games made in 1909 still stands. Gibson went behind the bat for a full game 140 times without a break. Ray Schalk has an average of 132 games for ten years. Schalk is an iron man, but he has yet to equal Gibson's record for consecutive games.

Hamilton of the ancient Philadelphia Nationals of 1894 still holds the record for the most runs made in a season. The old-timer spiked the rubber 196 times. The American league record hung up by Ruth two years ago is 177.

Hecker of the Louisville team of the American association made seven runs in one game in 1866. The mark still stands. Altizer of the Washington Americans, is the nearest to it with five scored in 1906. Hecker's record has now stood thirty-eight years, three longer than did the famous home run record of Ed Williamson broken by Babe Ruth in 1919 with twenty-nine homers. Williamson's total of twenty-seven was made in the season of 1884, thus totaling thirty-five years before the Bambino arrived to shatter it.

George Sisler missed by three games Willie Keeler's record for hitting safely in consecutive games. Sisler went forty-one games before being stopped. "Wee Willie's" mark was forty-four, and was made in 1897.

Questions

ONE—If the pitcher in the act of delivering the ball to the batsman, accidentally strikes his leg and the ball drops to the ground, how is it regarded?

TWO—Manager substitutes a southpaw for right-handed pitcher, with a left-handed batter up. After the pitcher gets two strikes on the batter the manager sends in a right-handed hitter. Can the manager of the team in the field then change pitchers is he so desires?

THREE—Outfielder in making a play on a runner at third hits umpire with the ball, deflecting it into foul territory. Runner tries to score and is thrown out at the plate. What about it?

FOUR—Is it necessary for the team in the field to make an appeal to have the umpire call a balk?

FIVE—In trying to get a runner at second the catcher's arm comes into contact with the umpire as he starts his throw, the ball going wild and the runner reaching third. What is the correct decision?

Answers

ONE—The fact that it is an accident is given no consideration. Such a play is ruled a balk.

TWO—A batsman can be removed at any time, but when a pitcher is sent into the games he must pitch until a batsman has either been retired or reaches first.

THREE—The ball is in play in this case, in fact, is always in play when the umpire is actually hit by a thrown ball.

FOUR—It is not necessary to make an appeal in order to have the umpire call a balk. It is up to the umpire to render an immediate decision when he believes the pitcher has so offended.

FIVE—If the umpire back of the plate interferes with the catcher in making a play the ball becomes dead and the runners' are sent back to their original bases.

AEROPLANE JOINS HUNT FOR ROGERS

Pursuing Force Augmented—$500 Reward Dead or Alive.

NORTH BAY, May 19.—(Canadian Press.)—Leo Rogers is still at large, but following on the tragic developments of yesterday, when the escaped prisoner shot and killed one of his pursuers and seriously wounded another, the pursuing force has been augmented until now there are thirteen provincial constables and a big force of volunteer citizens scouring the thickly wooded country between North Bay and the town of Corbeil. A reward of $500 has been offered by the town council for the capture of the fugitive dead or alive. Rogers is believed to be making for Ottawa.

An aeroplane has been sent to North Bay to aid the Ontario provincial police hunt for Leo Rogers. The plane is on of the Laurentian Air Service planes being used by the Ontario government in protection and survey work in Northern Ontario.

At seven o'clock this morning Leo Rogers was still at large. Police, both local and provincial, assisted by many citizen volunteers, continued their pursuit early to-day, according to information brought in from the scene of yesterday's sensational shooting.

SAW BALD-HEADED EAGLE.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson of Belleville when recently driving a car in the vicinity of O'Brien's bridge which spans the river Moira at Thrasher's Corners when he observed a large bird fly across the river and alight on the opposite side of the river. Mr. Ketcheson had an excellent view of the bird which proved to be a largebald-headed eagle, and it held within its claws a good sized fish. Upon being observed the bird arose and flew up the river in a norther direction. This specimen of birds is rather scarce in this country.

AIRPLANE HALTS FELONS.

DAMASCUS, Syria, May 19.—(Associated Press)—A modern drama was enacted recently on the ancient road from Damascus to Bagdad.

The authorities in Damascus were informed that a motor car laden with gold, to be smuggled out of the country, was speeding along the road toward Badgad. A quarter of an hour later an airplane, fitted with a machine gun, left the aerodrome and it was not long before the car was sighted. Shots from the machine gun were fired, as a warning, whereupon the car stopped and passengers and driver hid among the rocks.

They were held up by the airplane, which covered them with the machine gun, until the motor cars of the customs officials and police arrived and gathered them in.

124 TIMES A BRIDESMAID

BESSEMER, Mich., May 19.—(Associated Press)—Miss MacFarlane of Bessemer has been a bridesmaid 184 times, but doesn't worry in the least, she says, about the old superstition that "twice a bridesmaid and you never marry." For Miss McFarlane is young and pretty.

Eager to wed and frequently overlooking many important details, young couples arrive at the court here with the license and the ring, but without witnesses.

Desiring a bridesmaid, the judge invariably sends down for Miss MacFarlane, a deputy county clerk, and she's never been known to fail.

PITCHER IS SIGNED BY TORONTO LEAFS

Doyle, Late of California, Will Report Next Week —Will Fill a Big Gap.

Pitcher Doyle, late of the Vernon, Cal., club, recently declared a free agent by Commissioner Judge Landis, has accepted the terms offered him by the Toronto club and will report at once. The Brooklyn National League was a bidder for his services and it was feared for a few days that Toronto might not succeed in landing this much needed addition to the teaching staff. However a wire accepting Toronto's offer was received by President Soiman yesterday morning.

His Record.

Doyle is a seasoned pitcher in the Class A. Coast League and last year won 20 games and lost 15, his team finishing second in the race.

He worked in 53 games as follows:

A.B.	H.	R.	B.B.	S.O.	H.B.
1,154	309	138	88	91	7

His average in wins and losses was .571, and the average of runs per game against him was 3.08. He stood 10th on the league's list of pitcher's.

The world's population at the beginning of the nineteenth century was estimated at 700 millions. Now it is put at approximately 1660 millions, having more than doubled in 120 years.

DETROIT, Mich, May 19.—(Canadian Press.)—Howard Ehmke, former Tiger, came back to Detroit, tamed his former team-mates, 6 to 2, in 10 innings; stopped George Dauss' run of six consecutive victories, and wound up a busy afternoon with an argument with Manager Cobb of Detroit under the grandstand. The Ehmke-Cobb argument is said to have been the result of a pitched ball by Ehmke that hit Cobb. Score:

Three No-Hit Games For Rookie Hurler.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., May 19.—The majors have no monopoly on no-hit games.

A minor leaguer—hardly more than a rookie—has risen to tell 'em where to get off.

Ranney Young, star hurler of the Bloomington Three-I league club, has pushed his way into Slabdom's hall of fame along with Addie Joss, Cy Young and Charlie Robertson.

He recently twirled a perfect game against the Rockford team, at Rockford, Ill. None of the 27 batters who faced him in the nine frames reached first base.

And that's not all!

After he signed with the Bloomers last year Ranney pitched two other no-hit contests. Then ill health affected his work. But he appears to have regained his former strength and effectiveness.

Young's remarkable performance never has been duplicated by any minor league player in the national pastime's annals.

Ranney came here from James Millikin University, Decatur, Ill. He coaches baseball there now, spending as much time with the collegians as his league duties permit.

SLOW BALL HARD ON FREE SWINGERS

Ruth Slowed Up and Veach Doing Bench Duty All Blamed to Slow Ball Artists.

This is going to be a tough year on free swingers in the major leagues.

Players who take a healthy cut at the ball, a la Babe Ruth or Bobby Veach, are certain to find it a more difficult matter to get them safe.

Already Bobby Veach is doing bench duty at Detroit, presumably for inability to hit consistently. While Ruth will hardly be benched, it is a cinch he will find the pitchers much more difficult to solve this year.

The great success attained by the pitchers of the New York Giants in slowing up on Ruth has caused the American twirlers to adopt such tactics in pitching to the big fellow. Low and outside, with plenty of half speed and slow balls, is the diet that Ruth is being fed on.

Not only is this practice being employed on the veterans but recruit hitters as well. In the American League last season Goslin of the Washington club and Hauser of the Athletics made much trouble for the pitchers.

Both Goslin and Hauser are left handers, who are known as free swingers, batters who take the same healthy cut at a slow one as a fast ball. This spring the pitchers have been slowing up on both these youngsters with much success. Neither takes kindly to the slow ball or change of pace.

The lively ball has made it necessary for the pitchers to take fewer chances with the free swingers. The slowing up process seems to solve the solution.

ROADBUILDERS IN CHINA FOUND QUEER ANTIQUES

CHICAGO, May 19.—(Associated Press)—A collection of unique objects found in Chinese graves a number of years ago is now on exhibition at the Chicago Art Institute. Some of them, such as a hand turned bowl, date back 2,000 years, while others are of the Tang dynasty and still others of the Sung dynasty. The collection has been loaned to the Art Institute by a Chicago art collector.

In the collection is the model of a watch tower characteristically Chinese, filled with tiny figures apparently watching for the enemy. There is a temple jar of stoneware showing Buddha, with the devil under his feet, the sun overhead supported on a bracket, and twelve attending priests arranged about the round base. The collection also includes many finely modelled vessels of pottery, fired in such a way as to resemble bronze. There are curious candlesticks, massively designed elephants and cows, and grotesque figures of various kinds.

The collection was unearthed when the first modern steam railroad was built in China years ago. The right of way ran over one of the sacred burial places of the ancient empire. The construction gangs unearthed the venerated graves and brought to light thousands of curious and artistic objects.

TO EXTEND WELCOME.

NASHVILLE, May 19.—(Associated Press)—More than two hundred delegates from nearly every state in the country are expected here May 20, 21 and 22 when Tennessee will turn out to entertain the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution in its thirty-fourth annual congress.

The gathering will be held for the first time in the south. With large delegations virtually assured from New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky and the Pacific coast states, preparations are going forward to extend a genuine southern welcome to the visitors.

The congress will consider and discuss various patriotic questions and problems. W. K. Boardman, president of the Tennessee Chapter, will hold the chair.

Never worry about how late it is because it never is as late as it will be a little later.

MORE FUNDAMENTALS

How should one grip the club?

One can not be too dogmatic in this, for good players hold their clubs in many different ways. The overlapping grip is used by most of the stars and certainly helps the hand to co-operate better. If one does not care to overlap, he should hold the club with the fingers and should keep the hands as close together as possible. Some players who have played since childhood with improper grips do exceedingly well, but the experience of most of the stars is overwhelmingly in favor of the over-lapping finger grip, which is illustrated in almost every golf work.

In regard to the stance the tendency is to revert to the square one, and this seems to be the most logical one for the straight ball, for when the feet are parallel to the line of flight the hips and shoulders naturally are so. When the right foot is nearer the line of flight than the left, or one stands open as this is called, the tendency is to push the club out across the extended line of flight and also upwards, which is the way to produce a slice, and when the right foot is drawn back so that the left foot is nearer to the line of flight, one is inclined to swing lower and in from the line of flight, which is exaggerated will produce a pull. The right foot should be turned out slightly, as this will permit an easier pivot on the back swing, and the left foot should be turned out a little as this will allow an easier follow through. It should be remembered that the ball and club adhere for a space perhaps not greater than half an inch and an infinitesimal point of time. Do not exaggerate the after follow through, for if a rifle bullet were to sever the club head, say anywhere beyond an inch after impact, the stroke would not be affected in the least. The follow through proper is only while the club and ball are together. What is usually meant by follow through is better called the "after follow through," or the particular way each one has of relaxing after the blow has taken place. One should, of course, see that his feet are comfortable and natural. One must also be careful not to confuse novel with atritificial movements. The former with practice become comfortable and natural, but the latter seldom do, if ever.

A great deal of confusion exists about the initial movements of the golf swing. Beginners are often advised to start the back swing soley with the wrists. This is quite wrong as the pictures of the stars will illustrate. This misconception of the golf stroke results, I think, because the movements of the waggle and swing proper are confused.

Preliminary to the swing proper every good player indulges in a waggle, which, among other things, enables the player to relax his muscles. The movements of the waggle consist, in so far as the left arm is concerned, in a slight turning of the forearm at the elbow joint with no wrist movement whatever. At the same time the right hand is extended at the wrist joint. The reversing of these two movements complete the movements of the waggle.

In the swing proper, although the movements of the waggle take place, they are distributed more evenly over the whole arc. In the initial stages of the swing the left arm goes back almost straight, and there is no roll at the elbow joint as is the case in the waggle. Any player who atempts to commence the golf swing by the wrists, or by rolling or pronating the forearm, as this is sometimes called, is certainly making the game more difficult than it need be. I don't say it is impossible to play golf this way, but it cannot be gainsaid that such a procedure does not make for consistency and length. Apart from the force altogether that one is able to put in the blow with the correct method, the face of the club is kept square to the ball for a number of inches. Whereas when the wrist starts the movements, or again where the forearms are rolled, the face of the club turns away sharply from the ball, and unless the face of the club in the down swing gets square to the ball at the appropriate moment, some inaccuracy or other will result.

For amusement and the sake of brevity it is sometime useful to think of the fundamentals in three words which form a triangle, which may be called the tripod of success. The three words are: Co-ordination, which will be further amplified in the discussion of balance; Relaxation, which will be treated specifically in an article on: "Ease not Effort" and Concentration, which has more to do with the so-called mental aspect to the game and which I hope to deal with somewhat in an article on "Golf Coueism."

KENTUCKY DERBY TO FETCH WINNER $64,000 THIS YEAR

LOUISVILLE, May 18, (Associated Press.)—The forty-ninth renewal of the Kentucky Derby already has set several new records, although America's greatest race is still more than a week away. The nomineees, numbering 145, far exceed all previous totals, the nearest approach being the 109 mark of 1920. With a possible 21 starters, the race will be worth $64,000 in addition to the winner's gold plate valued at $7,500.

For the first time in its history the Derby will be run on the second Saturday of the meet, instead of the opening day. This change was decided on to avoid conflict with the Preakness, another another famous race, at Pimlico, Maryland.

As for the records which may be established by the horses themselves, indications are that one of the most evenly balanced fields in many years will face the barrier on the afternoon of May 19.

The possible $64,000 purse this year is quite a contrast with that of the first Derby, in 1875, when Aristides romped home ahead of the field to win $,2850.

Seating arrangements have been made to take care of 30,000 persons. Standing room where the Derby can be seen from terraced steps and promenaded can easily take care of 50,000. The others will have to take pot-luck from the field or roofs of adjoining stables and buildings.

The Keene Brothers' Alice Blue Gown has many followers on the strength of her two-year old record for speed aned gameness.

E. K. Bryson's Setting Sun has come into recent notice by winning the Inaugural Handicap at Bowie.

The Montfort and B. B. Jones' Derby entry this year is Dan E. O'Sullivan, black in color and one of the most striking in appearance in the history of the Derby. E. R. Bradley's Blossom Time is another filly given high rating by the experts.

Benjamin Block, owner of Morvich, the 1922 Derby winner, will try to repeat this year with Aspiration and Better Luck. Mr. Block recently purchased Aspiration by George Smith, a Derby winner, out of Inspiration.

LACROSSE

The lacrosse players will be given a chance to select their manager after the practice at Central Park on Monday evening, A big turnout is expected.

Last night's workout at Riverside Park should have been more largely attended. Only a dozen of the squad showed up, and made a profitable evening of it, but there should be a full quorum at every practice these nights.

The juvenile team will in all probability be built up around a faithful consistent group of pluggers from George Mein's Athletics of last year. These lads are sticking with lacrosse and are developing fast. They deserve every support, and if the boys from the Crescents of last year's city league turn out also the juveniles should make a good showing. There are many promising youngsters in the southend who haven't put in an appearance up town yet.

A pleasing feature of the intermediate practices is the harmony that exists. The boys are pulling together, and that's a whole lot to start with.

How's this for a defence strong Lou Lebarr, Fred Goodfellow, Johnny Ward, Taylor, Brioux and several others who could play in that field as well as on the home. There is no doubt of the sufficiency of local material, but the Lacrosse Club is confronted with a financial problem that should enlist the sympathy of old friends and well-wishers of the game.

ACTION.

Thirteen times as many burglaries now as 10 years ago. Yet Thomson, former head detective of Scotland Yard, comments: "Strange to say, although your country seems to have more violent crimes than any other, you have less than the rest of dishonest and unclean crimes. You are very violent and very clean. How do you account for that?"

The answer is not difficult: Criminals have the national traits—craving for action, playing for big stakes.

SOFT BALL

The Firemen Challenge the Utilities team to a soft ball game to be played at Central Park next week.—V. Carr, captain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Relieved Her of Headaches

Headache seems to be habitual with many people, and some, if any, are seldom free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief.

In all cases of headache the treatment should be directed to the removal of the cause, and with the cause removed the headaches will vanish.

It is impossible to find a better remedy for headaches of every description than can equal B. B. B. acting as it does on every organ of the system.

Mrs Douglas Riseborough, 280 McKenzie St., Sarnia, Ont., writes: "Having suffered from severe headaches for a considerable length of time I decided to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and found that it helped me wonderfully. It relieved the headaches, and I noticed a decided improvement in my health."

Burdock Blood Bitters is a remedy that has been on the market for the past forty-four years, so you don't experiment with some new and untried medicine. It is put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, May 19 (Special to The Examiner). — Another determined effort to break security values was made in the short session on the New York Exchange to-day. It met with some success, several new loans being recorded for the year, while Steel Common touched its old low.

Sellers did not have everything their own way, however, meeting good resistance, which induced covering and caused a substantial rally. Oils and coppers behaved well throughout the reactions, California providing the best feature, scoring a gain of about a point following a favourable earnings report. It is a long time since rumourmongers were so busy as they have been recently, which is not without significance. Commission houses received several different rumours no doubt circulated for the purpose of driving the public and traders to sell thei securities.

The opening of the market was dull and irregular. Prices for the industrial lists showed little change Steel advancing 3-8 on the opening quotation of 97 7-8, while Studebaker was off 3-8 and 110 1-2. California Petroleum responded to its good earnings statement, which showed over $7.00 a share earned on both common and preferred stocks for the first quarter. The full year's dividend started up 5-8 to 95 1-4 after the first few minutes the tape went practically dead.

Pressure was renewed shortly after the opening, the brunt of the selling orders being directed against U. S. Steel and Studebaker, the former stock selling down to 96 7-8 off 5-8 from Friday's close, while Studebaker fell away 2 1-4 points to 108 5-8, where further declines met with buying resistance.

Weakness in Studebaker is hard to explain in view of the fact that the company earned $8.00 in the first quarter, and is paying dividends at the rate of $10.00 a share.
